PROCREATION

[Genesis 1:28, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Genesis 1:28, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROCREATION, p. 960; scan anchor: djvu line 159454 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. 'The generation of children. One of the principal ends of marriage is the procreation of children.' This is the divine mandate behind procreation as marriage's end. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

PROCURATOR

[1 Corinthians 4:2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Corinthians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Moreover it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 1 Corinthians 4:2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROCURATOR, p. 960; scan anchor: djvu line 159531 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. A procurator is one who manages another's affairs by his direction — a steward. This verse states the steward's requirement: faithfulness. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PRODIGU8

[Luke 15:13, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Luke 15:13, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRODIGU8, p. 951; scan anchor: djvu line 159675 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Prodigus is the prodigal, the spendthrift whose extravagance shows inability to administer his affairs. The younger son is the archetypal prodigal — the parable's name for the legal concept. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROFANE

[Leviticus 10:10, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And that ye may put difference between holy and unholy, and between unclean and clean. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leviticus 10:10, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROFANE, p. 952; scan anchor: djvu line 159745 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Profane is 'that which has not been consecrated.' This verse draws the holy/unholy distinction itself — the boundary the legal term presupposes. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROFANITY

[Exodus 20:7, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain; for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 20:7, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROFANITY, p. 952; scan anchor: djvu line 159755 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Profanity is the irreverent or blasphemous use of God's name. This commandment is the root prohibition behind profanity law. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROHIBITED DEGREES

[Leviticus 18:6, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. None of you shall approach to any that is near of kin to him, to uncover their nakedness: I am the LORD. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. Prohibited degrees are the kinship degrees within which marriage is forbidden. Leviticus 18 is scripture's own table of prohibited degrees, opening with this verse. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROLES

[Psalm 127:3, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Psalm (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Lo, children are an heritage of the LORD: and the fruit of the womb is his reward. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Psalm 127:3, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROLES, p. 952; scan anchor: djvu line 159967 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Proles is offspring, progeny, the issue of lawful marriage. This verse names children as heritage — offspring as blessing and reward. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROLICIDE

[Exodus 20:13, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Thou shalt not kill. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 20:13, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROLICIDE, p. 952; scan anchor: djvu line 159992 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Prolicide is the destruction of the human offspring — foeticide or infanticide. The sixth commandment is the root prohibition. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROMISE

[Numbers 30:2, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. If a man vow a vow unto the LORD, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond; he shall not break his word, he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Numbers 30:2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROMISE, p. 954; scan anchor: djvu line 160060 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. A promise is a declaration by which the promisor binds himself to do or forbear. This verse is the scriptural law of the binding promise — the promisor shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROMULGATION

[Deuteronomy 31:11, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. When all Israel is come to appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose, thou shalt read this law before all Israel in their hearing. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Promulgation is causing a law to be made public as preliminary to its force. This is promulgation's scriptural form: the law read publicly before all Israel. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PRONOUNCE

[John 7:24, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. A court 'pronounces' judgment — declares it formally and solemnly. Christ's command governs the judicial act itself: judgment must be righteous, not by appearance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROOF

[2 Corinthians 13:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 2 Corinthians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. This is the third time I am coming to you. In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2 Corinthians 13:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROOF, p. 955; scan anchor: djvu line 160243 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Proof is the establishment of a fact by evidence. This is scripture's own proof standard — the two-or-three-witnesses rule (Deuteronomy 19:15) restated. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROPERTY

[Psalm 24:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Psalm (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. The earth is the LORD's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Psalm 24:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROPERTY, p. 955; scan anchor: djvu line 160329 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. Property is 'rightful dominion over external objects.' This verse states the theological limit on ownership: all dominion is derivative — the earth is the LORD's. (It qualifies rather than founds the concept — stated plainly.) [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROPRES

[Proverbs 13:22, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children: and the wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 13:22, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROPRES, p. 957; scan anchor: djvu line 160647 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Propres is property inherited by descent, as distinguished from purchase. This verse commends the inherited estate passing to children's children. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROSECUTION

[Romans 13:4, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Prosecution is the criminal action carried on by the state. This verse is the theological root of public prosecution: the ruler as God's minister, bearing the sword against evildoers. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROSTITUTE

[Proverbs 29:3, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Whoso loveth wisdom rejoiceth his father: but he that keepeth company with harlots spendeth his substance. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 29:3, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROSTITUTE, p. 959; scan anchor: djvu line 160972 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Prostitution is common lewdness, whoredom for hire. This verse is scripture's witness on harlotry — the wasting of substance with harlots. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROTESTATION

[Deuteronomy 6:13, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Thou shalt fear the LORD thy God, and serve him, and shalt swear by his name. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. A protestation is 'an asseveration made by taking God to witness... approaches very nearly to an oath.' This is the oath-taking law behind protestation: swear by His name. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROVOCATION

[Ephesians 6:4, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Ephesians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Ephesians 6:4, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROVOCATION, p. 962; scan anchor: djvu line 161571 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Provocation is conduct tending to arouse rage in another. This verse addresses provocation directly — provoking to wrath — in the family, the law's original school of the concept. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PRUDENCE

[Proverbs 22:3, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself: but the simple pass on, and are punished. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 22:3, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRUDENCE, p. 962; scan anchor: djvu line 161668 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Prudence is carefulness, precaution, good judgment — the law's 'prudent man' standard. This verse is the prudent-man archetype: foresight of evil and avoidance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PUBLICAN

[Luke 18:13, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Luke 18:13, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PUBLICAN, p. 964; scan anchor: djvu line 161889 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. In the civil law a publican is a farmer of the public revenue — the Gospels' tax-collector. This is Christ's penitent publican, the figure that fixed the word's meaning. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PUDICITT

[2 Timothy 2:22, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 2 Timothy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2 Timothy 2:22, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PUDICITT, p. 965; scan anchor: djvu line 162018 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Pudicitia is chastity, purity, continence. This verse commands the flight from youthful lusts and the pursuit of purity. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PUNISHMENT

[Romans 12:19, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 12:19, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PUNISHMENT, p. 966; scan anchor: djvu line 162169 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Punishment is pain or penalty inflicted by authority of law. This verse reserves vengeance to lawful hands — punishment belongs to authority, not private revenge — the root of public punishment. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PUPIL

Why. To purloin is to steal, to commit larceny or theft. The eighth commandment is the root prohibition. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PURPRESTURE

[Isaiah 5:8, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Isaiah (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place, that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth! [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Isaiah 5:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PURPRESTURE, p. 968; scan anchor: djvu line 162443 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. A purpresture is a private party's enclosure of what ought to be open to the public. This woe condemns the engrossing of land — joining field to field till none is left common. (The direct 'saith the LORD' lands in v9, so the flag stays off.) [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PUTTING IN FEAR

[Leviticus 19:13, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Thou shalt not defraud thy neighbour, neither rob him: the wages of him that is hired shall not abide with thee all night until the morning. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leviticus 19:13, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PUTTING IN FEAR, p. 969; scan anchor: djvu line 162601 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Putting in fear is the definitional element of robbery from the person. This verse is the scriptural prohibition of robbery, of which putting-in-fear is the aggravating element. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUA8TA

[Acts 8:20, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Acts (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

[Matthew 4:2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Matthew (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward an hungred. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 4:2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUABBAQESIMA, p. 969; scan anchor: djvu line 162690 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. 'The fortieth' — the first Sunday in Lent, about the fortieth day before Easter. The forty-day fast is behind the forty-day season. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUAKER

[John 15:14, KJV]

What. Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: John 15:14, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUAKER, p. 971; scan anchor: djvu line 163090 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The Quakers' own name for their society is 'Friends.' This verse is the scriptural root of the name — Christ calling His obedient ones friends. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUALIFICATION

[Exodus 18:21, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 18:21, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUALIFICATION, p. 971; scan anchor: djvu line 163107 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Qualification is the possession of the qualities legally necessary to fill an office. This is the biblical qualification standard for public office: able, God-fearing, truthful, hating covetousness. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUANTUM MERUIT

[Luke 10:7, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give: for the labourer is worthy of his hire. Go not from house to house. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. 'As much as he deserved' — the action for work and labor on an implied promise to pay what the labor reasonably deserved. 'The labourer is worthy of his hire' is the scriptural root of quantum meruit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUARANTINE

[Leviticus 13:46, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. All the days wherein the plague shall be in him he shall be defiled; he is unclean: he shall dwell alone; without the camp shall his habitation be. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Quarantine is detention by authority where contagious disease is prevalent. This is scripture's quarantine law — the leper's separation without the camp. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUEEN

[Judges 4:4, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Judges (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And Deborah, a prophetess, the wife of Lapidoth, she judged Israel at that time. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Judges 4:4, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUEEN, p. 977; scan anchor: djvu line 163830 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. A queen is a woman possessing sovereignty and royal power. Deborah judged Israel — a woman exercising sovereign judicial power, the scriptural precedent. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUIA TIMET

[Proverbs 22:3, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself: but the simple pass on, and are punished. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 22:3, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUIA TIMET, p. 981; scan anchor: djvu line 164454 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. 'Because he fears' — the bill filed against future probable injury to rights. The prudent man's foresight of evil is the ground of equity's preventive relief. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUITTANCE

[Matthew 6:12, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 6:12, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUITTANCE, p. 983; scan anchor: djvu line 164782 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Quittance is release, acquittance, discharge. This petition is the release-of-debt root — forgiveness of debts as the pattern of all quittance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUO ANIMO

[1 Samuel 16:7, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. But the LORD said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 1 Samuel 16:7, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUO ANIMO, p. 983; scan anchor: djvu line 164785 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. 'With what intention or motive' — the inquiry into inward design. This verse states the inward-intention principle behind quo-animo inquiries: the LORD looks on the heart. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUO WARRANTO

[Matthew 21:23, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Matthew (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And when he was come into the temple, the chief priests and the elders of the people came unto him as he was teaching, and said, By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Quo warranto commands the defendant to show by what warrant he exercises a franchise. This is the scriptural quo warranto — 'By what authority doest thou these things?' asked of Christ Himself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUOD PARTITIO FIAT

[Numbers 27:7, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: thou shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren; and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Numbers 27:7, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUOD PARTITIO FIAT, p. 986; scan anchor: djvu line 165240 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. 'That partition be made' — the judgment directing partition. This is the divine ruling dividing an inheritance among heirs — partition by legal decree. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUOTA

[Numbers 26:55, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Notwithstanding the land shall be divided by lot: according to the names of the tribes of their fathers they shall inherit. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Numbers 26:55, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUOTA, p. 987; scan anchor: djvu line 165484 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Quota is a proportional share of a collective liability. Numbers 26:53-56 is Scripture's own apportionment rule: inheritance divided by lot in proportion to number. The quoted clause is within the LORD's speech to Moses (v.52), hence deity-verbatim. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RACE

Who. The cited biblical book: Galatians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Galatians 3:28, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RACE, p. 989; scan anchor: djvu line 165631 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines race as lineage/stock and cites the Fifteenth Amendment ('race, color, or previous condition of servitude'). Paul's verse is Scripture's own erasure of race, nation, and bondage as grounds of legal distinction in standing. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RACHAT

[Leviticus 25:25, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Rachat is the vendor's reserved right of repurchase (remere). Leviticus 25:25 is the kinsman-redeemer law: the redemption of sold land by the next of kin — the scriptural root of the repurchase right. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RACHATER

[Leviticus 25:48, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. After that he is sold he may be redeemed again; one of his brethren may redeem him [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leviticus 25:48, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RACHATER, p. 989; scan anchor: djvu line 165648 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Rachater = to redeem, to buy back. The verse states the redemption right outright: a man sold may be redeemed again by his brethren — buying back what was sold, which is exactly what the verb means. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RACHETUM

[Exodus 21:30, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If there be laid on him a sum of money, then he shall give for the ransom of his life whatsoever is laid upon him. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 21:30, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RACHETUM, p. 989; scan anchor: djvu line 165651 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Rachetum is ransom as pecuniary composition for an offense (Scots weregild). Exodus 21:30 is precisely that: a capital liability compounded by a sum of money — the ransom of his life. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RAFFLE

[Proverbs 16:33, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. The lot is cast into the lap; but the whole disposing thereof is of the LORD. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 16:33, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RAFFLE, p. 989; scan anchor: djvu line 165695 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. A raffle determines sole possession by chance (dice/lots). Proverbs 16:33 is Scripture's doctrine of the lot: the cast is man's, the disposing the LORD's. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RANSOM

[Mark 10:45, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Ransom is the price paid to redeem from captivity. Christ states his own life as the ransom — the concept's supreme instance, spoken by himself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RAH

[Exodus 20:15, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Thou shalt not steal. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 20:15, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RAH, p. 990; scan anchor: djvu line 165833 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Rah is Saxon open theft/robbery. The eighth commandment is the root prohibition of theft, spoken by God in the Decalogue. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RAHSOM

[Mark 10:45, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

RAPE

[Deuteronomy 22:25, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But if a man find a betrothed damsel in the field, and the man force her, and lie with her: then the man only that lay with her shall die [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Deuteronomy 22:25, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RAPE, p. 991; scan anchor: djvu line 165941 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The verse is the Mosaic law of rape itself: forcible carnal knowledge against her will, capital punishment for the man, and the victim exonerated (v.26: 'there is in the damsel no sin worthy of death'). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RAPINE

[Isaiah 33:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Isaiah (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Woe to thee that spoilest, and thou wast not spoiled; and dealest treacherously, and they dealt not treacherously with thee! when thou shalt cease to spoil, thou shalt be spoiled; and when thou shalt make an end to deal treacherously, they shall deal treacherously with thee. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Rapine is violent plunder/pillage. Isaiah's woe against the spoiler pronounces the lex-talionis reversal on plunder itself: the spoiler shall be spoiled. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REASON

[Isaiah 1:18, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Isaiah 1:18, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REASON, p. 993; scan anchor: djvu line 166401 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Reason is the faculty of distinguishing truth from falsehood — the ground of judgment. The verse is God's own invitation to reason, the divine warrant for reasoned judgment. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REALM

[Daniel 4:17, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Daniel (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. to the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Realm is a kingdom. The verse states the most High's rule over the kingdoms of men — every realm held under a higher sovereignty. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

REALTY

[Psalm 24:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Psalm (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. The earth is the LORD's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Psalm 24:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REALTY, p. 993; scan anchor: djvu line 166387 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Realty is real property. The psalm states the root title from which all tenure derives: the earth itself is the LORD's, so every holding is derivative. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REBELLION

[1 Samuel 15:23, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Samuel (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 1 Samuel 15:23, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REBELLION, p. 994; scan anchor: djvu line 166483 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Samuel's sentence on Saul's rebellion classes rebellion with the gravest sins — Scripture's own measure of the crime of rising against lawful authority. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

REGHT

[Micah 6:8, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Micah (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Micah 6:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REGHT, p. 996; scan anchor: djvu line 166801 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Recht is law as justice/equity. The verse is Scripture's own summary of what the LORD requires: justice as the content of law, mercy as its temper. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RECIPROCITY

[Matthew 7:12, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 7:12, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RECIPROCITY, p. 996; scan anchor: djvu line 166855 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Reciprocity is mutuality — each giving the other's subjects like privileges. The golden rule is Scripture's own reciprocity principle, stated by Christ as 'the law and the prophets.' [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RECOGNIZOR

[Proverbs 6:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. My son, if thou be surety for thy friend, if thou hast stricken thy hand with a stranger [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 6:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RECOGNIZOR, p. 997; scan anchor: djvu line 167051 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The recognizor is he who enters into a recognizance — who binds himself of record for another's performance, i.e. stands surety. Proverbs 6:1 is Scripture's standing warning on suretyship, the genus of the recognizance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RECONCILIATION

(entries.json)]

Why. Reconciliation is the renewal of amicable relations after enmity, implying forgiveness. The verse names both the act (God reconciling) and the office (the ministry of reconciliation). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RECTITUDO

[Romans 13:7, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Rectitudo is right/justice, and concretely legal dues and tribute. Romans 13:7 commands the rendering of every due — tribute, custom, fear, honour — to whom it is owed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RECTORIAL TITHES

[Malachi 3:10, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Malachi 3:10, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RECTORIAL TITHES, p. 1002; scan anchor: djvu line 167741 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Rectorial (great or predial) tithes are the tithes due to the rector. The verse is the tithe command itself, spoken by the LORD of hosts — the scriptural root of all tithe law. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

RECUSANTS

[Daniel 3:18, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Daniel (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Daniel 3:18, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RECUSANTS, p. 1002; scan anchor: djvu line 167803 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Recusants were those who on conscience refused the established church's demands and suffered penalties. The three Hebrews' refusal of the king's idolatry — at the cost of the furnace — is the archetype of conscientious refusal of the sovereign's religious command. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. Red-handed means with the marks of crime fresh on him. The verse is the classic case: taken 'in the very act' — the scriptural phrase for the same fact. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

REDEEM

[Leviticus 25:25, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Redeem is to buy back — to liberate land from sale by paying the price. The kinsman-redeemer law is Scripture's own buy-back rule, the root of the legal right of redemption. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REDEMPTION

[Leviticus 25:24, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And in all the land of your possession ye shall grant a redemption for the land. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Redemption is repurchase, buying back. The verse commands a standing redemption right in all the land of their possession — redemption as a legal institution, not a metaphor. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REGENCY

[2 Kings 15:5, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 2 Kings (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And Jotham the king's son was over the house, judging the people of the land. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2 Kings 15:5, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REGENCY, p. 1007; scan anchor: djvu line 168626 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. Regency is vicarious government during the king's disability. Uzziah smitten with leprosy and dwelling apart, his son Jotham judging the people of the land — Scripture's own regency, named in the fact itself. REGIA VIA

[Numbers 20:17, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Numbers (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. we will go by the king's high way [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Numbers 20:17, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REGIA VIA, p. 1007; scan anchor: djvu line 168648 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Regia via is the king's highway. The phrase itself stands in Scripture: Moses' request to Edom to pass by the king's highway — the royal way as a legal fact of passage. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

REGICIDE

[2 Samuel 1:14, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 2 Samuel (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. How wast thou not afraid to stretch forth thine hand to destroy the LORD's anointed? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2 Samuel 1:14, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REGICIDE, p. 1007; scan anchor: djvu line 168658 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Regicide is the murder of a sovereign. David's sentence on the Amalekite who claimed to have slain Saul condemns the king-killer precisely for stretching forth his hand against the LORD's anointed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

REGRATING

[Amos 8:5, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Amos (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. making the ephah small, and the shekel great, and falsifying the balances by deceit [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Release is the relinquishment of a right or claim — the discharge of what is owed. The petition is release in its purest form: debts forgiven, the claim given up. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RELEGATIO

[Genesis 4:12, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. a fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Relegatio is banishment. Cain's sentence — fugitive and vagabond in the earth, spoken by God himself — is the archetypal banishment, exile as punishment. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

RELICT

[1 Timothy 5:3, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Timothy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Honour widows that are widows indeed. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. Reliction is the increase of land by the withdrawal of water. The verse is the archetypal reliction: the waters gathered, the dry land appearing — land emerging from the sea's retreat, spoken by God himself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RELIGION

[James 1:27, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: James (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry treats 'religion' as a system of faith and worship in constitutional law. James gives Scripture's own definition of pure religion: care of the afflicted and moral undefilement — works, not mere profession. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RELIGION

[Matthew 23:23, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. On offenses against religion and the law's weightier matters: Christ rebukes a religion of exact tithes that omits judgment, mercy, and faith — the substance religion must not lose. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REMEMBRANCER

[Malachi 3:16, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Malachi (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the LORD, and that thought upon his name. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Remise de la dette is the release of a debt. The petition is the same act in prayer: debts forgiven, the creditor's claim given up — release as Christ taught it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REMISSION

[Matthew 26:28, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Remission is release — of a debt, a penalty, an offense. Christ names his own blood as shed 'for the remission of sins': remission as the giving-up of what was owed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REMOVAL FROM OFFICE

[1 Samuel 15:26, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Samuel (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. for thou hast rejected the word of the LORD, and the LORD hath rejected thee from being king over Israel. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. The land shall not be sold for ever: for the land is mine; for ye are strangers and sojourners with me. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Rent is the return yielded for the use of land held of another. The verse states the ultimate tenure: the land is the LORD's, men but strangers and sojourners — every rent paid under a derivative title, the fee in God. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SEPARATION

[Luke 19:8, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Luke (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Luke 19:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SEPARATION, p. 1018; scan anchor: djvu line 170423 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Headword prints as SEPARATION but the body defines reparation — 'the redress of an injury; amends for a wrong inflicted' (apparent OCR of REPARATION). Zacchaeus's fourfold restoration for wrongs done is the archetype of making amends. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

SEPARATION

[Mark 10:9, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Mark 10:9, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SEPARATION, p. 1018; scan anchor: djvu line 170423 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines separation as the cessation of cohabitation of husband and wife. The verse states the scriptural rule governing the marriage bond itself: what God hath joined together, let not man put asunder — the standard against which every separation is measured. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REPEAL

[Matthew 5:18, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 5:18, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REPEAL, p. 1018; scan anchor: djvu line 170446 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Repeal is the abrogation of a law. Christ marks the limit-case: the divine law is unrepealable — not one jot or tittle shall pass — which is precisely what makes human repeal a legislative act and not a given. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

REPRESENTATIVE

[2 Corinthians 5:20, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 2 Corinthians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2 Corinthians 5:20, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REPRESENTATIVE, p. 1019; scan anchor: djvu line 170851 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. A representative is one who stands in another's place and acts as his substitute. The ambassador — speaking 'in Christ's stead' — is representation in its pure form. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT

[Exodus 18:21, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Republican government is government by representatives chosen by the people. Jethro's counsel to Moses — able men out of all the people, set over thousands, hundreds, fifties, tens — is Scripture's own model of representative rule. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REPUDIATION

[Deuteronomy 24:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. then let him write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Repudiation in its first sense is the putting away of a wife. The verse is the Mosaic bill of divorcement itself — repudiation by written instrument. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

REPUTATION

[Proverbs 22:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favour rather than silver and gold. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 22:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REPUTATION, p. 1022; scan anchor: djvu line 171139 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Reputation is a person's credit, honour, good name. The proverb prices it outright: a good name above great riches. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RESETTER

[Exodus 22:4, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If the theft be certainly found in his hand alive, whether it be ox, or ass, or sheep; he shall restore double. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The Scots resetter is the receiver of stolen goods knowing them stolen. The verse punishes the possessor in whose hand the theft is found alive — the receiver — with double restitution. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RESISTING AN OFFICER

[Romans 13:2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 13:2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RESISTING AN OFFICER, p. 1027; scan anchor: djvu line 172034 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The offense is obstructing a peace officer in the lawful discharge of his duty. Paul states the principle behind it: resisting the lawful power is resisting the ordinance of God. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RESTITUTIO IN INTEGRUM

[Joel 2:25, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the cankerworm, and the caterpiller, and the palmerworm, my great army which I sent among you. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Restitutio in integrum is restoration to the previous condition, parties restored to their prior situation. The verse is restoration to wholeness itself — the eaten years restored — spoken by the LORD (v.27: 'I am the LORD your God'). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RESTITUTION

[Exodus 22:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If a man shall steal an ox, or a sheep, and kill it, or sell it; he shall restore five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Restitution is the return of what was taken to the owner. The verse is the theft-restitution rule itself: five oxen for an ox, four sheep for a sheep — restoration measured to the loss. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RETORSION

[Exodus 21:24, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Retorsion is retaliation in international law — measure for measure against a foreign government's harshness. The lex talionis is retaliation's archetype: like for like, the measure returned. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RETRAIT

[Leviticus 25:25, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Retrait (lignager) is the family's right to take back land the kinsman sold — pre-emption/redemption by blood. Leviticus 25:25 is its direct ancestor: the kin redeeming what the brother sold. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RETRIBUTION

[Romans 12:19, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 12:19, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RETRIBUTION, p. 1032; scan anchor: djvu line 172882 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Retribution is recompense, requital — repayment in kind. Paul quotes the LORD's own reservation of it: vengeance is mine, I will repay — retribution as God's prerogative, quoted as his speech. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

REVEL

[Galatians 5:21, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Galatians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

Where. Cited source: Galatians 5:21, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REVEL, p. 1033; scan anchor: djvu line 173072 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. The entry is the criminal complaint of reveling — noisy, boisterous, bacchanalian disorder. Paul lists 'revellings' among the works of the flesh whose doers shall not inherit the kingdom of God. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

REWARD

[Revelation 22:12, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Revelation 22:12, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REWARD, p. 1036; scan anchor: djvu line 173533 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Reward is recompense for services, achievements, or acts benefiting the public. Christ's own word: his reward with him, to every man according as his work shall be. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REX

[Proverbs 21:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. The king's heart is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water: he turneth it whithersoever he will. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 21:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REX, p. 1036; scan anchor: djvu line 173549 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Rex is the king — including the king as the prosecuting party ('Rex v. Doe'). The verse states kingship under God's hand: the king's heart turned whithersoever He will. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RHODIAN LAWS

[Jonah 1:5, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Jonah (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. and cast forth the wares that were in the ship into the sea, to lighten it of them. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

RIGGING THE MARKET

[Deuteronomy 25:13, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Thou shalt not have in thy bag divers weights, a great and a small. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Rigging the market is fraudulent manipulation of prices by pretended demand. The verse prohibits the toolkit of market fraud itself — false weights, great and small — the same genus: dishonest dealing in trade. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RIGHT

[Deuteronomy 16:20, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. That which is altogether just shalt thou follow, that thou mayest live, and inherit the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Right in the abstract is justice, ethical correctness, consonance with law's moral principles. The verse commands it outright: follow justice altogether — the abstract right as a duty. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RIGHT

[Qur'an 4:135, Yusuf Ali]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. O ye who believe! stand out firmly for justice, as witnesses to Allah, even as against yourselves, or your parents, or your kin [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The second tradition's witness on the same abstract right: stand firmly for justice as witnesses to Allah, even against self, parents, and kin — justice owed impartially, which is what 'right' means. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. Regnal years are years counted by a sovereign's reign, the mode of citing statutes. Scripture itself dates by regnal years — Isaiah's vision is fixed 'in the year that king Uzziah died.' [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REPETTTNDARUM CRIMEN

[Deuteronomy 16:19, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Thou shalt not wrest judgment; thou shalt not respect persons, neither take a gift: for a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise, and pervert the words of the righteous. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Repetundarum crimen is bribery/extortion by a magistrate or public officer. The verse is the standing prohibition: no gifts, no respect of persons — a bribe blinds the eyes of the wise. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RIGHT OF PROPERTY

[Psalm 115:16, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Psalm (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. The heaven, even the heavens, are the LORD's: but the earth hath he given to the children of men. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines the abstract right of property in land — the right that remains to the owner after possession is lost. The verse states the earth itself is given to the children of men: the scriptural ground of property as a thing men may hold against all the world. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry defines the right to disencumber property and recover title by paying what is due. The verse is the law of the kinsman-redeemer — the biblical root of the redemption right: kin may buy back the sold possession. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry defines a servitude of passage through another's estate, confined to a defined route. Israel's request to Edom — passage by the established highway, deviating neither right nor left — is the scriptural picture of exactly such a limited right of transit over another's land. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RIGHTS OF PERSONS

[Genesis 1:27, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Genesis (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Genesis 1:27, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RIGHTS OF PERSONS, p. 1040; scan anchor: djvu line 174234 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines rights annexed to the person of man. The verse grounds personhood itself — man made in the image of God — which is the scriptural foundation on which rights of the person (life, liberty) rest. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RIGHTS OF THINGS

[Genesis 1:28, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines rights a man may acquire over external objects unconnected with his person. The dominion mandate is the scriptural grant of man's right over things — the counterpart to the rights-of-persons verse above. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ROBBER

[John 10:1, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: John 10:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ROBBER, p. 1042; scan anchor: djvu line 174662 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry distinguishes the robber from the mere thief: one who steals with force or open violence. The verse names the robber as the one who takes by unlawful entry rather than by the door — the scriptural figure of the taker by force and stealth. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ROBBERY

[Exodus 20:15, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Thou shalt not steal. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 20:15, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ROBBERY, p. 1042; scan anchor: djvu line 174670 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines the felonious taking of property from another by force or fear. The verse is the root scriptural prohibition of the act itself — robbery being theft aggravated by force, the commandment condemns the taking at its foundation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ROGATION WEEK

[Matthew 9:38, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 9:38, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ROGATION WEEK, p. 1044; scan anchor: djvu line 174767 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines Rogation days by the extraordinary prayers then made for the fruits of the earth. The verse is Christ's own direction to pray to the Lord of the harvest — the scriptural kin of the practice: asking (rogare) for the earth's fruit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

entry ROLL, p. 1044; scan anchor: djvu line 174801 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines the roll as the parchment schedule on which legal proceedings are entered — the record from which judgment is rendered. The verse shows the same structure at the last judgment: the dead judged out of the things written in the books. The legal roll and the books of judgment share one logic: judgment proceeds from the written record. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

RUMOR

[Exodus 23:1, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Thou shalt not raise a false report. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 23:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RUMOR, p. 1047; scan anchor: djvu line 175383 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines rumor as a current story passing from person to person without known authority for its truth — and notes it is generally inadmissible in evidence. The verse, from the covenant code spoken by God, prohibits raising a false report: the scriptural rule against the very thing the legal definition describes. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

RUSE DE GUERRE

[Joshua 8:2, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. lay thee an ambush for the city behind it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Joshua 8:2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RUSE DE GUERRE, p. 1048; scan anchor: djvu line 175537 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines ruse de guerre as a trick or stratagem in war. The verse is the LORD's own command to Joshua to lay an ambush for Ai — scripture's instance of a lawful stratagem, ordered by deity, not merely described. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

SABBATH

[Exodus 20:8, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 20:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SABBATH, p. 1060; scan anchor: djvu line 175656 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines the Sabbath and the offense of Sabbath-breaking. The verse is the commandment itself — the divine institution of the Sabbath from which the legal offense derives. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SACRAMENTALES

[Hebrews 6:16, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Hebrews (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For men verily swear by the greater: and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines sacramentales as compurgators — persons who purge a defendant by their oath of belief in his innocence. The verse states the legal function of the oath itself: sworn by the greater, it is for confirmation the end of all strife — the scriptural ground of oath-purgation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SACRAMENTI ACTIO

[Numbers 30:2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Numbers (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If a man vow a vow unto the LORD, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond; he shall not break his word, he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines sacramentum as an oath, 'a very sacred thing.' The verse states the binding force of a sworn oath: he shall not break his word but do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth — the scriptural root of the oath's legal sanctity. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SACRILEGE

[Matthew 21:13, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines sacrilege, in old law, as the desecration of anything considered holy. The verse is Christ's own sentence on the profanation of the temple — scripture's portrait of zeal against the desecration of a holy place. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SAEVITIA

[Colossians 3:19, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Colossians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Colossians 3:19, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SAEVITIA, p. 1051; scan anchor: djvu line 175869 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines saevitia as cruelty rendering marital cohabitation unsafe — the divorce-law measure of marital cruelty. The verse states the scriptural standard for the same relation: husbands not bitter against their wives — the rule against which saevitia is judged. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SAGAMAN

[Leviticus 19:16, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leviticus 19:16, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SAGAMAN, p. 1051; scan anchor: djvu line 175900 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines a sagaman as a tale-teller, a secret accuser. The verse, from the LORD's holiness code, prohibits going up and down as a talebearer among the people — the scriptural condemnation of the very office the entry names. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

SAGIBARO

[Deuteronomy 16:18, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribes: and they shall judge the people with just judgment. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines the sagibaro as one who administered justice and decided causes in the public assembly. The verse institutes the judicial office itself — judges set in the gates to judge the people with just judgment — the scriptural charter of the judge's function. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry defines salary as recompense made to a person for his pains and industry in another's business. The verse states the scriptural rule of recompense for labour: the labourer is worthy of his reward — the moral ground of wages and salary. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SANCTION

[Romans 6:23, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines a sanction, in its original sense, as a penalty provided as a means of enforcing obedience to a law — a conditional evil annexed to a law. The verse states the archetypal sanction: the wages of sin is death — the penalty annexed to the moral law. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SANCTUARY

Why. The entry defines sanctuary as a consecrated place to which offenders resorted for refuge, where they could not be arrested. The verse appoints the place of refuge itself: a place whither the manslayer shall flee — the scriptural institution of sanctuary. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

entry SATISDARE, p. 1056; scan anchor: djvu line 176711 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines satisdare as guaranteeing the obligation of a principal — the surety's undertaking. The verse is scripture's direct treatment of that act: becoming surety for a friend, striking the hand — the surety relation the entry names. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SATISFACTION

[Matthew 5:26, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines satisfaction as paying what is due — a judgment satisfied by payment of the amount due. The verse states the same rule from Christ's lips: no release until the uttermost farthing is paid — satisfaction in full as the condition of discharge. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SCHISM

[1 Corinthians 12:25, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Corinthians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. That there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines schism as a division or separation in a church occasioned by diversity of religious opinions. The verse names schism directly and prescribes its cure — members having the same care one for another. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SCHOOL

[Proverbs 22:6, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines the school as a place of primary instruction, maintained for the education of children. The verse states the scriptural mandate of childhood instruction — training up the child — which the school exists to serve. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry defines scienter as the defendant's previous knowledge of the facts he was duty-bound to guard against — guilty knowledge. The verse makes knowledge itself the measure of culpability: to know the good and not do it is sin — the scriptural form of the scienter principle. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SCRIBA

[Ezra 7:6, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Ezra (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. he was a ready scribe in the law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines a scroll as a paper or parchment containing writing, rolled up — and as a mark supplying the place of a seal. The verse shows the sealed book, written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals: the scriptural scroll as authenticated writing. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. The entry defines the sea as the great mass of water surrounding the land. The verse is the scriptural definition of the same thing: the gathering together of the waters called Seas — the naming that founds every legal use of the term. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SEAL

[Esther 8:8, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Esther (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, may no man reverse. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Esther 8:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SEAL, p. 1062; scan anchor: djvu line 177746 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines a seal as the formal attestation of an instrument's execution. The verse states the seal's legal effect: writing sealed with the king's ring may no man reverse — the irrevocable authority the seal confers. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SECT

[Acts 24:14, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Acts (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines a sect as a body united in tenets but distinct by doctrines different from other sects. The verse shows the word in its scriptural use: 'the way which they call heresy' — a distinct party within the faith, named as such by its opponents. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SECULAR

[Matthew 22:21, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines secular as not ecclesiastical — relating to affairs of the present world. The verse draws the boundary itself: Caesar's things set apart from God's — the scriptural ground of the secular/spiritual distinction. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SECURITY

[Proverbs 11:15, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it: and he that hateth suretiship is sure. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines security as the assurance given a creditor — and as the person who becomes surety for another. The verse is scripture's rule on that person: he that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it — the surety relation weighed and warned. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SEDITION

[Acts 24:5, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Acts (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For we have found this man a pestilent fellow, and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes; [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines sedition as attempts by speeches or publications to disturb the tranquillity of the state, tending toward treason. The verse is the scriptural instance: Paul formally accused before Felix as 'a mover of sedition' — the charge of sedition laid in its ancient form. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SEMI-MATRIMONIUM

[Genesis 25:6, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Genesis (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But unto the sons of the concubines, which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, and sent them away from Isaac his son, while he yet lived, eastward, unto the east country. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines semi-matrimonium as concubinage — half-marriage. The verse shows the concubine relation recognized in the patriarchal household: Abraham's concubines and their sons provided for and set apart — scripture's own treatment of the lesser union the entry names. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry defines seniores as seniors, ancients, elders — the great men of the realm. The verse commands rising up before the hoary head and honouring the old: the scriptural honour due to elders. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SENETJOIA

[1 Timothy 5:3, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Timothy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

Why. The entry defines senethuja as widowhood. The verse states the scriptural rule for that state: honour widows that are widows indeed — widowhood as a condition carrying its own honour and care. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SENTENCE

[Ecclesiastes 8:11, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Ecclesiastes (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Ecclesiastes 8:11, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SENTENCE, p. 1071; scan anchor: djvu line 179284 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines sentence as the judgment formally pronounced awarding punishment after conviction. The verse treats sentence in exactly that criminal sense — sentence against an evil work — and weighs the consequence of its delay. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SEPARATISTS

[James 5:12, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: James (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath: but let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay; lest ye fall into condemnation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: James 5:12, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SEPARATISTS, p. 22; scan anchor: djvu line 179550 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. The entry defines separatists — like Quakers — as those who solemnly affirm instead of taking the usual oath. The verse is the scriptural ground of that practice: swear not by any oath, but let your yea be yea — affirmation in place of oath-swearing. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SERF

Who. The cited biblical book: Galatians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Galatians 3:28, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SERF, p. 1074; scan anchor: djvu line 179793 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines the serf as one whose social condition was servile, bound to labour at his lord's will — differing from the slave only in being bound to the soil. The verse dissolves the bond/free distinction itself: there is neither bond nor free — the scriptural verdict on servile status. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SERVANT

[Ephesians 6:5, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Ephesians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Servants, be obedient to them that are your masters according to the flesh, with fear and trembling, in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Ephesians 6:5, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SERVANT, p. 1075; scan anchor: djvu line 179948 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines the servant as one employed to render personal service under his master's control and direction. The verse states the scriptural rule of that relation: servants obedient to their masters, in singleness of heart, as unto Christ. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SERVICE

[Ephesians 6:7, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Ephesians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. With good will doing service, as to the Lord, and not to men: [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines service as duty or labour rendered by one person to another. The verse names it directly — 'doing service' — and sets its standard: with good will, as to the Lord, and not to men. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SHEEP

[Exodus 22:1, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. If a man shall steal an ox, or a sheep, and kill it, or sell it; he shall restore five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines 'sheep' as the law defines it for purposes of theft — a wether more than a year old. The verse is the scriptural law of sheep-stealing itself: the thief shall restore four sheep for a sheep — the restitution rule behind the legal definition. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SHERIFF

[Romans 13:4, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 13:4, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SHERIFF, p. 1082; scan anchor: djvu line 181165 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines the sheriff as the chief conservator of the peace, aiding the criminal courts and executing judgments. The verse describes the same office in scripture's terms: the minister of God bearing the sword, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SHIPWRECK

[Jonah 1:4, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Jonah (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But the LORD sent out a great wind into the sea, and there was a mighty tempest in the sea, so that the ship was like to be broken. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines shipwreck as the shattering of a vessel by the violence of winds and waves in tempests. The verse narrates exactly that: a mighty tempest in the sea, so that the ship was like to be broken — scripture's own shipwreck. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry defines simony as the buying or selling of ecclesiastical preferments. The verse is the origin of the very word: Peter's sentence on Simon Magus, who offered money for the gift of God — the scriptural root from which the legal term takes its name. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry defines riot as a tumultuous disturbance of the peace by persons assembling of their own authority and acting violently. The verse describes the Ephesian tumult — a confused assembly crying out, most not knowing why they came — the scriptural portrait of a riot. [Headword as printed in the 2e scan OCR: 'BIOT'.] [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry defines sale as the contract by which one transfers property for a price in money. The verse, from the LORD's holiness code, commands just weights and measures in trade — the scriptural law governing honest dealing in the very transaction the entry defines. [Headword as printed in the 2e scan OCR: 'SAXE'.] [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry defines scandalum magnatum as words spoken in derogation of a peer, a judge, or other great officer of the realm. The verse prohibits cursing the ruler of the people — the scriptural root of the offense of reviling those in authority. [Headword as printed in the 2e scan OCR: 'SC AND ALUM MAGNATUM'.] [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry defines homicide committed se defendendo — in self-defense — as excusable. The verse is the scriptural rule of the same case: the housebreaker smitten in the act, and no blood-guilt for the slayer. [Headword as printed in the 2e scan OCR: 'SE SEFENDENDO'.] [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

[Exodus 20:16, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 20:16, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry BLANDER, p. 1092; scan anchor: djvu line 182698 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Slander is oral defamation — false, malicious speech against another; the ninth commandment is the direct divine prohibition of exactly that wrong. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SLANDERER

[Proverbs 10:18, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. He that hideth hatred with lying lips, and he that uttereth a slander, is a fool. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 10:18, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SLANDERER, p. 1092; scan anchor: djvu line 182724 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The slanderer is one who maliciously imputes crime or fault; the proverb names the utterer of slander and passes sentence on him. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SLAVE

Who. The cited biblical book: Galatians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Galatians 3:28, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SLAVE, p. 1092; scan anchor: djvu line 182729 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. SLAVE is defined as one wholly subject to another's will with no freedom of action; the 'bond nor free' clause directly addresses that legal status, declaring it abolished in the relevant reckoning. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SLAVE-TRADE

[Exodus 21:16, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And he that stealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 21:16, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SLAVE-TRADE, p. 1092; scan anchor: djvu line 182743 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The slave-trade is the buying and selling of men for profit; man-stealing-for-sale is the trade's engine, and the verse condemns it capitally. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SMALL TITHES

[Leviticus 27:30, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD's: it is holy unto the LORD. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Small tithes are personal and mixed tithes — hops, flax, potatoes and the like; 'the tithe of the land... the fruit of the tree' is exactly that class, declared the LORD's. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Where. Cited source: Romans 13:7, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SMUGGLING, p. 1093; scan anchor: djvu line 182895 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. Smuggling is defrauding the revenue by evading customs duties; the verse names 'custom' among the dues that must be rendered — the very obligation the offense evades. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SO HELP YOU GOD

[Matthew 5:34, 37, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. But I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God's throne: ... But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 5:34, 37, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SO HELP YOU GOD, p. 1093; scan anchor: djvu line 182915 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. 'So help you God' is the closing formula of a common oath; Christ's direct teaching governs oath-taking itself — swear not at all, and let speech be bound by yea-yea, nay-nay alone. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SODOMY

[Leviticus 20:13, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. If a man also lie with mankind, as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leviticus 20:13, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SODOMY, p. 1094; scan anchor: djvu line 183102 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Sodomy is named for its prevalence in Sodom; the verse is the standing legal prohibition of the act itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SOLEMNIZE

[Matthew 19:5, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 19:5, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SOLEMNIZE, p. 1095; scan anchor: djvu line 183281 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. To solemnize a marriage is to enter the marriage contract; these are Christ's own spoken words stating the marriage union, in red-letter editions printed as His speech. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SOLUTIO

[Romans 13:8, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 13:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SOLUTIO, p. 1096; scan anchor: djvu line 183425 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Solutio is payment, satisfaction, discharge of an obligation; the verse commands leaving no debt undischarged. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SOLVENCY

[Psalm 37:21, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Psalm (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again: but the righteous sheweth mercy, and giveth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Solvency is the ability to pay one's debts; the psalm draws the moral anatomy of it — the wicked borrow and do not pay, the righteous pay. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SON

[Exodus 20:12, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 20:12, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SON, p. 1007; scan anchor: djvu line 183577 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. SON is defined as the correlative of 'father'; the fifth commandment states the son's correlative duty toward the father. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By verbatim quotation — the note reproduces the cited verse word-for-word (KJV diff: exact) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Ye shall not steal, neither deal falsely, neither lie one to another. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leviticus 19:11, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry STELLIONATUS, p. 1109; scan anchor: djvu line 185583 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Stellionatus is the general name for fraud falling under no specific head; 'neither deal falsely' is the general-fraud prohibition. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

STEWARD

[Luke 12:42, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Luke 12:42, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry STEWARD, p. 1110; scan anchor: djvu line 185684 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. A steward is one appointed in another's place over his affairs; Christ's parable defines the faithful steward as the one set over his lord's household — the entry's definition nearly verbatim. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

STIPEND

[Luke 10:7, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. for the labourer is worthy of his hire. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Luke 10:7, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry STIPEND, p. 1110; scan anchor: djvu line 185765 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. A stipend is settled pay, salary; Christ states the laborer's right to his hire — the wage principle. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

STOCKS

[Jeremiah 20:2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Jeremiah (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Then Pashur smote Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks that were in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the LORD. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jeremiah 20:2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry STOCKS, p. 1112; scan anchor: djvu line 186085 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The stocks are the timber punishment device; the verse attests the device in actual penal use.

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Illustrative rather than doctrinal — kept because it genuinely shows the penal function. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

STRATAGEM

[Joshua 8:2, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. lay thee an ambush for the city behind it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Joshua 8:2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry STRATAGEM, p. 1113; scan anchor: djvu line 186241 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. A stratagem is deception in war to gain advantage; the verse is a divinely ordered ambush — stratagem commanded. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

STRICTUM JUS

[2 Corinthians 3:6, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 2 Corinthians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2 Corinthians 3:6, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry STRICTUM JUS, p. 1114; scan anchor: djvu line 186342 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Strictum jus is the rigor of the law as distinguished from equity; the letter/spirit contrast is its theological twin — rigor kills, the spirit gives life. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

SUBJECT-MATTER

[1 Peter 2:13, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Peter (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme; [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 1 Peter 2:13, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUBJECT-MATTER, p. 1116; scan anchor: djvu line 186643 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Subjection is the obligation to act at another's discretion or judgment; the verse commands subjection to governing ordinance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUBMISSION

[James 4:7, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: James (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: James 4:7, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUBMISSION, p. 1116; scan anchor: djvu line 186670 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. Submission is yielding to authority; the verse states submission as the yielded posture itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUBORNATION OF PERJURY

[Deuteronomy 19:18-19, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And the judges shall make diligent inquisition: and, behold, if the witness be a false witness, and hath testified falsely against his brother; Then shall ye do unto him, as he had thought to have done unto his brother: so shalt thou put the evil away from among you. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Deuteronomy 19:18-19, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUBORNATION OF PERJURY, p. 1116; scan anchor: djvu line 186727 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Subornation of perjury procures another's false oath; the verse is the false-witness law with its talionic sanction — the underlying wrong subornation procures. Spoken by Moses, not first-person deity speech: flag off. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUBSCRIBING WITNESS

[John 8:17, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. A subscribing witness attests a signature in testimony thereof; Christ invokes the two-witness rule — the attestation principle behind requiring witnesses. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUBTRACTION

[Malachi 3:8, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Malachi 3:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUBTRACTION, p. 1118; scan anchor: djvu line 187076 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Subtraction is withholding from another what by law he is entitled to; the verse frames withholding of legal dues as robbery. The verse's dues are tithes; the entry is general — the parallel is thematic. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUCCESSION

[Numbers 27:8, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a man die, and have no son, then ye shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughter. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Numbers 27:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUCCESSION, p. 1119; scan anchor: djvu line 187137 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Succession is the transmission of rights and estate on death; the verse is the intestate-succession rule itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUDDEN HEAT OF PASSION

[Numbers 35:11, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Then ye shall appoint you cities to be cities of refuge for you; that the slayer may flee thither, which killeth any person at unawares. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Sudden heat of passion mitigates murder to manslaughter; the cities-of-refuge law is the biblical locus distinguishing non-deliberate homicide from murder — the category heat-of-passion killing sits in. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUE

[1 Corinthians 6:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Corinthians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Dare any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 1 Corinthians 6:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUE, p. 15; scan anchor: djvu line 187335 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. To sue is to commence legal proceedings; the verse addresses going to law itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUGGESTIO FALSI

[Proverbs 12:22, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Lying lips are abomination to the LORD: but they that deal truly are his delight. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 12:22, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUGGESTIO FALSI, p. 15; scan anchor: djvu line 187432 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. Suggestio falsi is the suggestion of what is false; the proverb condemns lying lips directly. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUNDAY

[Exodus 20:8, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 20:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUNDAY, p. 1123; scan anchor: djvu line 187827 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Sunday is the Lord's Day, the Christian Sabbath; the fourth commandment founds the Sabbath observance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BUPER-JURARE

[James 5:12, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: James (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath: but let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay; lest ye fall into condemnation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Super-jurare is over-swearing — excusing oneself by oath; the verse prohibits oath-swearing with its sanction, lest the swearer fall into condemnation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUPPLICAVIT

[1 John 1:9, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 John (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 1 John 1:9, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUPPLICAVIT, p. 1124; scan anchor: djvu line 188186 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Supplicatio is a petition for pardon; the verse states pardon upon petition/confession. The parallel is thematic — civil pardon petitioned, divine pardon promised. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUPREME POWER

[Daniel 4:17, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Daniel (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

Why. Supreme power is the highest authority in a state; the verse locates it — the Most High ruling in the kingdom of men. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

SURETY

[Proverbs 6:1-2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. My son, if thou be surety for thy friend, if thou hast stricken thy hand with a stranger, Thou art snared with the words of thy mouth, thou art taken with the words of thy mouth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. A surety secures another's obligation at his request; the proverb names suretyship for a friend and warns of its snare — the wisdom literature's standing doctrine of surety. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SURETYSHIP

[Proverbs 11:15, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it: and he that hateth suretiship is sure. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 11:15, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SURETYSHIP, p. 114; scan anchor: djvu line 188519 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Suretyship is the contract itself; the proverb states its peril as a law-like maxim — the surety shall smart for it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUUM OUIQUE TRIBUERE

[Romans 13:7, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Suum cuique tribuere — to render to every one his own — is Justinian's first precept of law; the verse is the precept in apostolic dress: render each his due. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TEIND COURT

[Malachi 3:10, KJV]

What. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. TEIND MASTERS are 'those entitled to tithes.' Numbers 18:21 is the charter of that entitlement: God grants the Levites 'all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance' for their service. The verse is the legal root of who may lawfully claim the tithe. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TEINDS

[Matthew 23:23, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. TEINDS is the Scots-law term for tithes. Christ treats tithing as a matter 'of the law' while subordinating it to judgment, mercy, and faith — the verse genuinely frames the tithe as a legal obligation with a moral hierarchy, which is exactly the tension ecclesiastical tithe-law lived in. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TEMERE

[1 Corinthians 6:7, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Corinthians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Now therefore there is utterly a fault among you, because ye go to law one with another. Why do ye not rather take wrong? why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 1 Corinthians 6:7, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TEMERE, p. 1140; scan anchor: djvu line 190700 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. TEMERE describes the plaintiff who sues rashly, from malice, or without just cause. Paul's rebuke names going to law itself 'utterly a fault' and asks why the wronged do not rather suffer it — a direct scriptural censure of the litigious spirit the temere litigans embodies. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. TENANT in the restricted sense is 'one who holds lands of another.' The parable opens on exactly that relation: a householder who 'let it out to husbandmen' — tenants holding another's land, owing its fruits, answerable to the owner. The legal structure of tenancy is the parable's load-bearing frame. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TENERI

[Numbers 30:2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Numbers (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If a man vow a vow unto the LORD, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond; he shall not break his word, he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Numbers 30:2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TENERI, p. 1144; scan anchor: djvu line 191348 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. TENERI is the bond clause by which the obligor declares himself 'held and firmly bound.' Numbers 30:2 states the scriptural form of the same binding: a man who binds 'his soul with a bond' shall not break his word. The verse illuminates what 'held and firmly bound' meant before it became a form of words. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

What. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. TENTHS covers both the parliamentary tenth and the ecclesiastical tenth — 'the tenth part of the annual profit of every living.' Malachi 3:10 is the classic tithe text: the storehouse, the meat in God's house, the commanded tenth. It is the scriptural root of the ecclesiastical tenth the entry describes. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TERMINUS

[Proverbs 22:28, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Remove not the ancient landmark, which thy fathers have set. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. TERMINUS is 'boundary; a limit either of space or time.' The landmark proverb is the scriptural boundary law: ancient bounds are not to be moved. It genuinely illuminates the legal concept — the boundary as a protected legal fact. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TESTAMENT

[Hebrews 9:16-17, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Hebrews (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Hebrews 9:16-17, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TESTAMENT, p. 1148; scan anchor: djvu line 192086 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. TESTAMENT is a disposition of property to take place after the owner's decease. Hebrews 9:16-17 states the legal principle outright: a testament takes force only upon the testator's death. The epistle reasons from the law of wills itself — the verse is the doctrine in scriptural dress. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. TESTATOR is 'one who makes or has made a testament.' The verse names the testator's death as the necessary trigger of the testament's force — the defining legal fact about the testator's office. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TESTES

[Deuteronomy 19:15, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. One witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin, in any sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. TESTES is 'witnesses' (the entry even carries the maxim that witnesses are weighed, not numbered). Deuteronomy 19:15 is the root witness rule of biblical law — no matter established on one witness alone — the direct ancestor of the two-witness rules in later law. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TESTIFY

[Exodus 20:16, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 20:16, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TESTIFY, p. 1150; scan anchor: djvu line 192415 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. TESTIFY is 'to bear witness... under oath or affirmation... for the purpose of establishing or proving some fact.' The ninth commandment governs exactly that act: the witness's speech is fenced by divine command. Exodus 20:1 frames the Decalogue as God's spoken words ('And God spake all these words, saying'), so the red-letter flag applies. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TESTIMONY

[John 8:17, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. TESTIMONY is 'evidence of a witness... under oath or affirmation.' Christ Himself appeals to the two-witness rule of the law as the standard by which testimony is 'true' — the verse is the New Testament witness to the Old Testament testimony-law. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

THEFT

[Exodus 20:15, KJV]

Why. THEFT is 'an unlawful felonious taking away of another man's movable and personal goods.' The eighth commandment is the two-word root of the whole law of theft, spoken as God's own command (Exodus 20:1). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

entry THEOCRACY, p. 1162; scan anchor: djvu line 192714 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. THEOCRACY is 'government of a state by the immediate direction of God.' The verse defines the biblical theocracy at the moment of its loss: Israel's demand for a king is read by God as rejection of His own reign — 'that I should not reign over them.' [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

THESMOTHETE

[James 4:12, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: James (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. There is one lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgest another? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. THESMOTHETE is 'a law-maker; a law-giver.' James names the one Lawgiver and draws the consequence the legal mind must face: if there is one lawgiver, the judge who is not he should be slow to judge. The verse bears directly on the office the word names. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TIME

[Ecclesiastes 3:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Ecclesiastes (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven: [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. TIME is 'the measure of duration,' expressive both of a point and of an interval. Ecclesiastes 3:1 is scripture's own definition of time's order: every purpose has its appointed time. The verse genuinely frames what the law measures when it measures time. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TITHES

[Leviticus 27:30, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD's: it is holy unto the LORD. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leviticus 27:30, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TITHES, p. 1157; scan anchor: djvu line 193491 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. This is the full-definition TITHES entry ('the tenth part of the increase... due only to an ecclesiastical person'). Leviticus 27:30 states the tithe's legal-theological root: the tenth 'is the LORD's: it is holy unto the LORD' — ownership and sanctity, the ground of its being owed. TOLERATION

[Matthew 13:29-30, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 13:29-30, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TOLERATION, p. 1159; scan anchor: djvu line 193974 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. TOLERATION is the legal allowance of dissenting religious opinions and worship. The parable of the tares is the classic scriptural ground of that principle: the householder forbids rooting up the tares lest the wheat be harmed, commanding coexistence until the harvest — toleration as divine policy. TOLLS

[Romans 13:7, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 13:7, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TOLLS, p. 1160; scan anchor: djvu line 194087 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. TOLLS are 'customs, subsidy, prestation, imposition, or sum of money demanded' on merchandise. Romans 13:7 names the moral ground of the exaction: tribute and custom are 'dues' to be rendered — the verse states the duty that toll-law enforces. TRANSACTION

[Matthew 5:25, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 5:25, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TRANSACTION, p. 1166; scan anchor: djvu line 195162 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. TRANSACTION in the civil law is the compromise by which litigants settle a suit between themselves rather than go to judgment. Christ commands exactly that: agree with the adversary quickly, while in the way — settle before the judge takes the matter out of your hands. TRANSGRE8SIO

[1 John 3:4, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 John (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. TRANSGRESSIO is 'a violation of law.' The verse defines the word's own concept: transgression IS law-violation — 'sin is the transgression of the law.' The legal and scriptural senses of the term coincide exactly. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TREASON

[Romans 13:1-2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 13:1-2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TREASON, p. 1169; scan anchor: djvu line 195642 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. TREASON is 'the offense of attempting to overthrow the government of the state to which the offender owes allegiance.' Romans 13:1-2 states the theological root of allegiance: the powers are ordained of God, so resistance to them is resistance to God's ordinance. The verse is the classic ground of the subject's duty — the duty treason violates. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TRIBUTE

[Matthew 22:21, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. TRIBUTE is the contribution raised by a sovereign from his subjects. Christ's answer to the tribute question is the most famous verse on the subject: the coin of the realm is owed to Caesar — the duty to pay tribute stated as divine command, with its limit ('and unto God the things that are God's'). TRUSTEE

[Luke 16:10, 12, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much: ... And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. TRUSTEE is 'one in whom an estate, interest, or power is vested... to administer or exercise it for the benefit or to the use of another.' The parable of the steward turns on exactly this office: one entrusted with 'that which is another man's' must be faithful in it. The verse states the trustee's duty as Christ taught it. TUAS RES TIBI HABETO

[Deuteronomy 24:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. When a man hath taken a wife, and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found some uncleanness in her: then let him write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. TUAS RES TIBI HABETO ('have your things to yourself') was the Roman form of words effecting divorce. Its scriptural counterpart is the bill of divorcement: the written instrument by which the separation is legally accomplished. The verse shows the same legal act — divorce by formal instrument — in the older law. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. TYRANNY is 'arbitrary or despotic government; the severe and autocratic exercise of sovereign power.' The proverb states the people's lot under it: when the wicked bear rule, the people mourn. The verse is scripture's own political science of misrule. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ULTIMUM SUFPLICIUM

[Genesis 9:6, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God made he man. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. ULTIMUM SUPPLICIUM is 'the punishment of death.' Genesis 9:6 — spoken by God to Noah in the covenant (Genesis 9:1-8) — is the charter verse of capital punishment: the shedder's blood shed by man, grounded in the image of God in man. UNCEASESATH

[Romans 12:19, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 12:19, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UNCEASESATH, p. 1183; scan anchor: djvu line 197917 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. UNCEASESATH was a Saxon oath by which kin swore not to avenge a relation's death. The verse commands the same abstention ('avenge not yourselves') on the same ground the oath implicitly conceded: vengeance belongs to the Lord, not to kin. The divine clause ('Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord') is quoted deity speech embedded in the verse. UNIGENITURE

[John 3:16, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: John (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: John 3:16, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UNIGENITURE, p. 1185; scan anchor: djvu line 198298 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. UNIGENITURE is 'the state of being the only begotten.' John 3:16 is the locus classicus of the only-begotten Son — the verse in which the word's theological weight resides. (Speaker attribution for this verse is genuinely disputed between Christ and the evangelist, so the red-letter flag stays off per the when-in-doubt rule.) UNITAB PERSONARUM

[Genesis 2:24, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Genesis (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. UNITAS PERSONARUM is 'the unity of persons, as that between husband and wife.' Genesis 2:24 states that unity in its original form: husband and wife 'shall be one flesh' — the scriptural root of the legal fiction that husband and wife are one person. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UNNATURAL OFFENSE

[Romans 1:26, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For this cause God gave them up unto vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature: [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry names the offense a 'crime against nature.' The phrase 'against nature' is Paul's own in this verse, which is the scriptural root of the offense's legal name and of its historic criminalization. Stated as legal history, not moral commentary. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. UNTHRIFT is 'a prodigal; a spendthrift.' The prodigal son is the archetype: the younger son who 'wasted his substance with riotous living.' Christ's parable defines the character the legal word names. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UNWRITTEN LAW

[Romans 2:14-15, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves: Which shew the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing or else excusing one another; [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 2:14-15, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UNWRITTEN LAW, p. 1188; scan anchor: djvu line 198754 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. UNWRITTEN LAW is law observed and administered though never enacted — custom, precedent, principle. Romans 2:14-15 gives the archetype: those 'having not the law' are 'a law unto themselves,' the work of the law written in their hearts. The verse is the natural-law root of law-without-enactment, the same genus the entry describes. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

What. For I lift up my hand to heaven, and say, I live for ever. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. UPLIFTED HAND is the oath-gesture: the hand raised toward heaven instead of laid on the Gospels. The verse shows the gesture's archetype — God Himself lifting His hand to heaven to swear ('I live for ever'). The human oath-form copies the divine one. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Who. The cited biblical book: Psalm (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Psalm 15:5, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry USURARIUS, p. 1191; scan anchor: djvu line 199297 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. USURARIUS is 'a usurer.' Psalm 15's portrait of the man who shall abide sets the usurer's negative: he who does NOT put out his money to usury 'shall never be moved' — the verse draws the usurer's office by exclusion, marking what the lawful man refuses. When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. USURY is 'increase for the loan of money' / 'unlawful interest.' Exodus 22:25 is the foundational prohibition, naming both offices in one sentence: thou shalt not be 'as an usurer,' neither lay 'upon him usury.' The verse is the root from which the whole legal doctrine of usury grew. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UT HOSPITE8

[Deuteronomy 19:20, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And those which remain shall hear, and fear, and shall henceforth commit no more any such evil among you. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry carries the criminal-law maxim 'Ut poena ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat' (punishment reaches a few, fear affects all). Deuteronomy 19:20 states the same deterrence doctrine as Mosaic law: the punishment of the offender is ordered so that 'those which remain shall hear, and fear.' The reasoning rides with the verse. UTAS

[Leviticus 23:36, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Seven days ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: on the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a solemn assembly; and ye shall do no servile work therein. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leviticus 23:36, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UTAS, p. 1192; scan anchor: djvu line 199450 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. UTAS is the octave — the eighth day following a term or feast. Leviticus 23:36 institutes the same structure for the Feast of Tabernacles: seven days of the feast, then 'on the eighth day shall be an holy convocation' — an eighth-day observance tied to a feast. Borderline call: the entry is old English practice, the verse Mosaic law, but the eighth-day-after-a-feast form is the genuine link. (Red-letter borderline: the quoted words are instruction reported within God's speech to Moses, not first-person divine speech — flag left off per the doubt rule.) When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. UTERINE = born of the same mother. UTFANGTHEF

[Exodus 22:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If a man shall steal an ox, or a sheep, and kill it, or sell it; he shall restore five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. UTFANGTHEF is the lord's privilege to judge and punish a thief. Exodus 22:1 is the Mosaic theft-law itself: the thief's act, and the penal restitution that follows — the same legal concept (judgment upon the thief) in the scriptural bank. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UTLAGATUS

[Matthew 18:17, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The outlaw is 'put out of the protection of the law.' Christ's rule of exclusion puts the unrepentant outside the community's protection in the same form: 'let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican' — a genuine outlawry parallel, Christian communion standing where legal protection stood. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UTRUMQUE NOSTRUM

[Numbers 30:2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Numbers (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If a man vow a vow unto the LORD, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond; he shall not break his word, he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. 'Both of us' — words used formerly in bonds. Numbers 30:2 is the scriptural law of the bond: a man binds his soul 'with a bond' and 'shall not break his word' — the same obligatory instrument the entry's bond-words belong to. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UXOR

[Genesis 2:24, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Genesis (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Genesis 2:24, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UXOR, p. 1193; scan anchor: djvu line 199612 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. UXOR = a wife, 'a woman lawfully married.' Genesis 2:24 is the founding definition of the married wife — cleaving, one flesh — the same legal-moral category the civil law term names. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VACANCY

[Psalm 109:8, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Psalm (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Let his days be few; and let another take his office. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Psalm 109:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VACANCY, p. 1195; scan anchor: djvu line 199700 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VACANCY is the interruption of an office's incumbency. Psalm 109:8 names it exactly: the office falls empty ('let his days be few') and 'let another take his office' — vacancy and succession in one verse, quoted again in Acts 1:20 for Judas's vacant apostleship. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning —

the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VACATIO

[Numbers 8:25, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Numbers (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And from the age of fifty years they shall cease waiting upon the service thereof, and shall serve no more. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Numbers 8:25, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VACATIO, p. 1195; scan anchor: djvu line 199728 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VACATIO = exemption/dispensation from the burden of office. Numbers 8:25 gives the Levites the same release: at fifty they 'cease waiting upon the service... and shall serve no more' — discharge from the office's burden. Borderline: the entry is a general civil-law term, the verse a priestly rule, but the exemption-from-office concept is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VASES

[Proverbs 6:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. My son, if thou be surety for thy friend, if thou hast stricken thy hand with a stranger; [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 6:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VASES, p. 1195; scan anchor: djvu line 199772 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VASES = sureties; security for a defendant's appearance. Proverbs 6:1 is the scriptural treatment of suretyship — striking the hand as surety for another — the same office of standing security for another's obligation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VAPIAKE DUELLUM

[1 Samuel 17:9, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Samuel (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants: but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and serve us. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 1 Samuel 17:9, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VAPIAKE DUELLUM, p. 1195; scan anchor: djvu line 199777 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. To wage the duellum — trial by combat, pledges given for engaging. Goliath's challenge (1 Sam 17:9) is the archetypal judicial combat: the cause decided by single combat, the nations bound by the outcome — the same institution the entry defines. Borderline: narrative rather than law, but the legal form (champion combat deciding a cause) is exact. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

V AMMONIUM

[Proverbs 11:15, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it: and he that hateth suretiship is sure. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 11:15, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry V AMMONIUM, p. 1195; scan anchor: djvu line 199783 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VAMMONIUM = bail, security for appearance in court — a recognizance. Proverbs 11:15 weighs the surety's office itself: the surety 'shall smart for it' — the risk the bail stands in, stated as doctrine. Companion to VASES (Prov 6:1), different verse to avoid mere duplication. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VADIUM

[Exodus 22:26, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If thou at all take thy neighbour's raiment to pledge, thou shalt deliver it unto him by that the sun goeth down: [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VADIUM = a pledge, security by pledge of property. Exodus 22:26 is the Mosaic pledge-law: the taking of a pledge regulated, the pledgee's duty stated — the same legal concept in the scriptural bank. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VAGABOND

[Genesis 4:12, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. When thou tillest the ground, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength; a fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Genesis 4:12, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VAGABOND, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 199837 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines the vagabond — one who wanders with no certain dwelling. Genesis 4:12 uses the very word: Cain's sentence is to be 'a fugitive and a vagabond... in the earth.' The concept and the term meet. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VAGRANT

[2 Thessalonians 3:10, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 2 Thessalonians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2 Thessalonians 3:10, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VAGRANT, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 199857 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. VAGRANT in American law = an able-bodied person with no visible means of support who lives idly without seeking work. 2 Thessalonians 3:10 meets that exact figure — the one who 'would not work' — and states the rule against maintained idleness. Paul's command, not deity speech — no flag. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VALE

[Psalm 37:21, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Psalm (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again: but the righteous sheweth mercy, and giveth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Psalm 37:21, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VALE, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 199887 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VALE = a promissory note — a promise to pay. Psalm 37:21 states the moral law of the borrower: borrowing obliges repayment; the wicked borrows 'and payeth not again.' Borderline-thin, but the debt-and-repayment concept is the promissory note's substance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UTILIDAD

[Ecclesiastes 1:3, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Ecclesiastes (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Ecclesiastes 1:3, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UTILIDAD, p. 1193; scan anchor: djvu line 199526 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. UTILIDAD = the profit of a thing. Ecclesiastes 1:3 asks after profit in its root form — the yield of labour under the sun. Borderline: the entry is a Spanish-law gloss, the verse a philosophical question, but 'profit' is the shared, load-bearing concept. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VALOR BENEFICIORUM

[Leviticus 27:30, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD's: it is holy unto the LORD. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leviticus 27:30, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VALOR BENEFICIORUM, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 199935 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines the valor as the valuation by which 'first fruits and tenths' are collected from benefices. Leviticus 27:30 is the institution of the tenth itself: 'all the tithe of the land... is the LORD's' — the scriptural root of the tenths the valor rates. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By verbatim quotation — the note reproduces the cited verse word-for-word (KJV diff: exact)

VARA

[Leviticus 19:35, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in meteyard, in weight, or in measure. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leviticus 19:35, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VARA, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 200068 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VARA is a measure of length (33 inches). Leviticus 19:35 commands righteousness 'in meteyard' — the meteyard being precisely a measure of length — the scriptural law of just measure meeting the entry's legal measure. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VARDA

[Galatians 4:2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Galatians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But is under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the father. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Galatians 4:2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VARDA, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 200074 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VARDA = ward; custody; guardianship. Galatians 4:2 describes the heir in minority as 'under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the father' — guardianship during minority, the same office the entry names. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VAS

[Proverbs 17:18, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. A man void of understanding striketh hands, and becometh surety in the presence of his friend. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 17:18, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VAS, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 200100 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VAS = a surety; bail in a criminal or civil action. Proverbs 17:18 treats the surety's act itself — striking hands, becoming surety — the third distinct Proverbs surety verse for the third surety entry (VASES: Prov 6:1; V AMMONIUM: Prov 11:15), so the family is not padded by repetition. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VASSAL

[Matthew 6:24, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other: ye cannot serve God and mammon. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 6:24, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VASSAL, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 200110 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VASSAL = the feudal tenant bound by obligation of service to his lord. Christ states the law of that bond: service to a master is exclusive — 'no man can serve two masters.' Borderline: the verse is theological in its use, but the service-to-a-lord bond is the genuine point of contact. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VAUDERIE

[Exodus 22:18, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VAUDERIE = sorcery, witchcraft, in old European law — a legal offense. Exodus 22:18 is the Mosaic statute against the same offense, in the same imperative legal form. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VEGTIGAL JUDIOIARXUM

[Romans 13:7, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Fines paid to the crown to defray the expenses of maintaining courts — tribute in its fiscal form. Romans 13:7 states the dues of the sovereign: 'tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom' — the scriptural doctrine of the same exaction. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VECTIGALIA

[Matthew 22:21, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VECTIGALIA = customs-duties, taxes on importation/exportation. Christ's answer on the tribute question is the founding statement of lawful tribute to the sovereign — the customs-duty's own doctrine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VENAL

[Micah 3:11, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Micah (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. The heads thereof judge for reward, and the priests thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof divine for money: yet will they lean upon the LORD, and say, Is not the LORD among us? none evil can come upon us. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Micah 3:11, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VENAL, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 200245 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VENAL in the evil sense = capable of being bought; mercenary; corrupt purchase. Micah 3:11 names venality in its three offices — judges judging 'for reward,' priests teaching 'for hire,' prophets divining 'for money' — corruption by purchase, exactly the entry's sense. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VENATIO

[Genesis 10:9, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Genesis (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. He was a mighty hunter before the LORD: wherefore it is said, Even as Nimrod the mighty hunter before the LORD. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Genesis 10:9, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VENATIO, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 200254 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VENATIO = hunting. Genesis 10:9 names the archetypal hunter of scripture — Nimrod, 'the mighty hunter before the LORD.' Borderline-thin (a one-word gloss), but the hunting office is the genuine point of contact. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VEND

[Leviticus 25:14, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour, or buyest ought of thy neighbour's hand, ye shall not oppress one another: [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VEND = to sell, to transfer ownership for a price in money. Leviticus 25:14 is the Mosaic law of sale itself — selling to one's neighbour, with the equity rule against oppression — the sale's own scripture. VENDEE

[Proverbs 20:14, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer: but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 20:14, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VENDEE, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 200262 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VENDEE = the purchaser, the buyer. Proverbs 20:14 is the scriptural portrait of the buyer at his bargaining — 'it is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer' — the vendee's own verse. Companion to VEND (Lev 25:14); the other ten sale entries left bare to avoid flooding the cluster. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VENIA

[Isaiah 55:7, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Isaiah (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VENIA = pardon (and the penitent's prostration). Isaiah 55:7 states the doctrine of pardon: return to the LORD, 'for he will abundantly pardon' — the same pardon the entry names. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VENIA 2ETATI8

[Ecclesiastes 8:11, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Ecclesiastes (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry carries the maxim 'facility of pardon is an incentive to crime.' Ecclesiastes 8:11 states the same doctrine in scripture's own words: where sentence is not executed speedily, 'the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil' — leniency as the incentive to crime. VENIRE FACIAS

[Deuteronomy 19:15, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. One witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin, in any sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The venire facias summons twelve lawful men 'by whom the truth of the matter may be the better known.' Deuteronomy 19:15 is the scriptural law of proof itself: the matter is established by the mouth of witnesses — the same truth-finding office the jury writ serves. VENIT ET DEFENDIT

[Isaiah 1:18, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. 'Comes and defends' — the words of appearance and defense in an action. Isaiah 1:18 is the divine summons to the same act: the accused is called to come and reason together — to answer and defend — before the LORD. Borderline: heavenly court, earthly plea; but the appearance-to-answer form is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VENUE

[Deuteronomy 16:18, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribes: and they shall judge the people with just judgment. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VENUE is the neighborhood/county in which the cause is tried and which furnishes the jurors. Deuteronomy 16:18 ordains the same local-justice principle: judges and officers 'in all thy gates, throughout thy tribes,' judging the people where they dwell — trial in the locality.  All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. The entry carries the maxim 'words are to be received with effect, so that they may produce effect.' Isaiah 55:11 states it as divine doctrine: the word 'shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please' — words bearing effect, in God's own mouth. VERBAL

[Matthew 5:37, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 5:37, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VERBAL, p. 1201; scan anchor: djvu line 200777 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VERBAL = parol, by word of mouth — the spoken undertaking. Christ's rule binds the spoken word itself: 'let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay' — the mouth's yes and no as the binding form. Borderline-thin (the entry is a gloss), but the binding spoken word is the genuine point of contact. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VERDICT

[Zechariah 8:16, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Zechariah (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. These are the things that ye shall do; Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour; execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates: [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry's own maxim: 'veredictum, quasi dictum veritatis' — the verdict is the dictum of truth. Zechariah 8:16 commands the substance: 'execute the judgment of truth' — judgment rendered as truth. VEREDICTUM left bare to avoid doubling the family. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VERGELT

[Exodus 21:22, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If men strive, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart from her, and yet no mischief follow: he shall be surely punished, according as the woman's husband will lay upon him; and he shall pay as the judges determine. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VERGELT = a mulct or fine for a crime. Exodus 21:22 shows the fine in operation: the offender 'shall pay as the judges determine' — a penal sum assessed by authority for wrongdoing, the mulct's own form. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VERGERS AD XHOPIAM

[Proverbs 6:10-11, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep: So shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth, and thy want as an armed man. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 6:10-11, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VERGERS AD XHOPIAM, p. 1202; scan anchor: djvu line 200951 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. 'Verging towards poverty; in declining circumstances.' Proverbs 6:10-11 describes poverty's approach in the same terms — poverty coming 'as one that travelleth' upon the sluggard. Borderline: the entry is a Scots-law status phrase, the verse a moral warning; the approach-of-poverty is the shared figure. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. VERIFICATION = the examination of a writing 'for the purpose of ascertaining its truth.' 1 Thessalonians 5:21 states the principle: 'prove all things' — test, verify, then hold fast. Borderline: general principle, specific pleading form; the ascertaining-of-truth is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. VERITY = truth; truthfulness; conformity to fact. Psalm 15:2 names the truthful man — he 'speaketh the truth in his heart' — truthfulness as the quality the entry defines. Borderline-thin; kept for the exact 'truthfulness' match. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. VERNA = a slave born in his master's house. Genesis 14:14 names them in the same terms: Abram's 'trained servants, born in his own house' — the house-born servant, the verna's own description. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VERSARI

[Luke 16:1-2, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. And he said also unto his disciples, There was a certain rich man, which had a steward; and the same was accused unto him that he had wasted his goods: And he called him, and said unto him, How is it that I hear this of thee? give an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. 'Versari male in tutela' = to misconduct oneself in a guardianship — a trust office abused. The parable's steward 'had wasted his goods' and must 'give an account of thy stewardship' — mismanagement of an entrusted office called to account. Borderline: parable, not law; but the abused-trust form is exact. Spoken by Christ in the parable — deity speech in the red-letter sense. When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. VESTURE OF LAND = all things growing on the land's surface — the land's yield, its profit. Psalm 85:12: 'our land shall yield her increase' — the land's increase as its vesture. The other three VESTURA entries left bare to avoid quadrupling. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The action 'of goods taken away by force' — the remedy for violent taking, robbery. The LORD speaks the doctrine: 'I hate robbery' — divine hatred of the very wrong the action redresses. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VIABILITY

[Genesis 2:7, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Genesis (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And the LORD God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VIABILITY = the power of continuing independent existence — capability of living. Genesis 2:7 is the archetypal animation: the breath of life breathed in, and man 'became a living soul.' Borderline: the entry is medical-legal (the newborn), the verse cosmogonic; the commencement-of-independent-life is the shared concept. VIABLE left bare (one per family). When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. VICAR = one who performs the functions of another; a substitute. Isaiah 53:5 is the vicarious act itself — wounded 'for our transgressions,' the chastisement of our peace upon him — substitution standing where another stood. Borderline: theological register, legal term; the substitute-for-another is the genuine root shared by both. When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. VICE in the civil law = redhibitory vices, faults in the thing sold giving the right to return it. Leviticus 22:20 states the blemish rule: 'whatsoever hath a blemish... shall not be acceptable' — the defect that defeats acceptance, the same doctrine in the sacrificial law. VICEROY

[Genesis 41:40-41, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Genesis (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou. And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VICEROY = one clothed with authority to act in place of the king. Genesis 41:40-41 is the viceroy's commission in scripture's own words: Joseph set 'over all the land of Egypt,' all ruled by his word, 'only in the throne' the king greater — authority in the king's place, exactly the entry. Why. VICTUALLER = the keeper of a house of entertainment for the public. The parable's 'host' receives the wounded traveller at the inn and is charged with his care — the innkeeper's office in the same form. Borderline-thin (parable furniture), but the keeper-of-the-house is the genuine point of contact. Spoken by Christ — deity speech in the red-letter sense. VICTUS

[Matthew 6:11, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Give us this day our daily bread. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 6:11, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VICTUS, p. 1206; scan anchor: djvu line 201621 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VICTUS = sustenance; support; the means of living. The petition for 'our daily bread' is the prayer for victus itself — the means of living asked day by day. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VIDUA REGIS

[Exodus 22:22, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Ye shall not afflict any widow, or fatherless child. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The king's widow — the widow as a legal person with dower rights and the king for patron. Exodus 22:22 states the widow's protected status in Mosaic law: 'ye shall not afflict any widow' — widowhood as a guarded legal condition. Borderline: the entry is the feudal king's-widow specifically; the verse the general law. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VTDUITATIS PROFESSIO

[Numbers 30:9, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Numbers (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand against her. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Numbers 30:9, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VTDUITATIS PROFESSIO, p. 1207; scan anchor: djvu line 201697 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The solemn profession to live a sole and chaste woman — a widow's vow binding her soul. Numbers 30:9 is the law of exactly that: 'every vow of a widow... wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand' — the widow's binding vow, the entry's profession in legal form. VIEWERS

[Numbers 13:2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Numbers (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Send thou men, that they may search the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel: of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man, every one a ruler among them. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Numbers 13:2, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VIEWERS, p. 1207; scan anchor: djvu line 201755 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VIEWERS = persons appointed to examine a locality and report to the court. The twelve sent to 'search the land of Canaan' are the archetypal viewers — appointed, sent to view, returning with their report — the same office. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. VIF-GAGE = the living pledge, a form of vadium. Deuteronomy 24:6 is the Mosaic pledge-law: the taking of a pledge bounded by mercy — 'he taketh a man's life to pledge' — the pledge's own scripture. Companion to VADIUM (Ex 22:26), distinct verse for the pledge family. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VIGIL

[Exodus 12:42, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. It is a night to be much observed unto the LORD for bringing them out from the land of Egypt: this is that night of the LORD to be observed of all the children of Israel in their generations. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 12:42, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VIGIL, p. 1207; scan anchor: djvu line 201773 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VIGIL = the eve before a solemn feast. Exodus 12:42 names the archetypal vigil-night: the Passover night 'to be much observed unto the LORD' — the solemn night-watch before the feast of deliverance. Borderline: the entry is ecclesiastical calendar, the verse the Passover night; the eve-of-feast observance is the shared form. VIGILANCE

[Proverbs 10:4, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. He becometh poor that dealeth with a slack hand: but the hand of the diligent maketh rich. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VIGILANCE = watchfulness, diligence in pursuing one's rights — the opposite of laches; 'the laws aid the vigilant.' Proverbs 10:4 states the diligence doctrine: 'the hand of the diligent maketh rich' — vigilance rewarded, slackness punished. Borderline: moral register, legal maxim; diligence-in-one's-affairs is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VILLENOU8 JUDGMENT

[Deuteronomy 19:19, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Then shall ye do unto him, as he had thought to have done unto his brother: so shalt thou put the evil away from among you. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The villenous judgment fell upon attainted (perjured) jurors — forfeiture, wasting of lands, prison. Deuteronomy 19:19 is the false-witness law: the corrupt witness suffers what he plotted against his brother — the same retributive judgment on corrupted testimony. Borderline: the entry is the obsolete English form; the verse the Mosaic root. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REDUCENDIS

[Deuteronomy 23:15-16, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Thou shalt not deliver unto his master the servant which is escaped from his master unto thee: He shall dwell with thee, even among you, in that place which he shall choose in one of thy gates, where it liketh him best: thou shalt not oppress him. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The writ lay to bring back the king's bondmen carried from his manors — the law of the returned fugitive. Deuteronomy 23:15-16 states the direct scriptural counterpart, and it runs the other way: 'thou shalt not deliver unto his master the servant which is escaped' — the contrast itself is the genuine illumination, showing where the Mosaic law refused the writ's doctrine. VILLEIN

[Leviticus 25:39, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Leviticus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. And if thy brother that dwelleth by thee be waxen poor, and be sold unto thee; thou shalt not compel him to serve as a bondservant: [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VILLEIN = one substantially in the condition of a slave, performing servile work for the lord. Leviticus 25:39 governs the bondservant's condition — service without compulsion to servitude — the servile state in Mosaic law. VILLENAGE and VILLANUM SERVITIUM left bare (one per family). VINCULUM JURIS

[Romans 13:8, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 13:8, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VINCULUM JURIS, p. 1208; scan anchor: djvu line 201950 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The obligation defined as 'a bond of law, whereby one party becomes bound to another.' Romans 13:8 states the bound-ness itself: 'owe no man any thing' — the debt-bond discharged, love the remaining bond. Borderline-thin: abstract definition, moral verse; the being-bound-to-another is the genuine point of contact. VINDICATORY FARTS OF LAWS

[Romans 6:23, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The vindicatory part of laws = the sanction, 'what evil or penalty shall be incurred' by transgressors. Romans 6:23 states the ultimate sanction: 'the wages of sin is death' — the penalty incurred, in the vindicatory form itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VINDXCTA

[Exodus 21:2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Exodus (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If thou buy an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The vindicta was one of the three ancient modes of manumission — the freeing act. Exodus 21:2 is the Mosaic manumission law: in the seventh year 'he shall go out free' — liberation from servitude by law, the same freeing the rod effected. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. VIOL = rape, in French law. Deuteronomy 22:25 is the Mosaic rape-law: the man who forces the damsel — 'the man only that lay with her shall die' — the offense and its capital penalty stated as statute. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VIOLATION

[1 John 3:4, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 John (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VIOLATION = breach of right, duty, or law. 1 John 3:4 defines it in the same form: 'sin is the transgression of the law' — violation as the crossing of law. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. An offense against the law of nations — the breach of pledged safety. Elisha's dealing with the blinded Syrian raiders is the scriptural instance of safe conduct honoured: fed, and 'sent them away' to their master unharmed. Borderline: narrative, not doctrine; but the honoured safe-conduct is the genuine point of contact. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

What. And said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh? Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry's maxim: 'vir et uxor censentur in lege una persona' — husband and wife are one person in law. Christ states the root: 'they twain shall be one flesh... they are no more twain, but one flesh' — the legal unity grounded in the one-flesh doctrine. What. And Joseph said, Give your cattle; and I will give you for your cattle, if money fail. And they brought their cattle unto Joseph: and Joseph gave them bread in exchange for horses, and for the flocks, and for the cattle of the herds, and for the asses: and he fed them with bread for all their cattle for that year. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Cattle 'received during the Saxon period as money upon most occasions.' Genesis 47:16-17 shows cattle serving as money in the famine: 'give your cattle... if money fail' — bread given 'in exchange' for the herds. Borderline: Egyptian famine administration, Saxon custom; but cattle-as-currency is the exact point. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. VOLENS = willing; he is willing who expressly consents. The entry's maxim is 'volenti non fit injuria' — consent negates injury. Philemon 1:14 guards the same line: the benefit must be 'willingly,' not 'of necessity' — willingness as the condition that makes the act the man's own. Borderline: epistolary courtesy, legal maxim; the willing-vs-compelled distinction is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The 'voluntary madman' — the drunkard who voluntarily contracted madness by intoxication. Ephesians 5:18 addresses the voluntary act itself: 'be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess' — the chosen intoxication the entry makes culpable. Borderline: prohibition, not the legal characterization; the voluntary drunkenness is the shared subject. When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. VOLUNTARY = free; without compulsion. 2 Corinthians 9:7 defines the voluntary act: purposed in the heart, 'not grudgingly, or of necessity' — freedom from compulsion as the mark of the voluntary. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VOLUNTAS

[Hebrews 9:16-17, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Hebrews (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Hebrews 9:16-17, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VOLUNTAS, p. 1213; scan anchor: djvu line 202637 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. VOLUNTAS in old English law = the last will and testament. Hebrews 9:16-17 states the testament's legal nature: it is 'of force after men are dead' — the will taking effect at death, exactly the entry's sense. When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. VOLUNTEER = one who gives his services without promise of remuneration. Christ's charge is the volunteer rule: 'freely ye have received, freely give' — service rendered without charge. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VOTUM

[Ecclesiastes 5:4-5, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Ecclesiastes (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it; for he hath no pleasure in fools: pay that which thou hast vowed. Better is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. VOTUM = a vow or promise. Ecclesiastes 5:4-5 is the law of the vow: 'defer not to pay it... pay that which thou hast vowed' — the vow's binding force stated as doctrine. Companion to UTRUMQUE NOSTRUM (Num 30:2), distinct verse. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WADSET

[Deuteronomy 24:10-11, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. When thou dost lend thy brother any thing, thou shalt not go into his house to fetch his pledge. Thou shalt stand abroad, and the man to whom thou dost lend shall bring out the pledge abroad unto thee. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. WADSET = the Scotch mortgage — lands impignorated in security of debt. Deuteronomy 24:10-11 is the Mosaic law of the pledge's taking: the creditor's restraint, the debtor's delivery — the pledge-security's own procedure. Third pledge-family verse (VADIUM: Ex 22:26; VIF-GAGE: Deut 24:6). WADSETTER left bare. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. A wager is a contract turning on an uncertain event. Proverbs 16:33 names the uncertain event's disposal: 'the lot is cast into the lap; but the whole disposing thereof is of the LORD.' Borderline: the verse governs lots, not wagers; the uncertain-outcome principle is the shared ground. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. WAGES = the compensation agreed to be paid for work. Christ states the wage-doctrine: 'the labourer is worthy of his hire' — the hire owed for the labour, in His own words. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WAIF

[Deuteronomy 22:1-2, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Thou shalt not see thy brother's ox or his sheep go astray, and hide thyself from them: thou shalt in any case bring them again unto thy brother. And if thy brother be not nigh unto thee, or if thou know him not, then thou shalt bring it unto thine own house, and it shall be with thee until thy brother seek after it, and thou shalt restore it to him again. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. WAIF = goods found but claimed by nobody. Deuteronomy 22:1-2 is the law of found goods: what is found and lost must be kept 'until thy brother seek after it' and restored — the waif's own legal treatment. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WAIVER

[1 Corinthians 9:12, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Corinthians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? Nevertheless we have not used this power; but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 1 Corinthians 9:12, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WAIVER, p. 1216; scan anchor: djvu line 203154 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. WAIVER = the renunciation of a right. Paul's non-use of his apostolic right to maintenance — 'we have not used this power' — is the waiver in act: a right held, and deliberately surrendered. Borderline: epistolary practice, legal doctrine; the surrender-of-a-right is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WAKENING

[Ephesians 5:14, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Ephesians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. WAKENING = the revival of an action that 'fell asleep.' Ephesians 5:14 commands the same figure: 'awake thou that sleepest, and arise' — the sleeper wakened. Borderline: spiritual register, procedural term; the sleep-to-waking form is exact. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. WAR = armed contest between nations. Christ names wars as the standing condition of the age: 'ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars' — war as the nations' own work. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By verbatim quotation — the note reproduces the cited verse word-for-word (KJV diff: exact) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

Why. WARECTARE = to fallow ground; to plow up land to let it lie fallow. Hosea 10:12 commands the same husbandry: 'break up your fallow ground' — the fallow ground of the entry, in the prophet's mouth. Borderline: moral use of the husbandry figure; the fallow ground itself is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WARRANDICE

[2 Corinthians 1:22, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 2 Corinthians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. WARRANDICE = the warranty clause by which the grantor obliges himself that the right conveyed shall be effectual — the assurance of the grant. 2 Corinthians 1:22 names the divine earnest: 'the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts' — the pledge making the promise sure. Borderline: theological register, conveyancing term; the assurance-of-the-grant is the genuine point of contact. The warranty family annotated once (WARRANTEE, WARRANTOR, WARRANTY bare). When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. WASTORS = a kind of thieves. Christ defines the thief's office: he 'cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy' — the thief as stealer, the entry's kind. Borderline: the verse is pastoral-theological; the thief's definition is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. 'Watch' denotes keeping guard during the night; 'ward,' by day. Ezekiel 3:17 is the watchman's commission: 'I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel' — the keeping of watch as a charged office. WATCHMAN left bare (one per family). When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. The way-going crop = the tenant's right to the crop he sowed though it ripen after his lease. Galatians 6:7 states the root doctrine: 'whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap' — the sower's right in his sowing. Borderline: moral register, tenancy custom; the sower-reaps principle is the genuine ground. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. WED = a covenant or agreement. Genesis 9:13 institutes a covenant with its token: 'it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth' — the covenant-form the Saxon term names. Borderline: divine covenant, human agreement; the covenant itself is the shared legal form. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. WEEK = a period of seven consecutive days. Genesis 2:2 grounds the seven-day week: God 'ended his work' and 'rested on the seventh day' — the week of seven days in the creation account itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. The entry's 'weight of evidence' = the balance or preponderance of evidence. Daniel 5:27 uses the same balance figure for judgment: 'thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting' — weighing as the deciding. Borderline: prophetic judgment, evidential metaphor; the balances are the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. A robber 'who might be ransomed' — the ransomable offender. Exodus 21:30 states the ransom principle: 'he shall give for the ransom of his life whatsoever is laid upon him' — life ransomed by a sum laid. Borderline: the verse concerns the goring ox's owner; the ransom-of-life is the shared legal form. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. WERGELT = the price of homicide paid to the kin — satisfaction for a life taken. Numbers 35:31 states the Mosaic refusal of that price: 'ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murderer' — the contrast is the illumination, showing where the Mosaic law rejected the wergild's doctrine. Borderline by design: contrast, not parallel. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. WERP-GELD = contribution for jettison; average — the maritime sharing of loss when goods are cast overboard. Jonah 1:5 shows the jettison itself: the mariners 'cast forth the wares that were in the ship into the sea, to lighten it' — the general-average situation in scripture's own narrative. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation of the verse's operative span (KJV diff: partial) [basis: Phase 2 KJV mechanical diff, class per insert]

WESTMINSTER CONFESSION

[Romans 10:9, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Romans (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Romans 10:9, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WESTMINSTER CONFESSION, p. 1225; scan anchor: djvu line 204728 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. A confession = a statement of religious doctrine. Romans 10:9 states the confession's own form: 'if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus' — the confessing of doctrine with the mouth.

WHALE

[Jonah 1:17, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Jonah (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Now the LORD had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah. And Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. WHALE = a royal fish. Jonah 1:17 names the great fish of scripture — 'the LORD had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah' — the whale's own narrative. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WHIFFING

[Deuteronomy 25:3, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed: lest, if he should exceed, and beat him above these with many stripes, then thy brother should seem vile unto thee. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. WHIFFING = punishment by the infliction of stripes. Deuteronomy 25:3 is the Mosaic stripes-law: 'forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed' — the beating bounded by law. WHIFFENG-POST left bare (one per family). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WHORE

[Proverbs 6:26, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For by means of a whorish woman a man is brought to a piece of bread: and the adulteress will hunt for the precious life. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 6:26, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WHORE, p. 1227; scan anchor: djvu line 204987 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. WHORE = a woman who practices unlawful commerce with men, particularly for hire. Proverbs 6:26 names her: 'by means of a whorish woman a man is brought to a piece of bread' — the hireling commerce and its ruin. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WIFA

[Deuteronomy 19:14, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark, which they of old time have set in thine inheritance, which thou shalt inherit in the land that the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Deuteronomy 19:14, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WIFA, p. 1227; scan anchor: djvu line 205041 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. WIFA = a mark set up on land to denote exclusive occupation, or to prohibit entry. Deuteronomy 19:14 is the landmark law: the neighbour's 'landmark, which they of old time have set' — the boundary mark not to be moved, the wifa's own office. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WIFE’S EQUITY

[1 Timothy 5:8, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Timothy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The wife's equity = her right to a suitable provision out of her estate for herself and her children. 1 Timothy 5:8 states the provision duty: 'if any provide not for his own... he hath denied the faith' — provision for one's own house as the binding obligation. Borderline: pastoral charge, equitable doctrine; the provision-for-one's-own is the genuine root. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WHLA

[1 Corinthians 7:22, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: 1 Corinthians (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman: likewise also he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 1 Corinthians 7:22, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WHLA, p. 1228; scan anchor: djvu line 205170 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. WHLA in Hindu law = the relation between a master or patron and his freedman. 1 Corinthians 7:22 names the freedman: 'he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman' — the freedman's own verse. Borderline: different legal system, same status; the freedman relation is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WINDING UP

[Matthew 25:19, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Matthew 25:19, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WINDING UP, p. 1228; scan anchor: djvu line 205234 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. WINDING UP = the settling of accounts and liquidating of assets for distribution and dissolution. The parable's reckoning — 'the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them' — is the settling of accounts itself. Borderline: the parable's talents, the company's assets; the reckoning-and-distribution is the shared form. WINDING-UP ACTS left bare. When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. WIT AN = wise men; the king's advisers; members of the king's council. Proverbs 11:14 states the counsel doctrine: 'in the multitude of counsellors there is safety' — the king's council as the ground of safety. WITENAGEMOTE and WITENS left bare (one per family). When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. WITHERNAM = a taking by way of reprisal; reciprocal distress in lieu of a previous one eloigned. The lex talionis — 'eye for eye, tooth for tooth' — is the root principle of reciprocal taking. Borderline: general principle, specific writ; the like-for-like reprisal is the genuine ground. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. WOMEN = all the females of the human species. Genesis 1:27 names their creation: 'male and female created he them' — the female of the species in the creation account itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WORKING DAYS

[Exodus 20:9-10, KJV]

Who. God — the verse is classed deity-verbatim in the edition's merge (red-letter) [basis: phase-data deity_verbatim flag]

What. Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work: But the seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Exodus 20:9-10, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WORKING DAYS, p. 1231; scan anchor: djvu line 205679 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. WORKING DAYS excludes Sundays (and holidays) from computation. The Sabbath commandment grounds the distinction: 'six days shalt thou labour' — the working days — 'but the seventh day is the sabbath... in it thou shalt not do any work' — the non-working day. The legal computation's own root. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. WORSHIP = the act of offering honor and adoration to the Divine Being. Christ defines it: worship 'in spirit and in truth' — the act's own doctrine, in His own words. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WORTHIEST OF BLOOD

[Deuteronomy 21:17, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Deuteronomy (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. But he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the firstborn, by giving him a double portion of all that he hath: for he is the beginning of his strength; the right of the firstborn is his. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The preference given to males in descent. Deuteronomy 21:17 states the firstborn's right: 'the right of the firstborn is his' — the double portion, the male-preference in inheritance in Mosaic law. Borderline: the entry is the common-law canons of descent; the verse the Mosaic firstborn law; the male-preference in inheritance is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. WRITING = the giving of outward and objective form to a contract, will, etc., by letters or marks. The tables of testimony — 'written with the finger of God' — are writing in its highest form: the law given outward, objective shape. The entry's maxim ('the spoken word flies; the written letter remains') is the same doctrine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. WRONG = an injury; a tort; a violation of right or of law. Colossians 3:25 states the wrong's recompense: 'he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done' — the wrong answered without respect of persons. WRONG-DOER and WRONGOUS left bare (one per family). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Why. XENODOCHTUM = an inn for the entertainment of strangers; a hospital for the sick. Hebrews 13:2 commands the xenodochy's own work: 'be not forgetful to entertain strangers' — hospitality as the institution. XENODOCHY left bare (one per family). What. And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years: [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Genesis 1:14, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry YEAR, p. 1236; scan anchor: djvu line 206509 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. YEAR = the period of the earth's revolution, the measured year. Genesis 1:14 ordains the lights 'for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years' — the year as a measured period, in God's own appointing. Borderline call on the flag: 'And God said' in Genesis 1 is divine speech in the same sense as the Decalogue's, so deity_verbatim stands, but noted here as the call. When. OPEN — the citation carries no date, and dating the text is outside the insert's evidence

Why. YOUTH = children and youth of both sexes, as a life-stage. Ecclesiastes 12:1 names 'the days of thy youth' — youth as the defined season of life. What. Matthew and Thomas, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon called Zelotes, [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Luke 6:15, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ZEALOT, p. 1238; scan anchor: djvu line 206700 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. ZEALOT in the bad sense = a fanatic, a separatist. Luke 6:15 names 'Simon called Zelotes' among the twelve — the Zealot of scripture, the term's own bearer. Borderline: the entry's bad sense vs the apostle's title; the term itself is the genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ZEALOUS WITNESS

[Exodus 20:16, KJV]

What. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. A witness manifesting partiality, eager to advantage the side calling him. The ninth commandment guards the testimony itself: 'thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour' — the witness's truth as the law. Borderline: partiality is not always falsehood, but the guarded testimony is the genuine root. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ZYGOSTATES

[Job 31:6, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Job (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Let me be weighed in an even balance, that God may know mine integrity. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. ZYGOSTATES = the weigher; the officer who holds the balance in weighing money between buyer and seller. Job 31:6 invokes the same office: 'let me be weighed in an even balance' — the just balance as the test. Borderline: the entry's commercial officer, Job's moral weighing; the even balance is the shared instrument. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ZYTHUM

[Proverbs 20:1, KJV]

Who. The cited biblical book: Proverbs (KJV) [basis: citation — the insert names no individual speaker, so the voice is recorded at the book level the citation supports]

What. Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverbs 20:1, KJV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ZYTHUM, p. 1238; scan anchor: djvu line 206756 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. ZYTHUM = a liquor made of wheat or barley — the strong drink. Proverbs 20:1 names it: 'strong drink is raging' — the barley liquor's own verse. Borderline: the entry is definitional, the verse a warning; the strong drink is the genuine subject. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ABBEY

[Eco, The Name of the Rose, 1980]

Who. Eco [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Humanity (paraphrase): Eco's novel unfolds entirely inside a medieval abbey ruled by an abbot — the entry's 'society of religious persons' as a living stage, with its library, offices, and hierarchy driving the plot. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Eco, The Name of the Rose, 1980. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ABBEY, p. 8; scan anchor: djvu line 1348 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1980 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine illumination: the novel's entire world IS an abbey, so the definition's 'society of religious persons' is enacted rather than merely mentioned. No verbatim quote risked — paraphrase clearly marked. Year 1980 (Italian original). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ABBOT

[Eco, The Name of the Rose, 1980]

Who. Eco [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Humanity (paraphrase): the Abbot of the novel's monastery embodies the entry — the 'spiritual superior or governor' of the abbey, exercising authority over its monks and its fate. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Eco, The Name of the Rose, 1980. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ABBOT, p. 8; scan anchor: djvu line 1352 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1980 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine illumination: the Abbot of Melk in Eco's novel personifies the entry's 'spiritual superior or governor of an abbey.' Same novel/year as ABBEY; paraphrase clearly marked, no verbatim quote risked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ABETTOR

[Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Humanity (paraphrase): Fagin commands, trains, and profits from the Artful Dodger's and the boys' thefts without committing them himself — the literary abettor: command, advice, and instigation rather than the act. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the abettor as 'an instigator... one who promotes or procures a crime to be committed' by 'commands, advises, instigates.' Fagin's relation to the boys is exactly this mechanism, illuminating the definition's mechanics. Paraphrase clearly marked; no verbatim quote risked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ACCESSARY

[Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Humanity (paraphrase): Fagin aids the thefts by command and instigation though absent from the scene — the accessary who is 'not as a chief actor, but as a participator.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Where. Cited source: Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ACCESSARY, p. 13; scan anchor: djvu line 2615 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the accessary as one guilty 'not as a chief actor, but as a participator, as by command, advice, instigation, or concealment.' Fagin embodies precisely this role — command/advice/instigation from offstage. Same novel as ABETTOR with the distinct mechanism noted. Paraphrase clearly marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ADOPTION

[Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Humanity (paraphrase): Mr. Brownlow takes Oliver into his own family, treating him as his own child — the entry's juridical act of 'paternity and filiation' between persons not so related by blood. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines adoption as taking 'another's child into his own family, treating him as his own, and giving him all the rights and duties of his own child.' Brownlow's taking-in of Oliver dramatizes the full definition. Paraphrase clearly marked; no verbatim quote risked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ACCUSES

[Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Humanity (paraphrase): Atticus Finch defends Tom Robinson, the accused man, before the court — the novel dramatizes the entry's role: the person 'against whom an accusation is made' standing trial. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine illumination: the trial that structures the novel shows the accused as the entry defines him — the generic defendant in a criminal case, with counsel pleading the evidence to the court. Paraphrase clearly marked; no verbatim quote risked. Headword key follows the chunk exactly: the OCR text renders this entry as ACCUSES (body: "Accused is the generic name for the defendant in a criminal case"). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ABSTIMATIO CAPITIS

[Anon., Beowulf, c. 1000]

Who. Anon. [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Humanity (paraphrase): Hrothgar tells Beowulf he once settled Ecgtheow's feud by paying weregild to the Wulfings — the poem itself prices a man's life. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. The entry defines the aestimatio/weregild as 'the price or value of a man.' Beowulf's weregild episode dramatizes the exact legal mechanism (a set pecuniary price for a slain man, paid to end a feud), illuminating the definition rather than merely depicting violence. Year given as c. 1000 (manuscript date, approximate); no verbatim quote risked — paraphrase clearly marked. Headword key follows the chunk exactly: the OCR text renders the entry as ABSTIMATIO (for aestimatio) CAPITIS. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

AGNOMEN

[Shakespeare, Coriolanus, c. 1608]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Shakespeare's Coriolanus is built on an agnomen: the Roman general Caius Martius earns the added name "Coriolanus" for taking the town of Corioli (paraphrase) — a name gotten by some action, exactly as the entry instances Scipio Africanus from his African victories. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Coriolanus, c. 1608. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry AGNOMEN, p. 52; scan anchor: djvu line 9198 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The play's very title is an agnomen earned by the deed; it is the textbook literary instance of the entry's rule, so the link is genuine rather than decorative. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ALE-HOUSE

[Shakespeare, Henry IV, Parts 1-2, 1597-98]

What. Shakespeare sets much of Henry IV, Parts 1 and 2 in the Boar's Head Tavern — an ale-house in the entry's exact sense, a place where ale is sold to be drunk on the premises, and Falstaff's haunt (paraphrase). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Henry IV, Parts 1-2, 1597-98. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ALE-HOUSE, p. 56; scan anchor: djvu line 9793 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The Boar's Head is the canonical ale-house of English literature and matches the entry's definition word for word; it illuminates what the term meant in lived practice. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ALEA

Who. Maxim: Alea iacta est (Suetonius [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Maxim: "Alea iacta est" — "the die is cast," the words Suetonius gives Julius Caesar on crossing the Rubicon — chance itself, staked on a single throw. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Alea iacta est (Suetonius, Life of Julius Caesar). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ALEA, p. 56; scan anchor: djvu line 9805 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The saying springs from the entry's own Latin root and is the classical archetype of 'the chance of gain or loss' the entry defines; it illuminates rather than decorates. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ALEATOR

[Dostoevsky, The Gambler, 1867]

Who. Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Dostoevsky's novel The Gambler follows Alexei Ivanovich, a man consumed by games of hazard (paraphrase) — the entry's "one who plays at games of hazard" as a full character study. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The novel's title and plot are the legal term embodied in fiction; it shows what the bare definition looks like as a human life, which is the well's job. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ALIBI

[Jonathan Lynn, My Cousin Vinny, 1992]

Who. Jonathan Lynn [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The courtroom climax of My Cousin Vinny turns on the defense proving the two defendants were elsewhere when the crime occurred — the alibi as the whole defense, won by dismantling the prosecution's timeline (paraphrase). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jonathan Lynn, My Cousin Vinny, 1992. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ALIBI, p. 57; scan anchor: djvu line 9917 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The film's decisive sequence is literally 'evidence that the accused was in another place at the time' (the entry's definition); it shows the defense working in practice. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

AMBIGUITY

[Lewis Carroll, Through the Looking-Glass, 1871]

Who. Lewis Carroll [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "It means just what I choose it to mean — neither more nor less." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Humpty Dumpty's doctrine is the literary archetype of the entry's 'indistinctness or uncertainty of meaning of an expression'; one line, verbatim-certain, and it illuminates the concept exactly. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ANARCHIST

[Joseph Conrad, The Secret Agent, 1907]

Who. Joseph Conrad [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Conrad's The Secret Agent is set among London anarchists — Verloc, the Professor, and their circle — plotting violence against the state in the name of the doctrine (paraphrase). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The novel is the canonical fiction of 'one who professes and advocates the doctrines of anarchy'; it gives the abstract definition a concrete human face. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ANATOCISM

[Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1596]

What. Shylock's bond in The Merchant of Venice turns on usury — interest exacted on a loan, with the famous pound of flesh as forfeit (paraphrase). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The play is the canonical dramatization of usury; the bond's interest economy is the entry's subject, so the link is genuine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ANGER

[Homer, Iliad, c. 8th century BCE]

Who. Homer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Homer's Iliad opens by invoking the goddess to sing the wrath of Achilles — anger at the injury done him by Agamemnon, driving the whole epic (paraphrase). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Homer, Iliad, c. 8th century BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ANGER, p. 69; scan anchor: djvu line 12002 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines anger as 'a strong passion of the mind excited by real or supposed injuries'; the Iliad's menis is precisely anger-at-injury as a world-moving force. Paraphrase used because no single English translation is verbatim-canonical. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ANTENUPTIAL

[Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813]

Who. Jane Austen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The plot machinery of Pride and Prejudice — the Bennet entail, the daughters' portions, the marriage settlement negotiated for Lydia — is antenuptial settlements in the entry's sense: property settled before and in contemplation of marriage (paraphrase). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed

When. 1813 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Austen's novel is driven throughout by exactly what the entry defines; the paraphrase stays to the plot fact rather than any quoted line. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

APOTHECARY

[Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c. 1595]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. In Romeo and Juliet, Romeo buys his fatal draught from the Mantuan apothecary — 'the needy man' who compounds the poison (paraphrase). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c. 1595. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry APOTHECARY, p. 76; scan anchor: djvu line 13059 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The apothecary who 'compounds medicines' per the entry is a named, pivotal figure in the play; paraphrase used rather than quoting the passage from half-memory. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ARISTOCRACY

[George Orwell, Animal Farm, 1945]

Who. George Orwell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "All animals are equal, but some animals are more equal than others." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1945 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The line is the literary archetype of the entry's third sense — 'a privileged class of the people' — showing aristocracy emerging inside a revolution. One sentence, verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ARMY

[Maxim: Si vis pacem, para bellum (Vegetius, De Re Militari)]

Who. Maxim: Si vis pacem [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Maxim: "Si vis pacem, para bellum" — "If you want peace, prepare for war" — the standing rationale for keeping armed forces. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Vegetius's maxim is the classical wisdom on why nations maintain armies; it illuminates the entry's concept rather than merely defining it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ARREST

[Michael Curtiz, Casablanca, 1942]

Who. Michael Curtiz [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

Why. Captain Renault's order is the archetypal on-screen exercise of the state's power of arrest — 'seizing a person by lawful authority' (the entry) distilled to one line, verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ARSON

[Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, 1847]

Who. Charlotte Brontë [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. In Jane Eyre, Bertha Mason sets fire to Thornfield Hall — the willful and malicious burning of the house of another (paraphrase). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1847 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The burning of Thornfield is the canonical arson of English fiction and matches the common-law entry's definition element for element. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ASSASSINATION

[Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, 1599]

What. "Et tu, Brute? Then fall, Caesar." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The conspirators' murder is treacherous killing by lying in wait — the entry's second definition — and the line is verbatim-certain and one line. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ASSURER

[John Grisham, The Rainmaker, 1995]

Who. John Grisham [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. A young lawyer sues an insurance company that denied a dying boy's claim — the assurer refusing the very peril it underwrote. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. The novel's engine is an insurer (assurer) denying the risk it was paid to bear; a genuine fictional instance of the assurer's office and its breach. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ATTAINDER

[Hilary Mantel, Wolf Hall, 2009]

Who. Hilary Mantel [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Thomas Cromwell — the great engineer of other men's attainders — is himself condemned by bill of attainder, sentenced to death by Parliament without trial. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 2009 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Historically accurate (Cromwell was attainted in 1540): the textbook dramatic instance of attainder as legislative extinction of civil rights and life. An earlier draft used A Man for All Seasons (More), but More was jury-tried, not attainted — struck for accuracy. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ATTEMPT

[Frederick Forsyth, The Day of the Jackal, 1971]

Who. Frederick Forsyth [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The Jackal's elaborate preparations ripen into a genuine attempt on de Gaulle's life — more than mere planning — and fail short of consummation. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1971 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The narrative is a textbook study of attempt: preparation crossing into attempt, then failure before the ultimate design is achieved. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ATTORNEY

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Atticus Finch, attorney at law, defends Tom Robinson in court — standing in the place of another as counsel. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ATTORNEY, p. 103; scan anchor: djvu line 17703 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The most famous fictional attorney; his office in the novel is exactly the entry's sense — one appointed to act in the stead of another, at law. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

AUCTION

[Harriet Beecher Stowe, Uncle Tom's Cabin, 1852]

Who. Harriet Beecher Stowe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Enslaved people sold on the auction block to the highest bidder — the novel's central horror-mechanism. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. A genuine instance of 'public sale, at public outcry, to the highest bidder,' illuminating the entry through its most morally charged historical use. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

AUTOCRACY

[George Orwell, Animal Farm, 1945]

Who. George Orwell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Napoleon the pig concentrates all power, ruling the farm at his unchecked will. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1945 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Direct match: government at the will of one, unchecked by constitutional restriction. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

AXIOM

[Maxim: classical — Euclid, Elements, c. 300 BCE]

Who. Maxim: classical — Euclid [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Geometry built from self-evident starting truths — common notions and postulates from which all else is demonstrated. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The classical source of the axiomatic method; the entry's 'self-evident truth' is Euclid's common notion. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

AUNT

[Charles Dickens, David Copperfield, 1850]

What. Betsey Trotwood — David's formidable great-aunt — takes charge of the boy's life and fortune. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1850 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The great literary aunt; her office in the novel turns on the aunt-nephew relation the entry defines. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

BAILABLE

[Director: Martin Brest, Midnight Run, 1988]

Who. Director: Martin Brest [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. A bounty hunter is hired to retrieve a bail-jumper who fled after posting bail. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The plot turns entirely on bail, its posting, and its forfeiture — a genuine film instance of the bailable process. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BAILMENT

[J.R.R. Tolkien, The Lord of the Rings, 1954–55]

Who. J.R.R. Tolkien [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The Ring is delivered into Frodo's keeping in trust, for the special object of its destruction — to be disposed of per the trust, never for his own. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1954 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Analogical but genuine: a delivery of a thing in trust for a special object, with a duty to carry out that object — the doctrinal shape of bailment. Reasoning flags the analogy plainly. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BANISHMENT

[William Shakespeare, Richard II, 1595]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Banished, Mowbray laments that his sentence robs him of his native tongue — 'within my mouth you have enjailed my tongue.' (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The canonical dramatic banishment: compelled to quit the country, with the punishment's human cost made vivid. Paraphrased because the verse could not be certified verbatim from memory. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BANKER

[Director: Robert Stevenson, Mary Poppins, 1964]

Who. Director: Robert Stevenson [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Mr. Banks, the staid banker of the Fidelity Fiduciary Bank, whose household runs on banking hours and banking morals. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1964 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The film's emblematic banker — one engaged in the business of banking, played straight then softened. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BANKING

[Director: Frank Capra, It's a Wonderful Life, 1946]

Who. Director: Frank Capra [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The Bailey Building and Loan takes deposits and lends them to working families for homes, against Potter's predatory bank. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Dramatizes exactly the entry's business: receiving money on deposit and loaning it — banking as community trust versus banking as extraction. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BANKRUPT

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1596–1598]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Antonio's argosies lost at sea, his credit collapses and his creditors close in toward the bond's forfeit. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. A merchant undone by lost ventures, liable to his creditors for his property — the bankruptcy narrative in miniature. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BARGAIN

[Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Faust, 1808]

Who. Johann Wolfgang von Goethe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Faust bargains with Mephistopheles — his soul against knowledge, power, and experience. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The archetypal bargain: a mutual undertaking between two parties, each binding the other — here, eternally. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BARRISTER

Who. Director: Billy Wilder [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

Why. The definitive film barrister — an advocate called to the bar conducting the trial of a cause, as the entry defines. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BASTARD

[William Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law my services are bound" — Edmund's opening soliloquy, claiming nature over legitimacy. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The single most famous literary statement of the bastard's estate; the line is short, famous, and certified verbatim from memory — hence quoted rather than paraphrased. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BATTEL, WAGER OF

[Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819]

Who. Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Rebecca, accused of witchcraft, demands trial by combat; Ivanhoe fights as her champion against Bois-Guilbert. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. A genuine fictional wager of battel: the issue decided by personal combat between champions, exactly the old law. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The iconic fictional begging-plea; a short famous line certified verbatim, illuminating 'one who lives by solicited alms.' [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BENEFICE

[Anthony Trollope, The Warden, 1855]

Who. Anthony Trollope [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Mr. Harding's wardenship of Hiram's Hospital — an ecclesiastical preferment whose revenues the novel puts on trial. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1855 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The novel is built on a benefice: an endowed church office, its duties, and the question of who deserves its income. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BENEFICIARY

[Charles Dickens, Great Expectations, 1861]

What. Pip is the unknown beneficiary of a fortune administered through Jaggers — enjoying property whose legal handling lies in others' hands. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Pip is literature's great beneficiary: one having the enjoyment of property of which a trustee-like figure holds the legal management. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BENEVOLENCE

[Charles Dickens, A Christmas Carol, 1843]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

BEQUEST

[Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1853]

What. Jarndyce and Jarndyce — the Chancery suit over a will that consumes the very bequest in costs. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1853 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The great fictional bequest: a gift by will of personal property, devoured by the court meant to administer it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BET

[Anton Chekhov, 'The Bet,' 1889]

Who. Anton Chekhov [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. A banker bets a young lawyer two million rubles that he cannot endure fifteen years of solitary confinement — and the lawyer takes the wager. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Anton Chekhov, 'The Bet,' 1889. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry BET, p. 129; scan anchor: djvu line 22070 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The story IS a bet in the entry's sense: a sum to become one party's on the happening of an uncertain future event. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BETROTHMENT

[Alessandro Manzoni, The Betrothed, 1827]

Who. Alessandro Manzoni [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Renzo and Lucia, the betrothed, whose mutual promise of marriage the novel's whole machinery conspires to delay. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1957 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. A film about the entry itself: predispositions that do not leave the mind perfectly open to conviction, examined juror by juror. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BIGAMY

[Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, 1847]

Who. Charlotte Brontë [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Jane's wedding is halted by the revelation that Rochester is already wed — to Bertha Mason, living and undissolved. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1847 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The most famous fictional bigamy: a second marriage contracted while the first subsists to the offender's knowledge. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BIGOT

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1596–1598]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Antonio's Christian contempt and Shylock's answering plea — 'Hath not a Jew eyes?' — dramatize religious bigotry from both sides of the wound. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1596 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's 'one obstinately wedded to an opinion in religion' is the play's engine; paraphrased because the speech could not be certified verbatim throughout. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

When. 1936 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Exact sense-match: a marine beleaguering of harbors cutting off foreign connection, and the runner who defies it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BLOOD

[Director: Francis Ford Coppola, The Godfather, 1972]

Who. Director: Francis Ford Coppola [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The Corleones are bound by blood — kinship by descent as the family's governing law and its curse. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1972 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline but genuine: the film illuminates 'of the blood' as consanguinity-as-bond, in the figurative register the entry's kinship sense supports. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BLUE LAWS

[Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850]

When. 1914 [basis: year carried in the citation]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. The title names the entry: a quasi-public house where boarders are habitually kept. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BODY POLITIC

[William Shakespeare, Coriolanus, c. 1608]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Menenius tells the fable of the belly: the body's members rebel against the belly, and learn the corporate body starves together. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The classic literary statement of the body politic — the corporation/state as one organism of interdependent members. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BONDAGE

[Director: Steve McQueen, 12 Years a Slave, 2013]

Who. Director: Steve McQueen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Solomon Northup, a free man kidnapped, endures twelve years of chattel bondage in Louisiana. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Involuntary personal servitude dramatized from a true account — the entry's first sense, unsoftened. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BONDSMAN

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1596–1598]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Antonio stands surety for Bassanio's 3,000 ducats, sealing the pound-of-flesh bond with Shylock. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1596 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The most famous suretyship in literature: one entering into a bond as surety for another's debt. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BOOTY

[Maxim: classical — Homer, Iliad, c. 8th century BCE]

Who. Maxim: classical — Homer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Achilles and Agamemnon quarrel over Briseis, a captive woman allotted as war-booty. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: classical — Homer, Iliad, c. 8th century BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry BOOTY, p. 145; scan anchor: djvu line 24792 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The epic's inciting quarrel is over booty in the entry's exact sense: property captured from the enemy in war, on land. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BORROW

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1596–1598]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Antonio solicits and receives 3,000 ducats from Shylock, promising repayment with interest. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1596 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borrowing with a promise to repay — the entry's sense, down to the interest the definition contemplates for money. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BOURGEOIS

[Molière, Le Bourgeois gentilhomme, 1670]

Who. Molière [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Monsieur Jourdain, the bourgeois gentleman, apes the nobility — to the delight of his tailor and his philosophy master. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The title names the entry: the town-dwelling burgher, entitled to municipal standing, reaching above it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BOURSE

[Frank Norris, The Pit, 1903]

Who. Frank Norris [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. In the Chicago wheat pit, bulls and bears battle over grain futures on the exchange floor. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1903 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. A novel of the exchange itself — the bourse as the arena of speculation the entry defines. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BOYCOTT

[Director: Clark Johnson, Boycott, 2001]

Who. Director: Clark Johnson [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The Montgomery bus boycott: a community wrongfully threatened, refusing the buses until the business breaks. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. A film of a boycott in the entry's sense: concerted action to injure a business by keeping customers away. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BRAND

[Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850]

Who. Nathaniel Hawthorne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Hester Prynne's scarlet A — a mark of shame worn in public as punishment. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry BRAND, p. 149; scan anchor: djvu line 25478 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1850 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline but genuine: literature's great mark-of-shame — the figurative brand as punishment, where the entry's hot iron becomes social stigma. Reasoning states the figurative register plainly. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BRAWL

[William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c. 1595]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The play opens on a clamorous street brawl between Montagues and Capulets, disturbing the public peace. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Matches the entry's popular sense first given: a tumultuous quarrel in a public place. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BREACH

[Charles Dickens, The Pickwick Papers, 1836]

What. Mrs. Bardell sues Mr. Pickwick for breach of promise of marriage — the great comic breach-of-promise action. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1836 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. A genuine fictional breach: the violation of an obligation (here, a promised marriage), tried at law within the novel. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BREAKING

[Director: Jules Dassin, Rififi, 1955]

Who. Director: Jules Dassin [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. A four-man crew executes a near-silent jewelry burglary — forcing entry with felonious intent, in one unbroken sequence. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1955 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline but genuine: cinema's canonical depiction of felonious breaking — the act-element of burglary the entry defines, rather than its doctrine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BRIBERY

[Director: Sidney Lumet, Serpico, 1973]

Who. Director: Sidney Lumet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Serpico refuses the payoffs flowing through his precinct and pays for his honesty. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1973 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. A film about bribery in the entry's precise sense: undue reward offered to those in the administration of public justice to incline them contrary to duty. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BRIEF

[Director: Alan J. Pakula, The Pelican Brief, 1993]

Who. Director: Alan J. Pakula [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. A law student's legal brief theorizing two assassinations puts its author — and everyone near the brief — in mortal danger. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Director: Alan J. Pakula, The Pelican Brief, 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry BRIEF, p. 152; scan anchor: djvu line 26046 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The title names the entry: a condensed statement of facts and propositions of law — here, one that kills. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BROKER

[Director: Martin Scorsese, The Wolf of Wall Street, 2013]

Who. Director: Martin Scorsese [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Jordan Belfort, stockbroker, makes his bargains between others for commission — and for fraud. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Director: Martin Scorsese, The Wolf of Wall Street, 2013. Host locus: Black's

Why. The film's protagonist is a broker in the entry's sense: an agent making bargains between others in trade, for compensation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BROTHER

[Fyodor Dostoevsky, The Brothers Karamazov, 1880]

Who. Fyodor Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Dmitri, Ivan, and Alyosha — Dmitri by their father's first wife, Ivan and Alyosha by his second: literally half-brothers in the entry's technical sense. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Stronger than it first looked: the novel dramatizes the whole-blood/half-blood distinction itself — three brothers, two mothers. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BUBBLE

[Anthony Trollope, The Way We Live Now, 1875]

Who. Anthony Trollope [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Melmotte's empire — built on a fictitious prospectus — ensnares investors and collapses. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Anthony Trollope, The Way We Live Now, 1875. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry BUBBLE, p. 154; scan anchor: djvu line 26385 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1875 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The great fictional bubble company: an extravagant unsubstantial project on an exaggerated prospectus, exactly the entry's definition. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BURDEN OF PROOF

[Maxim: Ei incumbit probatio qui dicit, non qui negat — "the burden of proof lies on the one who asserts, not on the one who denies" (Dig. 22.3.2)]

Who. Maxim: Ei incumbit probatio qui dicit [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Roman-law maxim runs: the burden of proving lies on the one who asserts, not on the one who denies. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Ei incumbit probatio qui dicit, non qui negat — "the burden of proof lies on the one who asserts, not on the one who denies" (Dig. 22.3.2). BURDEN OF PROOF

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Atticus Finch's closing argument turns the trial on the prosecution's burden: the state has not carried it, so the jury must acquit on reasonable doubt. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The novel's courtroom climax is the most famous fictional staging of the burden of proof in action — the defense insisting the affirmative duty rests on the accuser. Paraphrase only; no verbatim quote used. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BUREAUCRACY

[Franz Kafka, The Trial, 1925]

Who. Franz Kafka [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Josef K. is arrested one morning and never learns the charge, ground through departments and chiefs he can never face — government as pure procedure. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines bureaucracy as government carried on in departments under chiefs. Kafka's novel is the canonical fictional staging of exactly that machinery. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BURIAL

BURGLARY

[Alfred Hitchcock, To Catch a Thief, 1955]

Who. Alfred Hitchcock [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) A reformed jewel thief is suspected of a new nighttime burglary spree along the Riviera and must catch the real cat burglar to clear himself. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1955 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines burglary as breaking and entering a house in the night-time with intent to commit a felony. The film's premise is exactly that offense. Paraphrase of premise only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CACHET, LETTRES DE

[Alexandre Dumas, Le Vicomte de Bragelonne (The Man in the Iron Mask), 1847-1850]

Who. Alexandre Dumas [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) A man sits masked in a fortress prison for decades on nothing but the king's sealed order, his identity itself the secret the warrant protects. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines lettres de cachet as royal warrants authorizing imprisonment, abolished 1789. Dumas's tale dramatizes arbitrary imprisonment by royal order without trial. Year given as the honest serial-publication range of the parent work. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CADAVER

[Mary Shelley, Frankenstein, 1818]

Who. Mary Shelley [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Victor Frankenstein assembles a living creature from corpses gathered in charnel houses — the dead body as raw material for a legal and moral catastrophe. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1818 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines cadaver as a dead human body and notes no property can be held in a corpse. The novel is the canonical fiction of the corpse as a legal/moral problem. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CALUMNY

[William Shakespeare, Othello, c. 1603]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Iago poisons Othello with false insinuations of Desdemona's infidelity until the slander does the work of a dagger. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1603 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines calumny as defamation, slander, false accusation of a crime or offense. Iago is the canonical fictional calumniator. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CAPTIVES

[David Lean, The Bridge on the River Kwai, 1957]

Who. David Lean [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) British prisoners of war in a Japanese camp are driven to build a bridge for their captors, testing the limits of what captivity can command. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines captives as prisoners of war. The film is the canonical cinematic treatment of POW captivity. Fit is to 'prisoners of war' generally; paraphrase of premise only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CAPTURE

[Patrick O'Brian, Master and Commander, 1969]

Who. Patrick O'Brian [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) A Royal Navy captain's fortunes turn on taking enemy ships as prize at sea — capture as a lawful mode of acquiring property in war. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1969 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Two entries share this headword; this annotation attaches to the international-law sense (taking property from a belligerent; 'prize' at sea). O'Brian's naval novels are built around prize capture. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CAT

[Herman Melville, White-Jacket, 1850]

Who. Herman Melville [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Aboard a U.S. man-of-war, sailors are flogged with the cat-o'-nine-tails while the narrator builds the case for abolishing naval flogging outright. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Herman Melville, White-Jacket, 1850. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CAT, p. 176; scan anchor: djvu line 29943 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

When. 1850 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the cat as the nine-lashed flogging instrument. Melville's novel famously depicts naval flogging with the cat and argues for its abolition — precisely on point. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CATCHING BARGAIN

[Honore de Balzac, Gobseck, 1830]

Who. Honore de Balzac [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

Why. The entry cross-refers to Bargain; 'catching bargain' is the moneylender's undervalue bargain with an expectant heir. Balzac's Gobseck is the archetypal fictional usurer exploiting heirs. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CATHEDRAL

[Ken Follett, The Pillars of the Earth, 1989]

Who. Ken Follett [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Generations of builders, monks, and townspeople raise a Gothic cathedral stone by stone — the bishop's church as a community's life's work. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Ken Follett, The Pillars of the Earth, 1989. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CATHEDRAL, p. 176; scan anchor: djvu line 30030 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1989 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the cathedral as the bishop's church, seat of his jurisdiction. The novel is the modern canonical fiction of the cathedral as an institution people pour generations into. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT

[Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859]

What. (paraphrase) The novel opens with a treason trial at the Old Bailey — the historic criminal court the Central Criminal Court superseded. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry notes the court 'superseded the Old Bailey.' Dickens's Old Bailey trial scene illuminates the institution the entry replaced. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHALLENGE TO FIGHT

[Leo Tolstoy, War and Peace, 1869]

Who. Leo Tolstoy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Pierre, stung by the accusation against his wife, challenges Dolokhov to a duel — and walks to the snowbound meeting half-convinced it is madness. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Leo Tolstoy, War and Peace, 1869. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CHALLENGE TO FIGHT, p. 187; scan anchor: djvu line 31852 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines a challenge to fight as a summons to personal combat, a request to fight a duel, a criminal offense. The Pierre-Dolokhov duel is the canonical novelistic instance. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHAMPION

[Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819]

Who. Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Ivanhoe rides into the lists as Rebecca's champion, to decide by trial of combat the accusation no courtroom testimony can settle. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines the champion as the one who, in trial by battel, fought for another. Ivanhoe's combat for Rebecca is the canonical fictional instance — nearly verbatim the definition. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHANCE

[Maxim: Fortes fortuna iuvat — "fortune favors the brave" (Terence, Phormio; Virgil, Aeneid)]

Who. OPEN — citation carries no separable author segment

What. (paraphrase) The classical maxim runs: fortune favors the brave — chance as the fortuitous element that rewards the bold rather than the calculating. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines chance as a fortuitous event, the opposite of intention. The maxim is the classical wisdom on fortune/chance; public domain, quoted verbatim in Latin with the worker's translation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHANCERY

[Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1852-1853]

What. (paraphrase) Jarndyce v Jarndyce grinds through the Court of Chancery for generations until costs devour the whole estate — equity as fog, delay, and ruin. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1852 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines chancery as a court of equity. Dickens's Jarndyce suit is the canonical fictional Chancery. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHARITY

[Charles Dickens, A Christmas Carol, 1843]

What. (paraphrase) Two charity collectors ask Scrooge for the poor; he answers 'Are there no prisons?' — and the novella sets out to thaw exactly that refusal. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1843 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines charity objectively as alms-giving, relief accorded to the needy. The novel opens on the plea for charitable relief and its refusal — the canonical fictional staging. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHASTITY

[Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850]

Who. Nathaniel Hawthorne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Hester Prynne is set on the scaffold with her infant to bear public punishment for adultery under the colony's Puritan law. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CHASTITY, p. 194; scan anchor: djvu line 33022 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1850 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines chastity as the virtue preventing unlawful intercourse of the sexes. The novel dramatizes the legal regime punishing unchastity. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHATTEL

[Toni Morrison, Beloved, 1987]

Who. Toni Morrison [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Sethe's children are claimed as property under the Fugitive Slave Act — human beings hunted as chattel, with the law on the hunter's side. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1987 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines chattel as personal property. The novel's legal horror is persons held and pursued as chattel — the canonical fictional illumination. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHEAT

[George Roy Hill, The Sting, 1973]

Who. George Roy Hill [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Two grifters run an elaborate con on a mob banker, defrauding him of his money by willful device and misdirection. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines cheat as defrauding another of his known right by willful device. The film dramatizes exactly such willful-device fraud. Paraphrase of premise only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHICANE

[Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1852-1853]

What. (paraphrase) The lawyer Vholes fastens on Richard Carstone and bleeds him case by case, respectability itself turned into an instrument of plunder. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines chicane as the use of tricks and artifice. Vholes is the canonical fictional legal sharp-practitioner. Same novel as the CHANCERY annotation but a distinct genuine angle (the court's machinery vs. the lawyers' practice); disclosed, not hidden. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHILDREN

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1837-1839]

What. (paraphrase) The orphan Oliver's claim under his father's bequest is hunted by Monks, who would destroy the proof that the 'natural' child is the true heir. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1837 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is about 'children' in bequests/devises — legitimate vs. natural children and the testator's intention. The novel's plot turns on exactly that: an illegitimate child's contested claim under a bequest. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

When. 1831 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines church as the religious society and the building of worship. The sanctuary scenes illuminate the church building as a place of legal refuge. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

[Wilkie Collins, The Moonstone, 1868]

Who. Wilkie Collins [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Sergeant Cuff reconstructs the theft of the Moonstone from surrounding circumstances — no witness to the act, only the premises from which it must be inferred. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines circumstantial evidence as proof inferring the principal fact from surrounding circumstances. Collins's detective novel is the foundational fictional staging of inferential proof. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

COERCION

[Stanley Kubrick, A Clockwork Orange, 1971]

Who. Stanley Kubrick [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Ludovico technique: the state drugs and aversion-therapies Alex into 'good' behavior, dramatizing coercion as the forced imposition of the will from outside. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1971 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines coercion as compulsion, force, duress. The Ludovico treatment is the canonical film illustration of coercion-as-technique; paraphrase marked, no verbatim line claimed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

COLONY

[Conrad, Heart of Darkness, 1899]

Who. Conrad [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Kurtz's dying words sum the colonial enterprise's moral void: "The horror! The horror!" [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Conrad, Heart of Darkness, 1899. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry COLONY, p. 217; scan anchor: djvu line 36869 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1899 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines a colony as a dependent political community planted by emigration. The verbatim line is certain (the novel's final judgment on the colonial project) and genuinely illuminates the human reality behind the legal definition. COLLXSTRXGIUM

[Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850]

Who. Hawthorne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Hawthorne opens with Hester Prynne standing shamed on the scaffold before the town — public-shame punishment as the machinery of moral law. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1850 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines the pillory. Hester's scaffold is not technically a pillory, so marked paraphrase and framed as illustration, not identity; judged a genuine literary illumination of public-shame punishment rather than a forced fit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

COMPOS MENTIS

[Shakespeare, Hamlet, c. 1600]

What. (paraphrase) Hamlet announces he will 'put an antic disposition on,' making his soundness of mind — whether he truly has use and control of his mental faculties — the play's open question. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Entry defines compos mentis as sound of mind. Hamlet's feigned madness is the canonical literary raising of the soundness-of-mind question; paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONCUSSION

[Francis Ford Coppola, The Godfather, 1972]

Who. Francis Ford Coppola [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Don Corleone's working method for unlawful forcing by threats: "I'm gonna make him an offer he can't refuse." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1972 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines concussion as the unlawful forcing of another by threats of violence to give something of value. The verbatim line (certain, AFI-ranked) precisely names the shakedown; a genuine illumination. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

CONFESS

[Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866]

Who. Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Raskolnikov's admission — first to Sonya, then to the police — of the murders, the moral climax of the novel: the voluntary acknowledgment of guilt. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CONFESS, p. 242; scan anchor: djvu line 41203 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1866 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines confess as admitting the truth of a charge. Raskolnikov's confession is the set-piece criminal confession of world fiction; paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONFESSION

[Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866]

Who. Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Raskolnikov's voluntary statement of the murders — first to Sonya, then to the police — dramatizing confession as the turning point from guilt to atonement. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1866 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines confession in criminal law as a voluntary statement by a person charged with a crime. Same genuine link as CONFESS, with the note angled to the legal definition; paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONFRONTATION

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Atticus Finch's cross-examination sets the Ewell witnesses face to face with Tom Robinson — the accused confronting his accusers in open court. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines confrontation as setting a witness face to face with the prisoner. The novel's trial is the canonical fictional dramatization of the right of confrontation; paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONSCIENCE

[Shakespeare, Macbeth, c. 1606]

What. Macbeth, after the murder, stares at his hands: "Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood clean from my hand?" [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Entry defines conscience as the moral sense judging actions. The verbatim line (certain) is the canonical dramatic image of an unquiet conscience. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONSPIRACY

[Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, 1599]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Cassius recruiting Brutus into the plot against Caesar: "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, / But in ourselves, that we are underlings." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines conspiracy as a confederacy formed to commit a crime by joint effort. The verbatim line (certain) is the assassination conspiracy's recruitment pitch; a genuine illumination. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONSPIRATORS

[Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, 1599]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Cassius binding Brutus by oath and persuasion into the plot against Caesar: "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, / But in ourselves, that we are underlings." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines conspirators as persons bound by oath/covenant/alliance to aid one another in the plot. Same genuine link as CONSPIRACY, angled to the persons bound together; verbatim line certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

CONSTABLE

[Shakespeare, Much Ado About Nothing, c. 1598]

What. (paraphrase) Dogberry, the self-important and incompetent constable of the watch, whose malaprop orders turn every charge upside down — the constable as comic figure. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Entry defines the constable office. Dogberry is the canonical fictional constable; paraphrase marked rather than risking a half-remembered line. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONTAGIOUS DISEASE

[Boccaccio, The Decameron, c. 1353]

Who. Boccaccio [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Decameron is framed by the 1348 plague in Florence — contagion emptying the city and driving the ten storytellers into the hills, where the tales are told. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Boccaccio, The Decameron, c. 1353. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CONTAGIOUS DISEASE, p. 257; scan anchor: djvu line 43632 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Entry defines contagious disease as transmissible by contact. The plague frame is the canonical literary instance of contagion as plot-engine; paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONTRACT

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1596-99]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The bond at the play's center is a contract in the entry's strict sense: Shylock lends Antonio 3,000 ducats for three months, the forfeit nominated as a pound of Antonio's flesh — and when the debt comes due the court holds Shylock to the letter of his own sealed agreement, until Portia defeats him by even stricter construction. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1596 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Shylock's bond is the most famous dramatization in fiction of being bound to the letter of a contract; the trial scene turns on the entry's own doctrines (consideration, lawful cause, strict construction vs. equity). Paraphrase marked; no verbatim quote risked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONTRACT

[Maxim: Pacta sunt servanda]

Who. Maxim: Pacta sunt servanda [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Pacta sunt servanda — agreements must be kept. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Pacta sunt servanda. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CONTRACT, p. 261; scan anchor: djvu line 44311 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The classical maxim that is the moral spine of the entry: every definition given (agreement upon sufficient consideration to do or not do a thing) presupposes that agreements bind. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

CONTRABAND

[William Friedkin, The French Connection, 1971]

Who. William Friedkin [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The film's engine is a contraband shipment in exactly the entry's sense: heroin smuggled from France into the United States in defiance of American law, pursued by detectives Popeye Doyle and Buddy Russo. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1971 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Contraband = goods whose importation the law prohibits; the film dramatizes precisely that object — a prohibited shipment in transit — rather than using 'contraband' as set dressing. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONTRABAND OF WAR

[Victor Fleming, Gone with the Wind, 1939]

Who. Victor Fleming [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Rhett Butler's trade as a blockade-runner — carrying goods through the Union blockade to the Confederate belligerent for profit — dramatizes contraband-of-war commerce: merchandise furnished to a belligerent in wartime, liable to seizure in transit. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Victor Fleming, Gone with the Wind, 1939. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CONTRABAND OF WAR, p. 260; scan anchor: djvu line 44273 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1939 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry concerns wartime goods furnished to belligerents and seized in transit; Rhett's blockade-running is that commerce in narrative form. Borderline noted: Rhett is a Confederate partisan rather than a neutral, but the commerce depicted is the concept. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONTRADICTION IN TERMS

[George Orwell, Nineteen Eighty-Four, 1949]

Who. George Orwell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “War is Peace. Freedom is Slavery. Ignorance is Strength.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The Party slogans are the canonical literary instance of phrases whose parts are expressly inconsistent — contradiction in terms wielded as an instrument of power. Short verbatim quote; wording certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

CONVICIUM

[Victor Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. On the sub-entry CONVICT, n. (folded into this entry's body by the parser): Jean Valjean, convict 24601 — nineteen years in the galleys for stealing a loaf of bread and repeated escape attempts, then hounded for life under the law's permanent brand of the convict — is the archetypal convict of fiction, matching the entry's own gloss ('usually spoken of condemned felons or the prisoners in penitentiaries'). (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Genuine: the novel's central figure embodies the entry's definition; the legal brand of 'convict' drives the entire plot (Javert's pursuit, the parole violation). Paraphrase marked; details (bread theft, 19 years, number 24601) certain from the novel. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONVICTION

[Franz Kafka, The Trial, 1925]

Who. Franz Kafka [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Josef K. is arrested one morning without being told his charge, spends a year navigating a court system that never names it, and is finally executed — the machinery of conviction running on procedure alone, proof never entering the room. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1925 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine illumination by negative: the entry defines conviction as the result of a criminal trial ending in judgment of guilt; Kafka's novel shows that machinery with the proof hollowed out, sharpening what conviction is supposed to rest on. Paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CORNER

[John Landis, Trading Places, 1983]

Who. John Landis [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The film's climax is a corner in the entry's exact sense: the Duke brothers, acting on a stolen crop report, buy up frozen concentrated orange juice futures to force the price abnormally high — and are ruined when Valentine and Winthorpe sell into the rigged rally. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1983 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry defines a market corner as buying up the marketable supply to advance the price abnormally; the film's entire third act is that operation, dramatized. Paraphrase marked; film, director, year, and plot mechanics certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CORPORAL

[Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850]

Who. Nathaniel Hawthorne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The novel opens with Hester Prynne standing shamed on the town scaffold, her infant daughter in her arms and the scarlet A upon her breast — the pillory, which the entry names among corporal punishments, enacted as public bodily shaming. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CORPORAL, p. 272; scan anchor: djvu line 46313 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Genuine: the entry lists 'the pillory' as corporal punishment; the novel's opening set piece is the pillory as punishment, illuminating the concept rather than decorating it. Paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CORRUPTION

[William Shakespeare, Measure for Measure, c. 1603-04]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Left to govern Vienna, Angelo revives a dead fornication statute to condemn Claudio, then offers Isabella her brother's life in exchange for her body — the official using his station to procure a private benefit, contrary to duty, in the entry's exact second sense. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1603 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry defines corruption as an official wrongfully using his station to procure benefit for himself contrary to duty; Angelo's arc is that definition enacted. Paraphrase marked; plot certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

CORRUPTION

[Maxim: Corruptio optimi est pessima]

Who. Maxim: Corruptio optimi est pessima [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Corruptio optimi est pessima — the corruption of the best is the worst of corruptions. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Corruptio optimi est pessima. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CORRUPTION, p. 277; scan anchor: djvu line 47151 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Classical maxim embedded in the entry itself; Angelo — the outwardly virtuous, strict deputy — is its exhibit A, which is why the maxim genuinely illuminates rather than decorates. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

COSTS

[Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1852-53]

What. Jarndyce v Jarndyce grinds through Chancery for generations until the costs of the suit devour the entire estate — the suitors ruined, the lawyers paid. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1852 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry concerns the pecuniary burden of suit; the novel's famous outcome is costs consuming the very estate litigated over. Paraphrase marked. A distinct Chancery note is reserved for the court entry itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

COUNTERFEIT

[Steven Spielberg, Catch Me If You Can, 2002]

Who. Steven Spielberg [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Frank Abagnale's career of forged checks and assumed identities — copying without authority and with a view to deceive, passing the copy for the genuine — dramatizes the entry's 'counterfeiter,' which covers false currency 'or any instrument of writing.' (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Steven Spielberg, Catch Me If You Can, 2002. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry COUNTERFEIT, p. 282; scan anchor: djvu line 47905 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Genuine: the entry's counterfeiter definition explicitly extends beyond coin to instruments of writing; the film is the famous dramatization of that career. Paraphrase marked; film, director, year certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

COURT-MARTIAL

[Rob Reiner, A Few Good Men, 1992]

Who. Rob Reiner [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Two Marines stand trial for the death of a fellow Marine at Guantanamo Bay — the court-martial as the entry defines it: a military court convened under government authority to try and punish military offenses. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Genuine: the film's entire third act is a court-martial proceeding; it dramatizes the institution, not just the word. Paraphrase marked; film, director, year, and premise certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

COURT OF CHANCERY

[Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1852-53]

What. Dickens opens in fog at Lincoln's Inn Hall, the Lord Chancellor presiding, and lets Jarndyce v Jarndyce grind through Chancery for generations — the equity court as fog, delay, and procedure devouring the suitors. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1852-53. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry COURT OF CHANCERY, p. 287; scan anchor: djvu line 48752 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Genuine: the canonical dramatization of the court of equity the entry defines. Distinct from the COSTS note (different entry, different concept: the court vs. the costs). Paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

COWARDICE

[Stephen Crane, The Red Badge of Courage, 1895]

Who. Stephen Crane [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Henry Fleming flees his first battle and spends the novel wrestling with the shame of it — battlefield cowardice in the entry's military sense ('misbehavior through fear in relation to some duty to be performed before an enemy') as the whole subject of the book. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Genuine: the entry's military definition of cowardice is the novel's entire subject, not set dressing. Paraphrase marked; novel, author, year, and Henry's flight certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CRIME

[Fyodor Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866]

Who. Fyodor Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Raskolnikov murders the pawnbroker Alyona Ivanovna with an axe, convinced that an 'extraordinary' man stands above the law — then is unmade by his own conscience, confesses, and takes his punishment: the criminal act anatomized from theory through penalty. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Fyodor Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CRIME, p. 299; scan anchor: djvu line 50782 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Genuine: the novel literally titled for the entry is the great literary anatomy of crime — act, intention, conscience, punishment. Paraphrase marked; details certain from the novel. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CRIME

[Maxim: Nullum crimen, nulla poena sine lege]

Who. Maxim: Nullum crimen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Nullum crimen, nulla poena sine lege — no crime, no punishment without a (pre-existing) law. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Nullum crimen, nulla poena sine lege. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CRIME, p. 299; scan anchor: djvu line 50782 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Classical maxim that is the spine of the entry: crime is defined throughout as violation of a public law, which presupposes the law pre-exists the act. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

CURRENCY

[Mark Twain, The £1,000,000 Bank-Note, 1893]

Who. Mark Twain [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. A penniless American in London is handed a million-pound bank note he cannot spend — and finds the unspendable note itself becomes his credit, living on it for a month: a story about what makes a bank-note currency, the authorized paper that circulates as the medium of exchange. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. Genuine: the entry defines currency to include bank-notes that circulate as the medium of exchange; Twain's story is an anatomy of exactly that — credit riding on paper. Paraphrase marked; story, author, year, premise certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DANISM

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1596-99]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Shylock the moneylender is the archetypal usurer of fiction — his trade in lending at interest draws Antonio's open contempt and frames the entire bond plot: danism, the act of lending money on usury. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1596 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry is the act of lending on usury; Shylock's defining identity in the play is the usurer. Distinct from the CONTRACT note (different entry, different doctrine). Paraphrase marked; Shylock's moneylending certain in the play. (An earlier draft embedded a Shakespeare line inside the paraphrase; removed for consistency with the paraphrase marking.) [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

COUNSELLOR

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Atticus Finch, appointed to defend Tom Robinson, advises his client and pleads for him in open court against the whole town's prejudice — counsel in the entry's first sense: 'One who assists his client with advice, and pleads for him in open court.' (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the novel's trial is the canonical fictional enactment of the advocate's office the entry defines. Paraphrase marked; novel, author, year, and the Atticus/Robinson facts certain. [Coordinator key-fix 2026-10-18: worker keyed this under 'COUNSEL'; corrected to the chunk's exact headword 'COUNSELLOR' for merge alignment. No content changed.] [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CONVINCING' PROOF

[Sidney Lumet, 12 Angry Men, 1957]

Who. Sidney Lumet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. A lone juror holds out against eleven votes to convict and forces the room to test each piece of the prosecution's case against reasonable doubt, until the 'guilty' verdict collapses — the entry's standard ('beyond hesitation, ambiguity, or reasonable doubt') enacted as drama. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1957 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the film is the canonical dramatization of the reasonable-doubt standard the entry defines; it illuminates the standard by showing a jury applying it. Paraphrase marked; film, director, year certain. [Coordinator key-fix 2026-10-18: worker keyed this under 'CONVINCING PROOF'; corrected to the chunk's exact headword "CONVINCING' PROOF" for merge alignment. No content changed.] [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DE FURTO

[Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Jean Valjean steals the bishop of Digne's silver plate in the night — the theft that sets the novel's moral arc in motion, showing theft as the old criminal appeal knew it: a taking that the law must answer. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1862 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Theft is the entry's whole subject and the novel's inciting act; the scene genuinely illuminates what 'of theft' meant in practice. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DE GRATIA

[Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Caught with the stolen silver, Valjean is spared by the bishop, who not only forgives him but adds the candlesticks — grace where the law allowed prosecution. The entry itself contrasts de gratia with de jure (by grace vs. as of right); the bishop acts purely de gratia. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines grace as favor rather than right, and the bishop's act is the culture's clearest dramatization of exactly that distinction. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DE IDENTITATE NOMINIS

[Shakespeare, The Comedy of Errors, 1594]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In the comedy of errors around the twin Antipholi, the wrong man is repeatedly seized and threatened with arrest under another's name — the very mischief the writ addresses: imprisonment under a mistake as to identity. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry's mischief is mistaken-identity arrest; the play is the iconic dramatization of same-name confusion leading to seizure of the wrong person. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DE LIBERTATE PROBANDA

[McQueen, 12 Years a Slave, 2013]

Who. McQueen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Solomon Northup, a free man kidnapped into slavery, must prove his liberty against a system that presumes him a slave — the writ's situation exactly: one demanded as unfree, offering to prove himself free. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The writ lies for those demanded as villeins who offer to prove themselves free; the film is that action dramatized. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DE NATIVO HABENDO

[Stowe, Uncle Tom's Cabin, 1852]

Who. Stowe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The lord's writ to apprehend a fugitive villein and restore him with his chattels; Stowe's novel is the literary counterpart of the recovery machinery — Eliza's flight across the ice, the catchers' pursuit, the master's claim. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry's mechanism is the owner's legal recovery of a fugitive unfree person; the novel dramatizes that mechanism's human cost. Kept as mechanism-parallel, stated plainly. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DE RAPTU VIRGINUM

[Pope, The Rape of the Lock, 1712]

Who. Pope [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "What dire offence from am'rous causes springs, / What mighty contests rise from trivial things" — the poem's whole engine is 'rape' in the old legal sense: violent seizure (here, of a lock of hair), illuminating the word's historic range beyond its modern narrowed meaning. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The appeal was 'of the ravishment of maids'; the poem plays on raptus as seizure, genuinely illuminating the term's older breadth. Public domain; couplet verified from memory with confidence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DEAD BODY

[Shakespeare, Hamlet, 1601]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Alas, poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio" — Hamlet in the graveyard, turning skulls in his hands: the law's 'body deprived of life' met as a moral fact. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1601 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a corpse in clinical terms; the gravedigger scene is the culture's deepest meditation on what a dead body is. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DEAD LETTERS

[Melville, "Bartleby, the Scrivener", 1853]

Who. Melville [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The story's narrator once clerked in the Dead Letter Office, where undeliverable letters go to be opened and returned — the entry's definition given a human room and a melancholy keeper. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines the dead-letter office; Melville literally staffs his narrator there. Direct definitional fit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEADLY FEUD

[Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, 1597]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "A plague o' both your houses!" — Mercutio's curse on the Montagues and Capulets: irreconcilable hatred pursued to death, the entry's definition spoken aloud. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry defines a deadly feud as a profession of irreconcilable hatred till revenged by death; the play is that definition enacted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DEAF AND DUMB

[Penn, The Miracle Worker, 1962]

Who. Penn [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The law presumes the deaf-dumb-blind person incapable of understanding; the film answers the presumption — Annie Sullivan teaching Helen Keller to understand, word by spelled word. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1962 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry states the legal presumption of incapacity; the film is the famous true story that refutes it. Genuine counter-illumination. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEATH

[Donne, Holy Sonnet X, 1633]

Who. Donne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Death, be not proud, though some have called thee / Mighty and dreadful, for thou art not so" — the extinction of life addressed and diminished, the legal definition met by the metaphysical rebuttal. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Donne, Holy Sonnet X, 1633. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DEATH, p. 332; scan anchor: djvu line 56267 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1633 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines death clinically; Donne's sonnet is the canonical literary confrontation with death as more than stoppage. Public domain; lines held with confidence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DEATH-BED

[Tolstoy, The Death of Ivan Ilyich, 1886]

Who. Tolstoy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The whole novella is a death-bed: Ivan Ilyich's sickness, ending in death, examined inch by inch — the entry's 'state of sickness which ends in death' given its fullest literary treatment. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Tolstoy, The Death of Ivan Ilyich, 1886. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DEATH-BED, p. 833; scan anchor: djvu line 56330 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry names the condition; Tolstoy's novella is that condition as a complete work of art. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEBAUCH

[Wilde, The Picture of Dorian Gray, 1890]

Who. Wilde [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dorian Gray, enticed and corrupted from his work and duty into the corruption of manners — the entry's widening sense of 'debauch' traced across a whole life. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry traces debauch from enticement-from-duty to corruption of manners; the novel is that exact widening, personified. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEBT

[Shakespeare, Hamlet, 1601]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Neither a borrower nor a lender be; / For loan oft loses both itself and friend" — Polonius's counsel: debt as the solvent of friendship, stated as prudential law. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Hamlet, 1601. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DEBT, p. 833; scan anchor: djvu line 56548 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1601 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines debt as a sum due by express agreement; Polonius gives the culture's standing counsel on the borrower-lender relation. Lines held with confidence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DEBTOR

[Dickens, Little Dorrit, 1857]

Who. Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Marshalsea debtor's prison, where William Dorrit has lived so long he has become its 'Father' — the debtor as the law's long-term resident, and debt as an inheritable condition. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Dickens, Little Dorrit, 1857. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DEBTOR, p. 835; scan anchor: djvu line 56745 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1857 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines one who may be compelled to pay; the novel is built around the institution that housed such persons. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DECAPITATION

[Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859]

Who. Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The guillotine through the Terror, and Sydney Carton's walk to it in another man's place — beheading as capital punishment given literature's most famous scaffold scene. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DECAPITATION, p. 336; scan anchor: djvu line 56821 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines beheading as a mode of capital punishment; the novel's climax is that mode's iconic literary instance. DECOLLATIO left bare to avoid double-dipping. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DECEIT

[Shakespeare, Othello, 1603]

What. "I am not what I am" — Iago's motto: fraudulent misrepresentation as a personal creed, the entry's 'artifice used to deceive one ignorant of the true facts' compressed to five words. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Othello, 1603. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DECEIT, p. 336; scan anchor: djvu line 56845 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

DECIDE

[Shakespeare, Hamlet, 1601]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) 'To be or not to be' — Hamlet weighing the reasons for and against, governed (or paralyzed) by the preponderance: the entry's definition of deciding as deliberation, dramatized at full length. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Hamlet, 1601. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DECIDE, p. 337; scan anchor: djvu line 56961 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1601 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines decide as including the power to deliberate and weigh reasons; the soliloquy is the monument of that weighing. DECISION left bare — same idea, no double-dip. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DECOY

[Virgil, Aeneid, 19 BC]

Who. Virgil [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The wooden horse left at Troy's gates: the Greeks' lure that inveigles a whole city within reach of destruction — the archetypal decoy, from which the word's cousins all descend. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Virgil, Aeneid, 19 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DECOY, p. 339; scan anchor: djvu line 57298 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines decoy as inveigling or luring; the Trojan Horse is the classical archetype. Classical wisdom, genuinely illuminating. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DECROWNING

[Shakespeare, Richard II, 1595]

What. (paraphrase) Richard II, made to hand over his crown piece by piece in the deposition scene — the act of depriving a king of his crown staged line by line, the hollow crown speech and all. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

DEFAMATION

[Shakespeare, Othello, 1603]

What. (paraphrase) Iago's slow poisoning of Othello's mind against Desdemona — false and malicious statements destroying a reputation, pursued to murder: defamation as a plot engine. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Othello, 1603. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DEFAMATION, p. 342; scan anchor: djvu line 57917 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1603 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines injuring reputation by false malicious statements; Iago's slander of Desdemona is the textbook literary case. Second Othello annotation, distinct legal point from DECEIT. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

[Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Tom Robinson, the party against whom the state's case is brought — the defendant as the novel's moral center, and the trial as the test of what 'defending' can mean when the verdict is pre-written. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the party against whom relief is sought; Robinson is literature's most famous defendant. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEFENSE

[Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Atticus Finch's closing argument to the jury — what is put forward to defeat the action, offered as reason in law and fact why the plaintiff should not recover: the iconic courtroom defense. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines defense as what is offered to defeat an action; the summation is its dramatized form. Paired with DEFENDANT; DEFEND left bare. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEFERRED

[Hughes, "Harlem", 1951]

Who. Hughes [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "What happens to a dream deferred?" — the culture's shorthand for postponement, from the poem whose title-question Hansberry borrowed for her play's title. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry means put off to a future time; the line is the standing literary image of deferral, via Hansberry's A Raisin in the Sun (1959). Single line; held with confidence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DEFOSSION

[Poe, "The Cask of Amontillado", 1846]

Who. Poe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Fortunato, chained to the wall of a niche deep in the catacombs and walled in alive, stone by stone — literature's most famous live burial, the punishment of the entry given a screaming victim. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Why. The entry names burial alive as a punishment; Poe's story is its canonical literary instance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEFRAUD

[Hill, The Sting, 1973]

Who. Hill [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Two con men running an elaborate wire fraud against a mob banker — the whole film is a masterclass in cheating by artifice, fraud as choreography. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1973 [basis: year carried in the citation]

DELAY

[Shakespeare, Hamlet, 1601]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Hamlet's delay — the revenge deferred through five acts of thinking: retardation and obstruction of the deed as the play's whole architecture. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Hamlet, 1601. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DELAY, p. 347; scan anchor: djvu line 58746 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1601 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines delay as retarding, hindering, putting off; the play is the literature of delay itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DELIBERATION

[Lumet, 12 Angry Men, 1957]

Who. Lumet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Twelve jurors in a locked room, weighing the reasons for and against a boy's life — deliberation as the entry defines it, dramatized in real time until the preponderance shifts. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1957 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines deliberation as weighing reasons for and against a contemplated course; the film is that act as a whole work. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DELIRIUM TREMENS

[Wilder, The Lost Weekend, 1945]

Who. Wilder [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Don Birnam's alcoholic disintegration — the DTs, the bat, the visions: the disorder the entry defines, given cinema's most unflinching clinical portrait. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1945 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the alcohol-withdrawal delirium; the film is its iconic screen treatment. DELIRIUM left bare — same ground, no double-dip. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DELUSION

[Cervantes, Don Quixote, 1605]

Who. Cervantes [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The windmills are giants: Don Quixote's incorrigible belief in impossible facts, unmoved by Sancho's plain evidence — the entry's 'insane delusion' as comedy and tragedy at once. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Cervantes, Don Quixote, 1605. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DELUSION, p. 350; scan anchor: djvu line 59209 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

DEMENTIA

[Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Lear on the heath, the mind unseated — 'unsound mind' as storm and nakedness, the king's faculties enfeebled until the fool is the only sane voice left. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry points to insanity; Lear's madness is the stage's great portrait of the unsound mind. DEMENTED/DEMENS left bare — same ground. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEMOBILIZATION

[Wyler, The Best Years of Our Lives, 1946]

Who. Wyler [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The film opens with discharged servicemen flying home and follows their return to civilian life — dismissal from active service as lived experience, not paperwork. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Wyler, The Best Years of Our Lives, 1946. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DEMOBILIZATION, p. 351; scan anchor: djvu line 59471 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1946 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines dismissal from active service; the film is the demobilization experience dramatized. Borderline weighed; kept — the link is real. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEMOCRACY

[Thucydides, History of the Peloponnesian War, c. 411 BC]

Who. Thucydides [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Pericles' funeral oration: Athens' constitution 'is called a democracy because power is in the hands not of a minority but of the whole people' — the classical statement of the entry's definition. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Thucydides, History of the Peloponnesian War, c. 411 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DEMOCRACY, p. 351; scan anchor: djvu line 59475 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DENOUNCE

[Miller, The Crucible, 1953]

Who. Miller [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Salem's machinery of accusation — neighbor denouncing neighbor, the law declaring crime and prescribing punishment while hysteria writes the informations: denunciation as a social engine. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Miller, The Crucible, 1953. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DENOUNCE, p. 352; scan anchor: djvu line 59857 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1953 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry gives denounce as accuse/inform against and as the law's declaration of crime; the play stages both senses. DENUNCIATION left bare — same play, no double-dip. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEPORTATIO

[Ovid, Tristia, c. AD 8–12]

Who. Ovid [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Ovid, banished to Tomis on the Black Sea and writing the Tristia — perpetual banishment with loss of Rome, the condemned poet carried away to a foreign shore and counting the cost in verse. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines the Roman banishment to a foreign (usually island) place with loss of citizenship; Ovid's exile is its canonical literary instance. DEPORTATION left bare — same ground. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

[Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Lear divides his kingdom among his daughters in the first scene — the transfer of right, title, and office as the tragedy's fuse, devolution as catastrophe. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines devolution as transfer of right, title, estate, or office; Lear's division is that transfer as tragedy. Second Lear annotation with DEMENTIA, distinct legal point — logged. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DE HJERETICO OOHBURENDO

[Shaw, Saint Joan, 1923]

Who. Shaw [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Joan of Arc is condemned as a relapsed heretic and burned at the stake — Shaw's play follows the historical record, in which the relapse charge is what sends her to the fire, matching the writ's precise trigger. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1923 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The writ lies for burning a heretic who abjured and relapsed; Joan's case is the famous historical instance of that exact sequence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DE JUDAIBMO, STATUTUM

[Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, 1598]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Edward I's statute laid severe penalties on the Jews; Shakespeare's Venice shows the same legal machinery from the other side — Shylock navigating a Christian commercial law that treats the Jew as an outsider to its protections. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1598 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is anti-Jewish statute law; the play is the literary mirror of how such law operated on its target. Third Merchant annotation in this chunk, each on a distinct legal point. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PE UXORE RAPTA ET ABPUCTA

[Shakespeare, The Rape of Lucrece, 1594]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Lucretia, a wife, ravished and the city convulsed by the crime — Shakespeare's narrative poem is the canonical literary treatment of the ravishing of a wife, the writ's exact subject. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, The Rape of Lucrece, 1594. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PE UXORE RAPTA ET ABPUCTA, p. 330; scan anchor: djvu line 56020 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1594 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The writ lies where a man's wife has been ravished and carried away; the poem treats that crime at full length. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DEMAND A

[Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, 1598]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shylock comes before the court of Venice with his bond as his stated demand — the petition of a plaintiff setting forth what he claims is due him, pressed past mercy into menace when the court takes him at his word. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, 1598. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DEMAND A, p. 350; scan anchor: djvu line 59269 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1598 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry (Spanish law) is the plaintiff's petition setting forth his demand; Shylock's suit is that act dramatized — a plaintiff formally stating his demand before a tribunal. Reworded from the verb sense to fit this entry's noun sense; the link is genuine either way. Distinct from the DE DEBITO and DE JUDAISMO annotations on other legal points. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DICAST

[Aristophanes, The Wasps, 422 BCE]

Who. Aristophanes [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Aristophanes' comedy satirizes the Athenian passion for jury service: the old dicast Philocleon is addicted to sitting in judgment, and his son must stage a mock trial at home to wean him off the courts. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Aristophanes, The Wasps, 422 BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DICAST, p. 366; scan anchor: djvu line 61844 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Hypothesis: the entry defines the dicast as the Athenian officer combining judge and jury.

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Method: checked the classical record. Result: The Wasps (produced at the Lenaea, 422 BCE) is the classical literary treatment of exactly that figure — the paid Athenian dicast — and therefore genuinely illuminates the entry rather than merely sharing a word. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DICE

[Joseph L. Mankiewicz, Guys and Dolls, 1955]

Who. Joseph L. Mankiewicz [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The film's famous floating crap game — Nathan Detroit's endlessly relocated dice game, climaxing in the sewer — is the classic screen image of dice as instruments of chance. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Joseph L. Mankiewicz, Guys and Dolls, 1955. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DICE, p. 366; scan anchor: djvu line 61852 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1955 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Hypothesis: a film about dice gambling would illuminate 'cubes used in playing certain games of chance.' Result: the crap game in Guys and Dolls is a genuine film moment about dice gambling, not a title-match. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DICTATOR

[Charlie Chaplin, The Great Dictator, 1940]

Who. Charlie Chaplin [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Chaplin plays both a Jewish barber and Adenoid Hynkel, the strutting dictator of Tomainia — the film that fixed the modern popular image of the dictator as absolute ruler. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1940 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Sense-shift noted and kept deliberately: the entry defines the Roman magistrate invested with unlimited power for six months in times of peril; the film shows what the word became in modern usage — unlimited power without the six-month limit. The link is genuine because it traces the word's own semantic drift, which the reader needs to see. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DIES

[Maxim: Carpe diem — Horace, Odes I.11, 23 BCE]

Who. Maxim: Carpe diem — Horace [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: Carpe diem — 'seize the day' (Horace, Odes I.11)] — diem is the accusative of dies, the entry's headword. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Carpe diem — Horace, Odes I.11, 23 BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DIES, p. 366; scan anchor: djvu line 61967 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry is the Latin word for 'day.' Horace's injunction uses the accusative diem; the maxim is the most famous classical occurrence of the word. Verified via Britannica: Odes I.11, published 23 BCE. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DILIGENCE

[Aesop, 'The Ant and the Grasshopper,' c. 6th century BCE]

Who. Aesop [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Aesop's fable sets the diligently laboring ant — storing grain all summer — against the idle grasshopper; the ant is the classical emblem of the vigilant activity the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Aesop, 'The Ant and the Grasshopper,' c. 6th century BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DILIGENCE, p. 367; scan anchor: djvu line 62292 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. The entry defines diligence as 'prudence; vigilant activity; attentiveness; or care.' The fable is the canonical classical-wisdom treatment of exactly that virtue, with the ant as its embodiment. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DIPSOMANIAC

[Billy Wilder, The Lost Weekend, 1945]

Who. Billy Wilder [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Wilder's film follows alcoholic writer Don Birnam through a self-destructive drinking weekend — the screen's definitive portrait of dipsomania, the irresistible craving the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Billy Wilder, The Lost Weekend, 1945. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DIPSOMANIAC, p. 370; scan anchor: djvu line 62580 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1945 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a dipsomaniac as one with 'an irresistible desire for alcoholic liquors.' The Lost Weekend is genuinely about that condition, not a title-match. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DISAFFOREST

[A Gest of Robyn Hode, c. 1500]

Who. A Gest of Robyn Hode [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Robin Hood ballads' hero is the outlaw of the royal forest — Sherwood under forest law — the living embodiment of the world that disafforestation (removal from the operation of the forest laws) undoes. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: A Gest of Robyn Hode, c. 1500. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DISAFFOREST, p. 372; scan anchor: djvu line 62855 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1500 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines disafforest as removing lands 'from the operation of the forest laws.' The Gest (first printed c. 1500; ballad tradition 15th century) is the foundational literary treatment of the English forest-law world; it illuminates what was being disafforested. DISAVOW

[Mission: Impossible (television series), created by Bruce Geller, 1966]

Who. Mission: Impossible (television series) [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The series' famous formula — 'should you or any of your IM force be caught or killed, the Secretary will disavow any knowledge of your actions' — is the pop-culture archetype of disavowing an agent's unauthorized acts. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1966 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'To repudiate the unauthorized acts of an agent; to deny the authority by which he assumed to act.' The disavowal formula is a genuine, famous instance of exactly that act. Rendered as paraphrase to avoid misquoting the tagline. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DISCRETION

[William Shakespeare, Henry IV, Part 1, c. 1597]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'The better part of valour is discretion' — Falstaff, rising from feigned death at Shrewsbury, justifying the prudence that saved his life. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1597 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim quote verified against multiple text sources (Act 5, Scene 4). Caveat recorded: the proverbial sense is prudence/caution, while the entry's technical sense is a judge's latitude 'as discerned by his personal wisdom and experience' — adjacent but not identical. Kept because it is the most famous literary occurrence of the word and the entry itself invokes personal wisdom. How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DISGUISE

[William Shakespeare, Twelfth Night, c. 1601]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'Disguise, I see thou art a wickedness' — Viola, realizing her male disguise as Cesario has made Olivia fall in love with 'him.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Twelfth Night, c. 1601. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DISGUISE, p. 375; scan anchor: djvu line 63545 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

Why. Verbatim quote verified (Act 2, Scene 2). The entry defines disguise as dress intended so the wearer 'shall not be recognized... or shall be taken for another person' — Viola-as-Cesario is the textbook literary instance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DISFRANCHISE

[Ava DuVernay, Selma, 2014]

Who. Ava DuVernay [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) DuVernay's film dramatizes the 1965 Selma marches against the disfranchisement of Black voters — the systematic deprivation of the franchise the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 2014 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'to deprive of any franchise, as of the right of voting in elections.' Selma is genuinely about disfranchisement and its reversal, not a title-match. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DISINCARCERATE

[Frank Darabont, The Shawshank Redemption, 1994]

Who. Frank Darabont [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Darabont's film is the modern archetype of liberation from prison — Andy Dufresne's escape and Red's parole from Shawshank. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1994 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'To set at liberty, to free from prison.' The film's entire arc is disincarceration, literal and otherwise. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DISINHERITANCE

[William Shakespeare, King Lear, c. 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'Nothing will come of nothing. Speak again.' — Lear to Cordelia, in the scene where her refusal to flatter him costs her a third of the kingdom: the archetypal literary disinheritance. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim quote verified (Act 1, Scene 1, Folger text). The entry defines disinheritance as depriving one who would otherwise be heir; Lear's casting-off of Cordelia is the canonical dramatic instance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DISPENSATION

[Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1400]

Who. Geoffrey Chaucer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

DISSECTION

[Robert Wise, The Body Snatcher, 1945]

Who. Robert Wise [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Wise's film dramatizes the Burke-and-Hare trade — grave-robbers supplying corpses to anatomists for dissection — the historical world behind the entry's 'anatomical examination of a dead body.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Robert Wise, The Body Snatcher, 1945. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DISSECTION, p. 379; scan anchor: djvu line 64017 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1945 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines dissection as anatomical examination of a dead body. The film is genuinely about the procurement of bodies for that purpose. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DISSOLUTION

[Hilary Mantel, Wolf Hall, 2009]

Who. Hilary Mantel [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Mantel's novel follows Thomas Cromwell through Henry VIII's dissolution of the monasteries — the great historical instance of corporate bodies being terminated, the entry's 'dissolution of corporations' sense. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Hilary Mantel, Wolf Hall, 2009. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DISSOLUTION, p. 379; scan anchor: djvu line 64152 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2009 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry covers dissolution of contracts, corporations, and Parliament; the dissolution of the monasteries is the archetypal English instance of the corporate sense. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DISTRACTED PERSON

[William Shakespeare, Hamlet, c. 1601]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shakespeare's Ophelia, 'distracted' with grief after her father's death — singing, flower-strewing, mad — is the literary archetype of the 'state of insanity' the Illinois and New Hampshire statutes meant by the term. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

DIVORCE

[Robert Benton, Kramer vs. Kramer, 1979]

Who. Robert Benton [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Benton's film — the prototypical screen divorce — follows Ted and Joanna Kramer through the dissolution of their marriage and the custody fight over their son. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Robert Benton, Kramer vs. Kramer, 1979. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DIVORCE, p. 384; scan anchor: djvu line 64961 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1979 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines divorce as the legal separation of man and wife dissolving the marriage relation. The film is genuinely about that process, not a title-match. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DOE, JOHN

[Frank Capra, Meet John Doe, 1941]

Who. Frank Capra [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Capra's film turns the law's fictitious placeholder into a character: a down-and-out ballplayer hired to personify 'John Doe,' the ordinary-man signature on a protest letter — the fictitious everyman made flesh. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

DOG-DRAW

[A Gest of Robyn Hode, c. 1500]

Who. A Gest of Robyn Hode [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Robin Hood ballads' central offense is deer-poaching in the royal forest — the outlaw caught 'drawing after a deer,' exactly the forest-law deprehension the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1500 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines dog-draw as catching a venison offender found drawing after a deer with a hound. Poaching the king's deer is the ballads' signature crime; genuine fit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DOLUS

[Patricia Highsmith, The Talented Mr. Ripley, 1955]

Who. Patricia Highsmith [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Highsmith's Tom Ripley — the charming impostor whose every relation is a 'fraudulent address or trick used to deceive' — is fiction's purest study of dolus, guile as a way of life. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Patricia Highsmith, The Talented Mr. Ripley, 1955. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DOLUS, p. 387; scan anchor: djvu line 65430 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1955 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines dolus as guile, deceitfulness, malicious fraud, 'any subtle contrivance by words or acts with a design to circumvent.' Ripley is the textbook fictional embodiment. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DONATION

[O. Henry, 'The Gift of the Magi,' 1905]

Who. O. Henry [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) O. Henry's story — Della selling her hair, Jim his watch, each to buy the other a Christmas gift — is the classic fiction of the pure gift, the entry's general sense of donation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: O. Henry, 'The Gift of the Magi,' 1905. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DONATION, p. 392; scan anchor: djvu line 66251 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1905 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry gives the ecclesiastical sense and adds 'In general. A gift.' The story illuminates the general sense. DONUM and DONOR left bare to avoid duplicating the note. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DOOM

[William Shakespeare, Macbeth, c. 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'What, will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?' — Macbeth, shown Banquo's endless line of kings; 'doom' here keeps its old sense: the Last Judgment. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim quote verified (Act 4, Scene 1). The entry defines doom as judicial sentence/judgment; 'the crack of doom' is the Day of Judgment — the word's eschatological root, which the Scots legal usage ('pronounced for doom') preserves. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DOS

[Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813]

Who. Jane Austen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Austen's novels turn on the marriage portion — the Bennet daughters' slender fortunes, the bargaining over settlements — the dos as the engine of the marriage plot. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DOS, p. 392; scan anchor: djvu line 66379 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1813 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines dos as the wife's marriage portion transferred on marriage. Austen's fiction is the classic treatment of the portion economy. DOTAL left bare to avoid duplicating the note. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DOTAGE

[William Shakespeare, King Lear, c. 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shakespeare's Lear — dividing his kingdom on a whim, cursing his daughters, raging on the heath — is literature's archetype of the 'feebleness of the mental faculties which proceeds from old age.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines dotage at length as age-related mental decay. Lear is the canonical dramatic study of it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DOUBLE

[Fyodor Dostoevsky, The Double, 1846]

Who. Fyodor Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dostoevsky's novella follows the clerk Golyadkin as his identical double appears and usurps his life — the literary archetype of 'acting in two capacities or having two aspects.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1846 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'Twofold; acting in two capacities or having two aspects.' The novel is the classic fiction of the double. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DRACONIAN LAWS

Who. Maxim: 'written not with ink [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: Draco's laws were 'written not with ink, but blood' — the orator Demades, quoted by Plutarch in his Life of Solon.] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: 'written not with ink, but blood' — Demades on Draco, via Plutarch, Life of Solon. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DRACONIAN LAWS, p. 396; scan anchor: djvu line 66992 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines the Draconian laws as 'exceedingly severe.' Demades' saying (Plutarch, Solon 17) is the classical verdict on exactly that severity; verified via the Perseus text of Plutarch. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

DROVE

[Howard Hawks, Red River, 1948]

Who. Howard Hawks [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Hawks' western is built around the great cattle drive — a drove of cattle driven overland to market — the screen's definitive image of the entry's 'flock or herd of cattle in process of being driven.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Howard Hawks, Red River, 1948. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DROVE, p. 399; scan anchor: djvu line 67547 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1948 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a drove as cattle 'in process of being driven.' Red River is genuinely about a cattle drive. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DRUMMER

[Arthur Miller, Death of a Salesman, 1949]

Who. Arthur Miller [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Miller's Willy Loman — the traveling salesman whose samples and smile no longer open doors — is the American archetype of the 'drummer,' the commercial traveler the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Arthur Miller, Death of a Salesman, 1949. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DRUMMER, p. 399; scan anchor: djvu line 67530 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1949 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'commercial agents who travel for wholesale merchants... or take orders for goods.' Loman is exactly that figure, in literature's most famous treatment. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's

DRUNKARD

[Robert Burns, 'Tam o' Shanter,' 1790]

Who. Robert Burns [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Burns' Tam o' Shanter — Tam riding home drunk from the pub, witnessing the witches' dance — is the classic verse portrait of the habitual drunkard. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1790 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'He is a drunkard whose habit it is to get drunk.' Tam is literature's archetypal habitual drunk. EBRIETY left bare to avoid duplicating the note. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DUEL

[Stanley Kubrick, Barry Lyndon, 1975]

Who. Stanley Kubrick [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Kubrick's film stages the ritual with lethal formality — notably Barry's pistol duel with Lord Bullingdon — the screen's most famous image of combat with deadly weapons by previous agreement. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Stanley Kubrick, Barry Lyndon, 1975. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DUEL, p. 402; scan anchor: djvu line 67992 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1975 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a duel as combat with deadly weapons 'by previous agreement or upon a previous quarrel.' The film's duels are textbook instances. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DUELLUM

[Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819]

Who. Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Scott's novel climaxes in a trial by combat — the accused Rebecca's champion meeting her accuser in the lists — the classic fictional treatment of judicial battel. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DUELLUM, p. 402; scan anchor: djvu line 68002 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1819 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'The trial by battel or judicial combat.' Ivanhoe's trial by combat is the canonical novelistic instance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DUMB

[Arthur Penn, The Miracle Worker, 1962]

Who. Arthur Penn [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Penn's film tells of Helen Keller — deaf, blind, and mute — and Annie Sullivan's breaking through to her: the screen's most famous portrait of muteness and its overcoming. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1962 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'One who cannot speak; a person who is mute.' The film centers on a mute (and deaf-blind) child's acquisition of language. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DUNGEON

[Alexandre Dumas, The Count of Monte Cristo, 1844]

Who. Alexandre Dumas [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dumas' Edmond Dantes endures fourteen years in the sea-fortress dungeon of the Chateau d'If — literature's archetypal 'dark or subterraneous prison.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1844 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the dungeon as an underground prison 'in the strongest part of a fortress.' The Chateau d'If is the textbook fictional instance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DUODECEMVIRALE JUDICIUM

[Sidney Lumet, Twelve Angry Men, 1957]

Who. Sidney Lumet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Lumet's film — twelve jurors deliberating a murder verdict in a single room — is the screen's definitive image of 'the trial by twelve men, or by jury.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1957 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Headword as parsed. The entry is literally the trial by twelve men. The film is genuinely about that institution in action. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DUTY

[Cicero, De Officiis, 44 BCE]

Who. Cicero [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Cicero's De Officiis (On Duties) — the 44 BCE treatise on moral obligation, written as advice to his son — is the classical world's systematic treatment of duty as the entry defines it: obligations resting 'upon an imperative ethical basis.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Cicero, De Officiis, 44 BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DUTY, p. 404; scan anchor: djvu line 68466 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry uses 'duty' in the wider sense of 'moral obligations which lie outside the jural sphere... rest upon an imperative ethical basis.' De Officiis is the canonical classical work on precisely that; date verified 44 BCE. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DYING DECLARATION

[Rudolph Mate, D.O.A., 1950]

Who. Rudolph Mate [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Mate's noir opens with a poisoned man walking into a police station to report his own murder — the dying declaration as plot engine: a statement made in the shadow of certain death. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1950 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry cross-refers to Declaration (the dying-declaration hearsay exception). The film's premise is literally a man delivering his own dying declaration to the authorities. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DYING WITHOUT ISSUE

[William Shakespeare, Macbeth, c. 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'No son of mine succeeding.' — Macbeth, on the 'fruitless crown' and 'barren sceptre' the witches have given him: kingship with no heir to take it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim quote verified (Act 3, Scene 1). The entry concerns failure of issue; Macbeth's lament is the canonical dramatic expression of dying without an heir. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EAST INDIA COMPANY

[Gore Verbinski, Pirates of the Caribbean: At World's End, 2007]

Who. Gore Verbinski [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The films' East India Trading Company — Cutler Beckett's chartered monopoly wielding fleets and private law — is pop culture's image of the great chartered company, fictionalized but instantly recognizable. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 2007 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the chartered trading company. The films' EITC is a fictionalized but genuine screen treatment of that institution; the note marks the fictionalization. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EAVESDROPPING

[Francis Ford Coppola, The Conversation, 1974]

Who. Francis Ford Coppola [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Coppola's film follows Harry Caul, a surveillance expert who records a conversation he was not meant to understand — the modern, technological heir of the entry's listener 'under walls or windows.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Francis Ford Coppola, The Conversation, 1974. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EAVESDROPPING, p. 410; scan anchor: djvu line 69245 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1974 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the common-law misdemeanor of listening under eaves 'to hearken after discourse.' The film is entirely about professional eavesdropping. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EBB AND FLOW

[William Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, c. 1599]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'There is a tide in the affairs of men, / Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune' — Brutus, urging action before the tide turns. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim quote verified (Act 4, Scene 3). The entry is the old admiralty-jurisdiction phrase for the tidal limit; Shakespeare's Brutus uses the same tidal image — ebb and flow as the measure of opportunity. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EOHOLALIA

[Ovid, Metamorphoses, c. 8 CE]

Who. Ovid [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Ovid's Metamorphoses (Book 3), the nymph Echo is cursed to speak only by repeating the last words of others — the mythic origin of the symptom the entry defines as 'the constant and senseless repetition of particular words or phrases.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Ovid, Metamorphoses, c. 8 CE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EOHOLALIA, p. 411; scan anchor: djvu line 69472 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Headword as parsed ('EOHOLALIA' = ECHOLALIA). The entry is the medical term for compulsive repetition. The Echo myth is the genuine classical source of the name and the image; verified via multiple classical sources. EFFICIENT CAUSE

[Aristotle, Physics, c. 350 BCE]

Who. Aristotle [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Aristotle's four causes (Physics II.3) — material, formal, efficient, and final — make the efficient cause the agent or source that sets change in motion (e.g., the sculptor of the statue): the philosophical root of the entry's 'working cause.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines the efficient cause as 'the working cause... which produces effects or results.' Aristotle's aitiai are the genuine classical source of the term; the note marks that the legal usage (intervening cause in tort) is narrower than the philosophical one. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EFFIGY

[James McTeigue, V for Vendetta, 2005]

Who. James McTeigue [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The film revives the Guy Fawkes effigy tradition — the burning 'guy' and the Fawkes mask — as political theater: the corporeal representation of a person made an object of public meaning, the entry's sense. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: James McTeigue, V for Vendetta, 2005. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EFFIGY, p. 412; scan anchor: djvu line 69723 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2005 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'The corporeal representation of a person,' noting libel by effigy. The Guy Fawkes effigy tradition, carried by the film, is the living English instance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EFFRACTOR

[Alfred Hitchcock, To Catch a Thief, 1955]

Who. Alfred Hitchcock [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Hitchcock's film follows John Robie, the retired jewel thief 'the Cat,' suspected of a new burglary spree — the screen's most elegant effractor, one who breaks through. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Alfred Hitchcock, To Catch a Thief, 1955. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EFFRACTOR, p. 412; scan anchor: djvu line 69754 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1955 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'One who breaks through; one who commits a burglary.' The film is genuinely about a burglar. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

[Steve McQueen, 12 Years a Slave, 2013]

Who. Steve McQueen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) McQueen's film follows Solomon Northup — kidnapped into slavery, restored to freedom — through the full arc from unfreedom to liberty the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 2013 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'The act by which one who was unfree... is set at liberty and made his own master.' The film is genuinely about emancipation from slavery. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EMBBACEBY

[John Grisham, The Runaway Jury, 1996]

Who. John Grisham [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Grisham's legal thriller turns on the corrupt influencing of a jury — both sides' consultants manipulating the Biloxi tobacco-trial jurors — embracery as a whole novel's plot engine. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: John Grisham, The Runaway Jury, 1996. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EMBBACEBY, p. 419; scan anchor: djvu line 70790 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1996 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Headword as parsed ('EMBBACEBY' = EMBRACERY). The entry defines embracery as attempting 'to influence a jury corruptly to one side or the other, by promises, persuasions, entreaties, entertainments, douceurs.' The novel (publication year verified 1996) is entirely about that offense. The companion entry EMBRACEOR (the person) is left bare to avoid duplicating the note. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EMIGRANT

[Vilhelm Moberg, The Emigrants, 1949]

Who. Vilhelm Moberg [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Moberg's novel follows Karl Oskar and Kristina from Smaland to Minnesota — the emigrant who 'quits his country... with a design to settle elsewhere,' family and property in tow. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Vilhelm Moberg, The Emigrants, 1949. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EMIGRANT, p. 420; scan anchor: djvu line 70858 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1949 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry quotes Vattel's definition nearly verbatim; Moberg's tetralogy (Swedish publication verified 1949) is the classic novel of emigration. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DURESS, 17

[Jim Sheridan, In the Name of the Father, 1993]

Who. Jim Sheridan [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Sheridan's film dramatizes the Guildford Four's coerced confessions — convictions extracted by unlawful constraint, later overturned — the screen's most famous treatment of duress in the criminal process. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jim Sheridan, In the Name of the Father, 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DURESS, 17, p. 404; scan anchor: djvu line 68351 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Headword as parsed ('DURESS, 17'). The entry defines duress as 'unlawful constraint exercised upon a man.' The film is about confessions produced by exactly that. DURESSOR left bare to avoid duplicating the note. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EMINENT DOMAIN

[Rob Sitch, The Castle, 1997] (paraphrase)

Who. Rob Sitch [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) An Australian family fights the government's compulsory acquisition of their beloved home all the way to court, insisting a house is not just property. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Rob Sitch, The Castle, 1997] (paraphrase). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EMINENT DOMAIN, p. 420; scan anchor: djvu line 70887 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1997 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The film's entire plot IS eminent domain (compulsory acquisition for public use) as the entry defines it. No verbatim-certain line on hand, so tight paraphrase clearly marked; no dialogue invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EMPLOYEE

[Herman Melville, "Bartleby, the Scrivener", 1853]

Who. Herman Melville [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "I would prefer not to." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Herman Melville, "Bartleby, the Scrivener", 1853. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EMPLOYEE, p. 421; scan anchor: djvu line 71158 [basis: citation +

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1853 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain, among the most quoted lines in American fiction. It illuminates the entry ('a person employed') by showing the employee as a moral agent within employment — the limit-case of being employed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EMPTOR

[Maxim: Caveat emptor — "Let the buyer beware"]

Who. Maxim: Caveat emptor — "Let the buyer beware" [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Caveat emptor — "Let the buyer beware." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Caveat emptor — "Let the buyer beware". Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EMPTOR, p. 422; scan anchor: djvu line 71268 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry itself quotes this maxim in its body ('Used in the maxim "caveat emptor," let the buyer beware'). Genuine classical maxim, zero invention risk; the entry hands it to me. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

ENGAGEMENT

[Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813]

Who. Jane Austen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1813 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. BORDERLINE, kept deliberately: the entry defines the French-law engagement as a binding obligation/contract. Austen's verbatim-certain opening line shows the cultural engine that made engagements (betrothals) legally load-bearing — the whole novel's legal plot of entails and settlements turns on it. Fit is to the binding-undertaking sense, adjacent to the French-law definition, stated plainly. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

ENLISTMENT

[Erich Maria Remarque, All Quiet on the Western Front, 1929] (paraphrase)

Who. Erich Maria Remarque [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Paul Bäumer and his schoolmates enlist straight from school, urged on by their teacher Kantorek, contracting themselves to the army as subordinates. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1929 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The novel's opening movement IS enlistment as the entry defines it (voluntarily entering military service, contracting to serve in a subordinate capacity). Paraphrase avoids inventing Remarque's sentences. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

ENTAILED

[Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813]

Who. Jane Austen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Mr. Bennet's property consisted almost entirely in an estate of two thousand a year, which, unfortunately for his daughters, was entailed, in default of heirs male, on a distant relation." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1813 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim Chapter 1 text (confident). The rare case where a famous novel passage IS the dictionary entry illustrated — entailment ('settled or limited to specified heirs, or in tail') as plot engine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

ENTER

[Dante Alighieri, Inferno, c. 1320]

Who. Dante Alighieri [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Abandon all hope, ye who enter here." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Dante Alighieri, Inferno, c. 1320. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ENTER, p. 427; scan anchor: djvu line 72076 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Standard English rendering of 'Lasciate ogne speranza, voi ch'intrate' (translation noted). The most famous literary 'enter' in Western letters; illuminates the entry's core — entering as the threshold act (upon land, before a court) with irreversible consequence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EPIDEMIC

[Albert Camus, The Plague, 1947] (paraphrase)

Who. Albert Camus [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Oran, a spreading pestilence seals the town under quarantine, and each character must answer what decency requires of a city in the grip of epidemic. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1947 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The novel is the canonical literary treatment of an epidemic as a civic event, matching the entry's 'widely spread or generally prevailing at a given place and time.' Paraphrase; no Camus sentences invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EPILEPSY

[Fyodor Dostoevsky, The Idiot, 1869] (paraphrase)

Who. Fyodor Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Prince Myshkin's epileptic aura brings a fleeting moment of supreme clarity and harmony — then the seizure falls and consciousness is lost. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1869 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The most famous epileptic in literature. The paraphrase illuminates the entry's 'paroxysms' structure (aura, then loss of consciousness) from the inside. No quotation invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EQUAL

[George Orwell, Animal Farm, 1945]

Who. George Orwell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "All animals are equal, but some animals are more equal than others." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1945 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain. The single most quoted literary line about equality-as-legal-fiction ('on the same plane or level with respect to rights'); illuminates the entry by showing the word weaponized — equality proclaimed, hierarchy preserved. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EQUALITY

[Kurt Vonnegut, "Harrison Bergeron", 1961]

Who. Kurt Vonnegut [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "The year was 2081, and everybody was finally equal." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Kurt Vonnegut, "Harrison Bergeron", 1961. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EQUALITY, p. 431; scan anchor: djvu line 72831 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1961 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain opening sentence. The story literalizes the entry's definition ('the condition of possessing the same rights, privileges, and immunities') — enforced by handicaps — making the definition flesh as dystopia. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EQUITABLE

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1597]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "The quality of mercy is not strained; / It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

+ host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1597 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain. Portia's speech IS equity pleading against strict law (Shylock's bond) — mercy tempering legal right 'in consideration of the facts and circumstances of the individual case,' which is the entry's definition of equitable. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

ERASURE

[George Orwell, Nineteen Eighty-Four, 1949]

Who. George Orwell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Who controls the past controls the future: who controls the present controls the past." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1949 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain. Winston's Ministry work IS erasure as the entry defines it (obliteration of words from a written instrument); the quote states the doctrine behind the act. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

ERROR

[Alexander Pope, An Essay on Criticism, 1711]

Who. Alexander Pope [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "To err is human; to forgive, divine." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Alexander Pope, An Essay on Criticism, 1711. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ERROR, p. 435; scan anchor: djvu line 73409 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1711 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain classical English maxim on error. Illuminates the entry (mistaken judgment; ground for a writ of error) by pairing error with its remedy — which is exactly what a writ of error seeks. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

ESCAPE

[Frank Darabont, The Shawshank Redemption, 1994]

Who. Frank Darabont [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Get busy living, or get busy dying." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1994 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain (Andy's line to Red). The film's third act IS escape as the entry defines it — departure out of lawful custody before entitlement by process of law — and the line states the escape's moral engine. The 'hope' line was considered and passed over as about endurance, not escape. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

ESSENCE

[Antoine de Saint-Exupéry, The Little Prince, 1943]

Who. Antoine de Saint-Exupéry [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "What is essential is invisible to the eye." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Antoine de Saint-Exupéry, The Little Prince, 1943. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ESSENCE, p. 438; scan anchor: djvu line 73920 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1943 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Standard English rendering (Katherine Woods translation) of the fox's secret; translation noted. The most famous literary sentence about essence; illuminates the entry's 'that which is indispensable' — and the contract-law point that the essence is not always on the face of the instrument. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EVICTION

[John Steinbeck, The Grapes of Wrath, 1939] (paraphrase)

Who. John Steinbeck [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Tenant farmers watch tractors demolish their houses as the bank takes the land — dispossession by economic process, family by family. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: John Steinbeck, The Grapes of Wrath, 1939] (paraphrase). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EVICTION, p. 446; scan anchor: djvu line 75280 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1939 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The novel's central action IS eviction as the entry defines it (depriving a person of possession of lands held, by process/judgment). Paraphrase; no Steinbeck sentences invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EVIDENTIARY

[Arthur Conan Doyle, "A Scandal in Bohemia", 1891]

Who. Arthur Conan Doyle [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Arthur Conan Doyle, "A Scandal in Bohemia", 1891. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EVIDENTIARY, p. 449; scan anchor: djvu line 75902 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1891 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain in the standard rendering (translation/spelling noted). The classic literary statement of the evidentiary discipline — no theory before data — illuminating what 'having the quality of evidence' demands of the reasoner. Fit is to the concept of evidence generally (no standalone EVIDENCE headword exists in this chunk), stated plainly. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EX NECESSITATE

[Maxim: Necessitas non habet legem — "Necessity has no law"]

Who. Maxim: Necessitas non habet legem — "Necessity has no law" [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Genuine classical maxim; the classical root of the legal doctrine of necessity. The entry's phrases (ex necessitate legis, ex necessitate rei) are instances of it. Zero invention risk. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EXAMINATION

Who. Maxim: "The unexamined life is not worth living" — Socrates [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "The unexamined life is not worth living." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: "The unexamined life is not worth living" — Socrates, Apology 38a. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXAMINATION, p. 455; scan anchor: djvu line 76800 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Classical maxim, standard English rendering of Apology 38a (translation noted). The foundational Western statement on examination as a practice — here turned inward. The entry's trial-practice sense (questioning to bring truth before judgment) and the maxim's self-examination share the root act: questioning before judgment. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EXCESS

[Maxim: Mēden agan — "Nothing in excess" (Delphic maxim)]

Who. Maxim: Mēden agan — "Nothing in excess" (Delphic maxim) [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Mēden agan — "Nothing in excess." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Mēden agan — "Nothing in excess" (Delphic maxim). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXCESS, p. 457; scan anchor: djvu line 77296 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Genuine Delphic maxim; the moral root of the legal doctrine. The entry defines excess as using 'more force than necessary' — precisely 'too much.' Zero invention risk. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EXECUTION

[Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "It is a far, far better thing that I do, than I have ever done; it is a far, far better rest that I go to than I have ever known." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXECUTION, p. 460; scan anchor: djvu line 77826 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1859 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain. The most famous literary execution scene in English (Sydney Carton at the guillotine); illuminates execution as the carried-out sentence, faced with moral agency. EXECUTIONER deliberately left bare — the quote belongs to the executed, not the executioner. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EXILE

[Dante Alighieri, Divine Comedy, c. 1320] (paraphrase)

Who. Dante Alighieri [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Paradiso XVII, Cacciaguida prophesies to Dante the bitterness to come: you shall leave everything you love most dearly — the bread of exile. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Dante Alighieri, Divine Comedy, c. 1320] (paraphrase). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXILE, p. 463; scan anchor: djvu line 78474 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Dante wrote the Comedy in exile; the prophecy passage is literature's most famous first-person account of what banishment means ('Banishment; the person banished'). Paraphrase rather than contested translation keeps it honest. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

Who. Maxim: Cogito [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Cogito, ergo sum — "I think, therefore I am." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Cogito, ergo sum — "I think, therefore I am" — René Descartes, Discourse on the Method, 1637. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXIST, p. 463; scan anchor: djvu line 78495 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1637 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain Latin with standard translation. The foundational modern statement of existence as first certainty; illuminates the entry's 'to be in present force, activity, or effect' at the deepest level. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EXIT

[William Shakespeare, The Winter's Tale, c. 1611]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Exit, pursued by a bear." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, The Winter's Tale, c. 1611. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXIT, p. 463; scan anchor: djvu line 78529 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1611 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain stage direction; the most famous 'exit' in English letters. LIGHT fit, stated plainly: the entry is literally about the word 'exit' as a formal going-forth ('It goes forth,' in docket entries for issue of process), and this is the word's most famous formal use. Illumination of the word-as-act, not a deep doctrinal link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EXPECT

[Charles Dickens, Great Expectations, 1861] (paraphrase)

What. (paraphrase) Pip's 'great expectations' — a fortune he awaits, promised and contingent — structure the entire novel; the expectancy of inheritance is the plot. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, Great Expectations, 1861] (paraphrase). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXPECT, p. 463; scan anchor: djvu line 78631 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1861 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. BORDERLINE, kept deliberately: fit is to the entry's expectancy sense ('dependence upon an expected event; contingency as to possession or enjoyment,' including estates in expectancy), which the novel literalizes. Paraphrase states the premise without inventing Dickens's sentences. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EXPERIMENT

[Mary Shelley, Frankenstein, 1818] (paraphrase)

Who. Mary Shelley [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Victor Frankenstein's experiment — a trial to see what his design will do — creates a living being he cannot control. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Mary Shelley, Frankenstein, 1818] (paraphrase). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXPERIMENT, p. 466; scan anchor: djvu line 78723 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1818 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. BORDERLINE, kept deliberately: fit is to the entry's first patent-law sense (a trial 'to ascertain what changes or additions may be necessary to make it accomplish the design of the projector'). The novel is the canonical literary treatment of the experiment and its consequences. Paraphrase; no quotation invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EXPULSION

[John Milton, Paradise Lost, 1667]

Who. John Milton [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "The world was all before them, where to choose / Their place of rest, and Providence their guide." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: John Milton, Paradise Lost, 1667. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXPULSION, p. 468; scan anchor: djvu line 79139 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1667 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain closing lines. The archetypal literary expulsion (Adam and Eve from Eden); illuminates the entry's 'putting or driving out … for breach of duty, improper conduct or other sufficient cause' — expulsion as driven-out-with-consequence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EXTORTION

[Francis Ford Coppola, The Godfather, 1972]

Who. Francis Ford Coppola [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "I'm gonna make him an offer he can't refuse." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Francis Ford Coppola, The Godfather, 1972. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXTORTION, p. 470; scan anchor: djvu line 79451 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1972 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain. The most famous film line about extortion — the threat framed as an offer, which is exactly the entry's 'oppression by color or pretense of right.' [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

EXTREME HAZARD

[Wolfgang Petersen, The Perfect Storm, 2000]

Who. Wolfgang Petersen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Film moment (paraphrase): the Andrea Gail founders in the storm despite every means the crew has to save her — a vessel in imminent danger of being lost 'notwithstanding all the means that can be applied to get her off.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Wolfgang Petersen, The Perfect Storm, 2000. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXTREME HAZARD, p. 471; scan anchor: djvu line 79772 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2000 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The definition is a vessel lost despite all means; the film's central subject is literally that scenario at sea. No dialogue invented — plot paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EXUEARE

[Ovid, Tristia, c. 8-12 AD]

Who. Ovid [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Classical letters (paraphrase): Ovid, punished by exile (relegatio) to Tomis under Augustus, wrote the Tristia — the classic literary record of a man living under a legal sentence of exile. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Ovid, Tristia, c. 8-12 AD. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EXUEARE, p. 471; scan anchor: djvu line 79799 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry concerns exile as legal punishment (Magna Carta c. 29). Ovid's Tristia is the canonical first-person literature of that punishment; exile 8 AD and composition in exile are well-attested facts, no invented quote. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EYE- WITNESS

[Sidney Lumet, 12 Angry Men, 1957]

Who. Sidney Lumet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Film moment (paraphrase): the prosecution's old-man eyewitness is discredited when it emerges he was not wearing his glasses at the time he claimed to have seen the killing. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sidney Lumet, 12 Angry Men, 1957. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EYE- WITNESS, p. 473; scan anchor: djvu line 79825 [basis: citation + host entry record

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

(entries.json)]

When. 1957 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The film is the canonical dramatization of eyewitness fallibility — the entry distinguishes the eyewitness as one who 'saw the act,' and the film shows seeing is not enough. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

F

[Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850]

Who. Nathaniel Hawthorne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Novel parallel (paraphrase): Hester Prynne is forced to wear a scarlet 'A' as a lifelong visible mark of her offense — a shaming letter borne by the convicted, as the brand 'F' was borne by the felon. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry F, p. 474; scan anchor: djvu line 79861 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1850 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Structural parallel: a single letter marked on/by the offender as punishment. Plot fact certain; no quote invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FACTA

[Maxim: Facta sunt potentiora verbis]

Who. Maxim: Facta sunt potentiora verbis [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Classical maxim: Facta sunt potentiora verbis — 'Deeds are more powerful than words.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Facta sunt potentiora verbis. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FACTA, p. 476; scan anchor: djvu line 80186 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The maxim is quoted in the entry itself and is the classical wisdom content of the headword; citing it verbatim is safe because the entry supplies the form. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

FACTA

[Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819]

Who. Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Novel passage (paraphrase): the tournament at Ashby, where knights break lances before the lists — the canonical fictional rendering of 'facta armorum,' feats of arms. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FACTA, p. 476; scan anchor: djvu line 80186 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1819 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry glosses facta armorum as jousts or tournaments; Ivanhoe's Ashby tournament is the famous literary depiction. Plot paraphrase, no invented dialogue. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FAIDA

[William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, 1597]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Verse, verbatim: 'From ancient grudge break to new mutiny, / Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.' — the Prologue's account of the Montague-Capulet feud, a deadly family enmity of exactly the faida kind. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, 1597. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FAIDA, p. 478; scan anchor: djvu line 80541 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1597 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines faida as open deadly hostility / family feud recognized as justification for vengeance; the Prologue lines are verbatim-certain and name the structure exactly. Year 1597 = first quarto. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

FAILLITE

[Honore de Balzac, Cesar Birotteau, 1837]

Who. Honore de Balzac [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Novel (paraphrase): Cesar Birotteau, the Paris perfumer ruined by speculation, confronting his creditors in bankruptcy and the slow, honor-bound work of repaying them. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Honore de Balzac, Cesar Birotteau, 1837. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FAILLITE, p. 478; scan anchor: djvu line 80584 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1837 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines faillite as the debtor unable to fulfill his engagements; Birotteau is the canonical literary bankruptcy — plot fact certain, no passage invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FALSA DEMONSTRATIO

[Maxim: Falsa demonstratio non nocet]

Who. Maxim: Falsa demonstratio non nocet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Classical maxim: Falsa demonstratio non nocet — 'false description does not vitiate' (provided the thing or person is certain). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Falsa demonstratio non nocet. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FALSA DEMONSTRATIO, p. 480; scan anchor: djvu line 80945 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The maxim is the entry's own stated rule; quoted verbatim as the entry supplies it, so no invention risk. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

FALSA MONETA

[Maxim: Falsa orthographia non vitiat chartam]

Who. Maxim: Falsa orthographia non vitiat chartam [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Classical maxim (from this entry): Falsa orthographia non vitiat chartam — 'false spelling does not vitiate a deed.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Falsa orthographia non vitiat chartam. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FALSA MONETA, p. 480; scan anchor: djvu line 80975 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

F ALSUS

[Maxim: Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus]

Who. Maxim: Falsus in uno [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Classical maxim: Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus — 'false in one thing, false in everything.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry F ALSUS, p. 482; scan anchor: djvu line 81245 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Quoted verbatim as the entry supplies it; the classic rule on the credibility of a witness shown false once. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FAHA

[William Shakespeare, Othello, c. 1603-04]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Verse, verbatim (Iago): 'But he that filches from me my good name / Robs me of that which not enriches him, / And makes me poor indeed.' — fama, the reputation that cannot be priced. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Othello, c. 1603-04. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FAHA, p. 482; scan anchor: djvu line 81266 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1603 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's core is reputation as a legal interest; Iago's speech is the famous dramatic statement of what a good name is worth. Three short verse lines, verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

FAMACIDE

[William Shakespeare, Othello, c. 1603-04]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Character (paraphrase): Iago, whose planted whispers kill Desdemona's reputation and Othello's honor — the slanderer as a killer of reputation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Othello, c. 1603-04. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FAMACIDE, p. 482; scan anchor: djvu line 81286 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1603 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Famacide = killer of reputation; Iago is the archetypal literary slanderer, and his weapon is precisely reputation-murder. Distinct from the FAMA quote; reasoning rides with it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FARO

[Alexander Pushkin, The Queen of Spades, 1834]

Who. Alexander Pushkin [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Story (paraphrase): Hermann's ruinous obsession with the card game — staking everything on the order of the deal and the secret of the three winning cards. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Alexander Pushkin, The Queen of Spades, 1834. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FARO, p. 484; scan anchor: djvu line 81580 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1834 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Faro is the game of the story — banker versus players on the order of the deal, exactly the entry's definition. Plot fact certain; no passage invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FEHMGERICHTE

[Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Gotz von Berlichingen, 1773]

Who. Johann Wolfgang von Goethe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Scene (paraphrase): the secret Vehmic tribunal convening in darkness to try and condemn the accused — the classic literary rendering of the medieval German secret courts. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Gotz von Berlichingen, 1773. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FEHMGERICHTE, p. 488; scan anchor: djvu line 82310 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1773 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the Fehmgerichte as secret tribunals usurping weak governments' functions and inspiring dread; Goethe's Vehmgericht scene is the canonical dramatization. Plot fact certain; no dialogue invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FELO DE SE

[William Shakespeare, Hamlet, c. 1599-1601]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Soliloquy, verbatim: 'To be, or not to be: that is the question' — (paraphrase) Hamlet weighing self-murder against suffering 'the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,' the dramatic deliberation of the felon-of-oneself. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Felo de se = one who deliberately ends his own life; Hamlet's soliloquy is the canonical dramatic treatment of that deliberation. Opening line verbatim-certain; the rest is a marked paraphrase, no invented text. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FENIAN

[Irish mythological tradition, the Fenian Cycle]

Who. Irish mythological tradition [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Tradition (identification, no quote): the Fenian (Ossianic) Cycle — the Irish tales of Fionn mac Cumhaill and his warrior band, the Fianna, from whom the old sense of 'fenian' (champion, hero) comes. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Irish mythological tradition, the Fenian Cycle. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FENIAN, p. 490; scan anchor: djvu line 82623 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry's old sense of the word is exactly the Fianna of Irish legend; naming the cycle is the genuine classical-wisdom link. No passage invented, no author falsely assigned. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

FESTUM

[Victor Hugo, Notre-Dame de Paris, 1831]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Scene (paraphrase): the Feast of Fools in medieval Paris, where the crowd crowns Quasimodo Pope of Fools — the canonical literary rendering of the festum stultorum. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Victor Hugo, Notre-Dame de Paris, 1831. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FESTUM, p. 492; scan anchor: djvu line 83044 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1831 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry glosses festum stultorum as the feast of fools; Hugo's Gringoire-chapter feast is the famous fictional depiction. Plot fact certain; no passage invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FLEET

[Charles Dickens, The Pickwick Papers, 1836-37]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Novel (paraphrase): Mr. Pickwick's imprisonment in the Fleet — the debtors' prison rendered in full literary detail, the canonical fictional Fleet. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, The Pickwick Papers, 1836-37. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FLEET, p. 604; scan anchor: djvu line 85077 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1836 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the Fleet as a London prison (now abolished); Dickens's Pickwick chapters are the famous literary depiction of that prison. Plot fact certain; no passage invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FORBANNITTTS

[Robert Louis Stevenson, Treasure Island, 1883]

Who. Robert Louis Stevenson [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

FOREST

[English ballad tradition, the Robin Hood ballads (e.g., A Gest of Robyn Hode, c. 1450)]

Who. English ballad tradition [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Tradition (identification, no quote): the Robin Hood ballads — Sherwood as the king's forest, where taking the king's deer is the crime that makes the outlaw. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: English ballad tradition, the Robin Hood ballads (e.g., A Gest of Robyn Hode, c. 1450). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FOREST, p. 511; scan anchor: djvu line 86218 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1450 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the legal forest and its peculiar law; the ballad tradition's engine is precisely forest law — the king's deer, the poaching outlaw. No passage invented; the identification is the link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

FORETHOUGHT FELONY

[William Shakespeare, Macbeth, c. 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Play, verbatim: 'Is this a dagger which I see before me' — (paraphrase) Macbeth, having designed Duncan's murder with Lady Macbeth beforehand, walking toward the deed: murder in consequence of a previous design. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Macbeth, c. 1606. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FORETHOUGHT FELONY, p. 511; scan anchor: djvu line 86333 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is Scots murder with previous design; Macbeth's regicide is the canonical premeditated murder in drama. Dagger line verbatim-certain; premeditation is marked paraphrase of plot fact. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FORMED DESIGN

[William Shakespeare, Macbeth, c. 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Play (paraphrase): Macbeth's intention to kill Duncan, deliberated and fixed beforehand with Lady Macbeth, then carried out — a formed design in the entry's exact sense. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Macbeth, c. 1606. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FORMED DESIGN, p. 615; scan anchor: djvu line 86818 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines formed design as a deliberate fixed intention to kill; Macbeth's regicide is planned before it is done. Sibling of the FORETHOUGHT FELONY annotation; paraphrase only, no quote duplicated. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

FORNICATION

[Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850]

Who. Nathaniel Hawthorne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Novel (paraphrase): Hester Prynne's adultery — unlawful intercourse with a married man, punished by the Puritan community — is the act at the novel's center. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FORNICATION, p. 615; scan anchor: djvu line 86924 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1850 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry covers intercourse where one party is married; the novel's subject is exactly that offense and its social punishment. Distinct reasoning from the F (brand) annotation: here the act, there the mark. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FORTUJIIUM

[Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819]

Who. Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Novel (paraphrase): spear-fighting in the lists at the Ashby tournament — the fictional tournament as 'fighting with spears.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FORTUJIIUM, p. 517; scan anchor: djvu line 87172 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1819 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines fortunitum as tournament spear-fighting; Ivanhoe's tournament is the canonical fictional rendering. Sibling of the FACTA annotation; judged independently, paraphrase distinct. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FOUNDLING

[Henry Fielding, Tom Jones (The History of Tom Jones, a Foundling), 1749]

Who. Henry Fielding [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Novel (paraphrase): Tom Jones, discovered as an infant in Squire Allworthy's bed and raised without known parents — the foundling epic, named in the book's own subtitle. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Henry Fielding, Tom Jones (The History of Tom Jones, a Foundling), 1749. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FOUNDLING, p. 518; scan anchor: djvu line 87372 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1749 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the foundling as the deserted infant found without parent or guardian; the novel's full title names its hero a foundling. Plot fact certain; no passage invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FRAOTURA NAVTUM

[Daniel Defoe, Robinson Crusoe, 1719]

Who. Daniel Defoe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Novel (paraphrase): Crusoe cast ashore after the wreck of his ship — the canonical literary shipwreck and what follows for the man who survives it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Daniel Defoe, Robinson Crusoe, 1719. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FRAOTURA NAVTUM, p. 519; scan anchor: djvu line 87502 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1719 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is the wreck of ships; the novel is the famous narrative of a shipwreck's human consequence. Plot fact certain; no passage invented. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FRATRICIDE

[William Shakespeare, Hamlet, c. 1601]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Claudius murdered his brother, old King Hamlet, to take the crown — the play's engine is fratricide, named outright when the Ghost exposes it and Claudius confesses 'a brother's murder' in prayer. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1601 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry defines the killing of a brother/sister, which is the exact crime at the play's center. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FRAUD

[Steven Spielberg, Catch Me If You Can, 2002]

Who. Steven Spielberg [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The film follows con artist Frank Abagnale Jr., whose career is a catalog of the entry's elements — false representation, intent to deceive, gain at another's expense — through check forgery and impersonation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Steven Spielberg, Catch Me If You Can, 2002. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FRAUD, p. 521; scan anchor: djvu line 87869 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2002 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-accept: the entry is doctrinal, but the film's plot turns entirely on fraud's legal elements, dramatizing the definition rather than merely naming it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FREEDMAN

[Petronius, Satyricon, c. 60 AD]

Who. Petronius [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Trimalchio, the vulgarly wealthy host of the dinner-party episode, is an ex-slave freedman — literature's archetypal freedman, satirized precisely for the anxieties of his new status. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Petronius, Satyricon, c. 60 AD. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

(1910), entry FREEDMAN, p. 523; scan anchor: djvu line 88284 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Genuine: the entry's Roman-law sense ('one set free from bondage') is exactly Trimalchio's status, and the novel satirizes the freedman class directly. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FRIARS

[William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c. 1597]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Friar Laurence, a Franciscan friar, secretly marries Romeo and Juliet and devises the sleeping-draught scheme — a member of one of the entry's four orders driving the plot. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c. 1597. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FRIARS, p. 525; scan anchor: djvu line 88607 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1597 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry names the four mendicant orders; the character belongs to one of them and his office moves the tragedy. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FRIENDLESS MAN

[English ballad tradition, "Robin Hood" ballads (traditional)]

Who. English ballad tradition [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The ballad outlaw of Sherwood — a man outside the law's protection, living by wit against the sheriff — is the popular archetype of the entry's 'outlaw, denied all help of friends.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: English ballad tradition, "Robin Hood" ballads (traditional). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FRIENDLESS MAN, p. 525; scan anchor: djvu line 88634 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Borderline-accept: the ballads never use the term 'friendless man,' but the entry DEFINES the word as 'outlaw,' and Robin Hood is the defining English outlaw — the link is definitional, not decorative. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FUGITIVE

[Victor Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Jean Valjean, the convict who breaks parole and spends the novel evading Inspector Javert, is the archetypal fugitive from justice — flight from penalty as a life's arc. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1862 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: Valjean's entire story is the entry's definition (flight/evasion from the consequences of a misdeed) in motion. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FUNCTIONARY

[Nikolai Gogol, "The Overcoat", 1842]

Who. Nikolai Gogol [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Akaky Akakievich, the titular councillor endlessly copying documents in a St. Petersburg department, is literature's definitive portrait of the petty functionary. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1842 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-accept: the story never uses the word, but it IS the cultural reference point for the low functionary, giving flesh to the entry's bare definition. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FUNERAL EXPENSES

[Mark Twain, The Adventures of Tom Sawyer, 1876]

Who. Mark Twain [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Tom Sawyer, Huck Finn, and Joe Harper — presumed drowned — hide in the church gallery and attend their own funeral service, listening to their own eulogies. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Mark Twain, The Adventures of Tom Sawyer, 1876. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FUNERAL EXPENSES, p. 630; scan anchor: djvu line 89468 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1876 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the novel stages a funeral as its most famous set piece; the link is concrete, not thematic. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FURIOSUS

[William Shakespeare, Hamlet, c. 1601]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Though this be madness, yet there is method in't." — Polonius's verdict on Hamlet's (possibly feigned) lunacy, the stage's great case study of the madman. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Hamlet, c. 1601. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FURIOSUS, p. 630; scan anchor: djvu line 89534 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1601 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry defines the legal category of the madman; the play supplies the archetypal instance and the classic judicial observation on discerning method in madness. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

FUTURES

[John Landis, Trading Places, 1983]

Who. John Landis [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The climax turns on a corner — and collapse — in frozen concentrated orange-juice futures: margin, contracts, and settlement bankrupting the Duke brothers, dramatizing the entry's speculative transactions. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: John Landis, Trading Places, 1983. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FUTURES, p. 532; scan anchor: djvu line 89783 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1983 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-accept: a comedy, not a treatise — but the plot mechanics ARE futures trading (nominal contracts with no intent to deliver), which is the entry's substance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GAMBLE

[Fyodor Dostoevsky, The Gambler, 1867]

Who. Fyodor Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The novella of compulsive roulette — written by Dostoevsky to pay his own gambling debts — is the literature of gambling as the entry defines it: play at a game for money. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Fyodor Dostoevsky, The Gambler, 1867. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GAMBLE, p. 533; scan anchor: djvu line 89994 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1867 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the author lived the entry; the novella is the fiction of the gambler. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GAOL

[Alexandre Dumas, The Count of Monte Cristo, 1844]

Who. Alexandre Dumas [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Edmond Dantès's fourteen years in the island fortress of the Château d'If — wrongful confinement as the novel's engine — is the great 19th-century prison narrative. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Alexandre Dumas, The Count of Monte Cristo, 1844. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GAOL, p. 534; scan anchor: djvu line 90172 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1844 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the novel's engine is confinement; the entry defines the place of confinement. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GENS

[Robert Graves, I, Claudius, 1934]

Who. Robert Graves [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The novel narrates the Julio-Claudian gens from the inside — the Roman clan as a political organism across generations. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1934 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the novel is literally the history of a gens; the entry's Roman-law sense (tribe/clan of families) matches exactly. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GENTLEMAN

[Charles Dickens, Great Expectations, 1861]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Pip's 'great expectations' are the project of being made a gentleman — birth, manners, and money — the English imagination's fullest working-through of the entry's 'person of superior birth.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1861 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the novel turns on exactly the legal-social category the entry defines. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GIFT

[O. Henry, "The Gift of the Magi", 1905]

Who. O. Henry [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Della sells her hair and Jim his watch, each to buy the other's Christmas gift — the short story of voluntary giving whose irony (each gift unmakes the other's use) turns on the entry's act. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: O. Henry, "The Gift of the Magi", 1905. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GIFT, p. 640; scan anchor: djvu line 91072 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1905 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the story is named for the entry's act and turns on its voluntariness. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GOLIARDU8

[William Shakespeare, King Lear, c. 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Fool — the court jester whose riddles speak the truths no counselor dares — is the stage's archetypal jester/buffoon, holding the entry's office. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry names the office (jester, buffoon); the play supplies its most famous holder. (Headword as parsed in chunk: GOLIARDU8.) [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GOODRIGHT, GOODTITLE

[Frank Capra, Meet John Doe, 1941]

Who. Frank Capra [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The film builds its premise on the law's fictitious-person device: an invented ordinary man, 'John Doe' — the very name of the law's fictitious plaintiff — who becomes real to the public. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Frank Capra, Meet John Doe, 1941. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GOODRIGHT, GOODTITLE, p. 644; scan anchor: djvu line 91774 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

When. 1941 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the film takes the entry's device (the fictitious plaintiff in ejectment, kin to John Doe and Richard Roe) as its central conceit, illuminating WHY the law invents persons. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GOVERNMENT

[George Orwell, Nineteen Eighty-Four, 1949]

Who. George Orwell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Big Brother is watching you." — the novel of total government as pure regulation, restraint, supervision, and control: the entry's definition with the mask off. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1949 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-accept: the entry is neutral-doctrinal and the novel a warning — but the novel is the culture's primary imaginative working of 'government as control,' in the entry's own vocabulary. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

GRACE

[Victor Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Bishop of Digne answers Valjean's theft of his silver with a gift of candlesticks instead of prosecution — grace precisely as the entry frames it: not Valjean's right, but unmerited favor standing against right. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1862 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry's right/grace distinction is the exact moral mechanism of the novel's turning scene. (Second Les Misérables annotation in this chunk; each serves a different entry and scene.) [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GRAMMAR SCHOOL

[Thomas Hughes, Tom Brown's School Days, 1857]

Who. Thomas Hughes [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Set at Rugby under Dr. Arnold, the novel is the classic portrait of the English endowed-school world the entry describes. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Thomas Hughes, Tom Brown's School Days, 1857. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GRAMMAR SCHOOL, p. 646; scan anchor: djvu line 92140 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1857 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-accept: Rugby is a 'public school' in the English sense and the entry says 'grammar school' — but the entry describes the English endowed-school tradition of which Rugby is the literary archetype. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GRAVE

[Thomas Gray, "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard", 1751]

Who. Thomas Gray [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "The curfew tolls the knell of parting day." — Gray's elegy opens at dusk in a country churchyard and meditates over the graves of the obscure dead: the English language's great graveyard poem. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Thomas Gray, "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard", 1751. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GRAVE, p. 648; scan anchor: djvu line 92403 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1751 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the poem is the great meditation on the entry's subject; the entry defines its setting. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

GRAVEYARD

[Thomas Gray, "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard", 1751]

Who. Thomas Gray [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The churchyard is the elegy's entire stage — the place of interment over which the poem meditates at dusk. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Thomas Gray, "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard", 1751. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GRAVEYARD, p. 648; scan anchor: djvu line 92406 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1751 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: same poem as GRAVE; kept separate because the headword is the poem's setting-word while GRAVE's quote anchors the pair. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GREEK KALENDS

[Suetonius, The Twelve Caesars ("Augustus"), c. 121 AD]

Who. Suetonius [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Suetonius records that Augustus, of debtors who would never pay, said they would pay 'at the Greek Kalends' — the joke being the Greeks had no Kalends, so: never. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Suetonius, The Twelve Caesars ("Augustus"), c. 121 AD. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GREEK KALENDS, p. 648; scan anchor: djvu line 92471 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Genuine classical-wisdom link: the entry defines the idiom ('a time indefinitely remote, there being no calends among the Greeks'); Suetonius preserves its most famous use. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GRETNA GREEN MARRIAGE

[Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813]

Who. Jane Austen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Lydia Bennet's elopement with Wickham is aimed at Gretna Green — the runaway-marriage destination for English couples evading parental consent — making the scandal plot turn on this legal institution. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GRETNA GREEN MARRIAGE, p. 549 (page anchor suspect — Brick 21 §D);

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

scan anchor: djvu line 92567 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1813 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the novel's plot turns on this exact institution; readers meet the entry through Lydia. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GRITH

[Victor Hugo, The Hunchback of Notre-Dame, 1831]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Quasimodo seizes Esmeralda and cries 'Sanctuary!' — claiming the church's peace and protection against arrest, the medieval protection of holy ground. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Victor Hugo, The Hunchback of Notre-Dame, 1831. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GRITH, p. 549; scan anchor: djvu line 92589 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1831 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-accept: the entry says 'peace; protection' generally, not 'sanctuary' expressly — but sanctuary IS the legal protection of holy ground, and Hugo's scene is the culture's canonical image of it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GUARDIAN

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Mr. Brownlow takes the orphan Oliver into his care — the guardian's office (care of the person, management of rights) exercised as the novel's humane resolution. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry defines the office; the novel dramatizes its humane exercise. (GUARDIANSHIP left bare — the office is covered here.) [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GUERILLA PARTY

[Ernest Hemingway, For Whom the Bell Tolls, 1940]

Who. Ernest Hemingway [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Robert Jordan fights alongside a Spanish guerrilla band behind enemy lines — the English reader's portrait of irregular war, matching the entry's 'independent body... not regularly connected with the armies of either belligerent.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1940 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry's definition reads like the novel's dramatis personae. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GUILLOTINE

[Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "It is a far, far better thing that I do, than I have ever done; it is a far, far better rest that I go to than I have ever known." — Sydney Carton's closing words as the Terror's guillotine, looming over the whole novel, takes him. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GUILLOTINE, p. 553; scan anchor: djvu line 93278 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1859 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the instrument defines the novel's historical moment; the strongest link in this batch. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

GUILT

[Fyodor Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866]

Who. Fyodor Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Raskolnikov's murder and the psychological working of his guilt — the entry's 'quality which imparts criminality to a motive or act' as an entire novel. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Fyodor Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GUILT, p. 553; scan anchor: djvu line 93288 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1866 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the novel is the literature of guilt; the entry defines its subject. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GUILTY

[Sidney Lumet, 12 Angry Men, 1957]

Who. Sidney Lumet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) A jury's deliberation over whether to return a guilty verdict — the film is the entry's word ('used by the jury in convicting') as drama. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sidney Lumet, 12 Angry Men, 1957. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GUILTY, p. 553; scan anchor: djvu line 93298 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1957 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the film turns entirely on the jury's use of the entry's word. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

GYLTW1TE

[Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Herland, 1915]

Who. Charlotte Perkins Gilman [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The novel imagines at full scale what the entry defines — a state in which women hold the supreme command: an all-female society governing itself. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Herland, 1915. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry GYLTW1TE, p. 553; scan anchor: djvu line 93368 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1915 [basis: year carried in the citation]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. Genuine: the entry defines government by women; the novel imagines it. NOTE: the chunk's OCR/parser fused this entry's text into the GYLTW1TE body ('GYNARCHY, or GYNjECOCRACY. Government by a woman...'); annotated here under the true headword so the merge does not lose it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HABIT

[Maxim: "Consuetudo est altera natura" (after Cicero)]

Who. Maxim: "Consuetudo est altera natura" (after Cicero) [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: "Consuetudo est altera natura" — habit/custom is second nature.] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: "Consuetudo est altera natura" (after Cicero). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HABIT, p. 655 (page anchor suspect — Brick 21 §D); scan anchor: djvu line 93634 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Genuine classical-wisdom link: the maxim compresses the entry's definition ('a disposition acquired by custom') into proverb; the entry even uses the word 'custom.' [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

HACKNEY CARRIAGES

[Arthur Conan Doyle, The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, 1892]

Who. Arthur Conan Doyle [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Holmes's London runs on them — the hansom cab, the quintessential licensed hackney carriage, hailed in adventure after adventure. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Arthur Conan Doyle, The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, 1892. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HACKNEY CARRIAGES, p. 556; scan anchor: djvu line 93796 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1892 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-accept: the stories never define the vehicle, but the hackney carriage is the working infrastructure of Holmes's London and the entry defines exactly that vehicle class. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HA LIT AX LAW

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The mob that comes to the Maycomb jail to lynch Tom Robinson — summary, unauthorized 'trial' by mob, faced down by Atticus — is lynch law arriving in person. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the novel stages the entry's definition ('the summary and unauthorized trial of a person accused') as its moral center. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HALLUCINATION

[William Shakespeare, Macbeth, c. 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Is this a dagger which I see before me, / The handle toward my hand?" — Macbeth's air-drawn dagger before Duncan's murder, the stage's great hallucination, with the character performing the sense-deceit diagnosis aloud. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Macbeth, c. 1606. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HALLUCINATION, p. 559; scan anchor: djvu line 94330 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry is the clinical term ('a trick or deceit of the senses'); the soliloquy is its most famous dramatic instance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HEREDITA8

[William Shakespeare, King Lear, c. 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Lear's division of his realm among his heirs — the universal succession to the 'estate' carved up as the play's inciting act, and the carving is the tragedy. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the entry defines universal succession (hereditas); the play opens with one being divided. (Headword as parsed in chunk: HEREDITA8.) [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

K2ERETICO COMBURENDO

[Carl Theodor Dreyer, The Passion of Joan of Arc, 1928]

Who. Carl Theodor Dreyer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Joan — tried for heresy and burned — is history's most famous victim of exactly this machinery: the statute authorizing burning for heresy, given its canonical screen telling. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Carl Theodor Dreyer, The Passion of Joan of Arc, 1928. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry K2ERETICO COMBURENDO, p. 668 (page anchor suspect — Brick 21 §D); scan anchor: djvu line 94143 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1928 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the statute (2 Hen. IV c. 15, de haeretico comburendo) provided for burning heretics; the film shows the archetypal case. (Headword as parsed in chunk: K2ERETICO COMBURENDO.) [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HANGING

[Oscar Wilde, "The Ballad of Reading Gaol", 1898]

Who. Oscar Wilde [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Yet each man kills the thing he loves." — Wilde's ballad narrates the hanging of a fellow prisoner at Reading Gaol and its moral aftermath: the English lyric on judicial hanging. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Oscar Wilde, "The Ballad of Reading Gaol", 1898. Host locus: Black's Law

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HANGING, p. 561; scan anchor: djvu line 94584 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1898 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the poem is the lyric on the entry's subject ('suspension by the neck' as capital punishment); the entry defines it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

HARD LABOR

[Henri Charrière, Papillon, 1969; film by Franklin J. Schaffner, 1973]

Who. Henri Charrière [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Charrière's memoir of the French bagne in Guiana — where hard labor WAS the sentence, additional to imprisonment — and its film telling, is the culture's defining account of penal hard labor. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Henri Charrière, Papillon, 1969; film by Franklin J. Schaffner, 1973. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HARD LABOR, p. 561; scan anchor: djvu line 94701 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1969 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the book/film is the defining account of the entry's punishment. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HAPPINESS

[Gabriele Muccino, The Pursuit of Happyness, 2006]

Who. Gabriele Muccino [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The film takes the entry's quoted phrase — the constitutional right to pursue happiness — as title and theme: one man's pursuit of happiness against destitution. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Gabriele Muccino, The Pursuit of Happyness, 2006. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HAPPINESS, p. 561; scan anchor: djvu line 94641 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2006 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-accept: the film never litigates the constitutional right, but the entry quotes the Declaration's phrase and the film dramatizes the pursuit it names — titular and thematic match, not coincidence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HAUT CHEMIN

[Alfred Noyes, "The Highwayman", 1906]

Who. Alfred Noyes [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Noyes's ballad of the highwayman who 'came riding, riding, riding' is the culture's canonical highway piece — the king's highway and those who worked it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Alfred Noyes, "The Highwayman", 1906. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HAUT CHEMIN, p. 662; scan anchor: djvu line 94809 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1906 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-accept: the entry is two words ('highway') and the poem romanticizes highway robbery rather than defining the road — but the poem is the canonical highway piece and the entry names the legal thing it rides on. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HAWKER

[Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1400]

Who. Geoffrey Chaucer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Chaucer's Pardoner — riding town to town selling pardons and counterfeit relics, confessing the seller's art in his own prologue — is literature's great itinerant seller. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1400. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HAWKER, p. 662; scan anchor: djvu line 94864 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1400 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-accept: the entry contemplates lawful street trade and the Pardoner is a fraud — but the entry's DEFINITION (place-to-place selling) fits him exactly, and the moral irony illuminates rather than distorts. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HIGHWAYMAN

[Alfred Noyes, 'The Highwayman', 1906]

Who. Alfred Noyes [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "The wind was a torrent of darkness among the gusty trees, / The moon was a ghostly galleon tossed upon cloudy seas" — the poem's opening introduces the highwayman riding up to the old inn-door. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1906 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a highwayman as one who robs travelers upon the highway. Noyes's narrative poem is the canonical literary portrait of exactly that figure. Two lines only (copyright discipline); attribution and wording certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

HOMINES

[Maxim: Hominum causa jus constitutum est]

Who. Maxim: Hominum causa jus constitutum est [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: "Hominum causa jus constitutum est"] — (paraphrase: law was constituted for the sake of men). The entry's own body cites this maxim but the OCR truncates it mid-sentence; this supplies the standard form. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Hominum causa jus constitutum est. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HOMINES, p. 677; scan anchor: djvu line 97327 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. A genuine Roman-law maxim directly on the headword 'homines' (men): law exists for the sake of men. The form given follows the entry's own citation tradition (no 'omne' added beyond what the entry carries). English rendering marked as paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HONY

[Maxim: Honi soit qui mal y pense]

Who. Maxim: Honi soit qui mal y pense [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: "Honi soit qui mal y pense"] — (paraphrase: shame on him who thinks evil of it). Motto of the Order of the Garter, attributed to Edward III (c. 1348). The entry's body garbles the phrase as 'Bong soit gut mat y pense'; this is the correct form. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines Old French 'hony' as shame, evil, disgrace. The Garter motto is among the most famous uses of the word in the language and sits directly on the headword. Motto, attribution, and form are all certain; translation marked as paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

HOSPITICIDE

[Homer, Odyssey, c. 8th century BCE]

Who. Homer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Odyssey Book 22, Odysseus — as host — slaughters the suitors, his long-uninvited guests, after they consumed his house and courted his wife: the archetype of the sacred guest-host bond (xenia) enforced by killing. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Homer, Odyssey, c. 8th century BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HOSPITICIDE, p. 580; scan anchor: djvu line 97821 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines hospiticide as one who kills his guest or host. Odysseus is the archetypal host who kills his guests, dramatizing xenia. No verbatim translation line is claimed; attribution is certain and the note is a clearly marked tight paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

HUNG JURY

[Sidney Lumet, 12 Angry Men, 1957]

Who. Sidney Lumet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Lumet's courtroom drama turns on a murder jury deadlocked at eleven-to-one, the verdict unreachable until the single holdout is finally heard. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1957 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a hung jury as one so irreconcilably divided it cannot agree on a verdict. The film is the canonical dramatization of exactly that state. No single line is trusted verbatim, so the note is a clearly marked tight paraphrase of the film's premise; film and director attribution certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

IDES

[William Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, 1599]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Beware the ides of March." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the Ides as a Roman division of time. The soothsayer's warning gives the Ides of March its immortal weight in the Western imagination. Five-word line; wording and attribution certain, well within copyright discipline. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

IMPRISONMENT

[Alexandre Dumas, The Count of Monte Cristo, 1844]

Who. Alexandre Dumas [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The novel is built on the experience of unjust imprisonment: Edmond Dantès, innocent, is confined for years in the island fortress of the Château d'If before his escape. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1844 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines imprisonment as the restraint of a man's personal liberty. Dumas's novel is the archetypal literary treatment of that experience. Attribution certain; no verbatim line claimed, note is a clearly marked tight paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

IN MEDIAE RES

[Horace, Ars Poetica, c. 19 BC]

Who. Horace [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Horace's own critical term: he counsels the epic poet to plunge straight "into the middle of things" (in medias res), as Homer does in the Iliad, rather than beginning ab ovo. (paraphrase of the critical doctrine) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Horace, Ars Poetica, c. 19 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry IN MEDIAE RES, p. 604; scan anchor: djvu line 101742 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The headword is not merely a Latin phrase but Horace's canonical term of literary art, coined in the Ars Poetica — the entry defines exactly what Horace prescribed. Genuine classical-wisdom link; the Latin phrase itself is verbatim. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

IN RERUM NATURA

[Lucretius, De Rerum Natura, c. 50 BC]

Who. Lucretius [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The headword is the title of Lucretius's great didactic poem, De Rerum Natura — "On the Nature of Things." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Lucretius, De Rerum Natura, c. 50 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry IN RERUM NATURA, p. 608; scan anchor: djvu line 102340 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The legal phrase "in the nature of things" is verbatim the title of the foundational Latin philosophical poem. Genuine link, no forcing. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

INCEST

[Sophocles, Oedipus Rex, c. 429 BC]

Who. Sophocles [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Oedipus, unknowing, kills his father and marries his mother — the classical archetype of the prohibited degree made tragedy. (paraphrase of the plot) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sophocles, Oedipus Rex, c. 429 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INCEST, p. 610; scan anchor: djvu line 102833 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines the crime; the play IS the incest taboo enacted as the central horror of Western drama. Genuine illumination, plot-level, no invented quotation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

INDE

[Maxim]

Who. Maxim [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Inde datae leges ne fortior omnia posset" — "Laws are made to prevent the stronger from having the power to do everything." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INDE, p. 614; scan anchor: djvu line 103380 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry itself prints this classical maxim as the gloss on the headword; the Latin is verbatim from the entry. No author is claimed because the work of origin is not certain to me — cited as Maxim rather than risk a wrong attribution. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

INDEBTEDNESS

[Charles Dickens, Little Dorrit, 1857]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. William Dorrit, the "Father of the Marshalsea" (Book I, chapter 19 bears that title verbatim), imprisoned for debt in the Marshalsea debtors' prison — the novel of indebtedness as a legal condition. (paraphrase of the novel's premise; chapter title verbatim) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, Little Dorrit, 1857. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INDEBTEDNESS, p. 615; scan anchor: djvu line 103425 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1857 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the bare state of being in debt; Dickens's novel is the canonical fictional treatment of debt as a legal status that imprisons. The chapter title is verbatim-certain; the rest is marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

INFAMY

[Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850]

Who. Nathaniel Hawthorne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Hester Prynne, convicted of adultery, is compelled to wear the scarlet A on her breast — legal infamia (loss of honor and credit by conviction) made cloth and worn in public. (paraphrase of the novel's premise) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INFAMY, p. 621; scan anchor: djvu line 104485 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1850 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines infamy as the conviction-produced loss of honor and credit; Hester's letter is the culture's emblem of exactly that legal consequence. Genuine thematic illumination, marked as paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

INFANTICIDE

[Euripides, Medea, 431 BC]

Who. Euripides [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Medea murders her own children to wound Jason — the classical archetype of the act the entry defines. (paraphrase of the plot) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Euripides, Medea, 431 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INFANTICIDE, p. 621; scan anchor: djvu line 104539 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines the killing of an infant soon after birth as distinguished from foeticide; Medea is the canonical dramatic treatment of a mother killing her children. Plot-level, genuine, no invented quotation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

INGRATITUDE

[William Shakespeare, King Lear, c. 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is / To have a thankless child!" (Act 1, Scene 4) — Lear, having given away his kingdom (the gift), is destroyed by his daughters' thanklessness. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry states the Roman/French rule that ingratitude suffices to revoke a gift; Lear's division of the kingdom and the daughters' ingratitude is the archetypal dramatization of the doctrine. The quotation is verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

INJUSTICE

[Franz Kafka, The Trial, 1925]

Who. Franz Kafka [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Josef K. is arrested one morning though he has done nothing wrong, and is processed to his death by a court that never renders the justice it exists to give. (paraphrase of the novel's premise) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Franz Kafka, The Trial, 1925. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INJUSTICE, p. 628; scan anchor: djvu line 105600 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1925 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-include: the entry's technical sense — injustice as the withholding or denial of justice, applied specifically to the act or omission of a court — is precisely the novel's subject. Premise-level paraphrase, honestly marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

INN

[Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1387–1400]

Who. Geoffrey Chaucer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The pilgrims gather at the Tabard Inn in Southwark before setting out for Canterbury — the archetypal English inn, the house where the traveler is furnished with all he needs on his way. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1387–1400. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INN, p. 628; scan anchor: djvu line 105708 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1400 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the inn functionally (lodging and furnishing of travelers); the Tabard is the most famous inn in English literature and matches the definition exactly. Genuine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

INNKEEPER

[Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1387–1400]

Who. Geoffrey Chaucer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Harry Bailly, the Host of the Tabard Inn, who proposes the tale-telling contest to his guests — the innkeeper as the law's figure, the keeper answerable for those infra hospitium. (paraphrase) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1387–1400. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INNKEEPER, p. 629; scan anchor: djvu line 105809 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1400 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Companion to INN: Bailly is the canonical literary innkeeper, and the entry's legal figure (keeper of a common inn, strictly liable for guests' goods, cf. INFRA HOSPITIUM) is precisely his office. Genuine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

INSANITY

[William Shakespeare, Hamlet, c. 1601]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The play sustains the exact question the law must answer about unsoundness of mind: is Hamlet's "antic disposition" feigned or real? — set against Ophelia's genuine break. (paraphrase of the dramatic question) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1601 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-include: the legal insanity inquiry turns on distinguishing feigned from genuine unsoundness of mind, and Hamlet is the canonical literary treatment of that distinction. Marked as paraphrase; no invented quotation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

INTER CANEM ET LUPTJM

[Proverb / Maxim]

Who. Proverb / Maxim [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Between the dog and the wolf" — the twilight, the hour when the dog seeks his rest and the wolf his prey; the law's old boundary of nightfall. (French: "entre chien et loup.") [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Proverb / Maxim. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INTER CANEM ET LUPTJM, p. 645; scan anchor: djvu line 108517 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry glosses the phrase as the twilight; it is genuine proverbial wisdom — an image of the indistinct hour when friend and foe cannot be told apart — and the law borrowed it to mark when night (and burglary) begins. Cited as proverb, Latin from the entry. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

INTERMARRIAGE

[William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c. 1597]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "My only love sprung from my only hate!" (Act 1, Scene 5) — Juliet learns her beloved is a Montague: the cross-family marriage the entry defines in its popular sense. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c. 1597. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INTERMARRIAGE, p. 648; scan anchor: djvu line 109065 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1597 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline-include: the entry's popular sense is marriage between persons of different nations, tribes, or families; Romeo and Juliet is the archetypal marriage across the family line, and the engine of the tragedy is that boundary. The quotation is verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

INTERPRET

[Maxim]

Who. Maxim [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "To interpret and harmonize laws with laws is the best mode of interpretation." (the entry's English rendering; the scan's Latin is garbled and is not reconstructed here) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INTERPRET, p. 649; scan anchor: djvu line 109333 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry quotes this maxim on interpretation itself — genuine classical legal wisdom about the art the entry defines. Only the entry's English is quoted because the OCR Latin is garbled; per discipline, no reconstruction is attempted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

IRA MOTHS

[Horace, Epistles, c. 20 BC]

Who. Horace [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Ira furor brevis est" — "Anger is a short insanity." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Horace, Epistles, c. 20 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry IRA MOTHS, p. 656; scan anchor: djvu line 110399 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The dictionary's run at this point carries Horace's maxim (Epistles I.2.62) glossing anger; the Latin is verbatim-certain and the entry ("moved or excited by anger") is exactly its subject. Attached to the headword the maxim belongs to. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

ITA LEX SCRIPTA EST

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1598]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Shylock demands the court enforce the strict letter of his bond against Antonio — "so the law is written," obeyed notwithstanding the rigor of its application — and Portia defeats him on that same letter. (paraphrase of the trial scene) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1598 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry (Dig. 40,9,12) states the maxim that the written law must be obeyed despite apparent rigor; the trial scene of Merchant is the classic dramatization of ita lex scripta est set against equity and mercy. Marked as paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

JEDBURGH JUSTICE

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In To Kill a Mockingbird, a lynch mob gathers at the Maycomb jail to seize Tom Robinson before his trial; Atticus Finch sits alone in a chair outside the cell door, in their path. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines Jedburgh justice as summary punishment 'without a regular trial,' 'equivalent to lynch law' — the novel's jail-door mob is the canonical fictional staging of exactly that impulse, met by the lawyer's solitary stand. Paraphrase marked; no invented dialogue. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

JOHN SOS

[Frank Capra, Meet John Doe, 1941]

Who. Frank Capra [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Meet John Doe, a newspaper invents a fictitious everyman — 'John Doe' — out of thin air, then hires a man to play him; the legal fiction of the placeholder name becomes the film's whole engine. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Frank Capra, Meet John Doe, 1941. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JOHN SOS, p. 662; scan anchor: djvu line 111289 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1941 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's fictitious lessee in ejectment (sometimes 'Goodtitle,' cf. Roman Titius/Seius) is the same placeholder-person device the film builds its plot on — a genuine device-level link. Headword key copied character-for-character from the chunk ('JOHN SOS'); the likely 'JOHN DOE' OCR misread is recorded in the worker log, not the annotation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

JEWEL

[Wilkie Collins, The Moonstone, 1868]

Who. Wilkie Collins [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In The Moonstone, a cursed Indian diamond — stolen, fought over, and effectively litigated over — drives the first great detective novel in English. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Wilkie Collins, The Moonstone, 1868. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JEWEL, p. 661; scan anchor: djvu line 111229 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1868 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines jewels as worn personal ornaments (diamonds, pearls); the novel's diamond is the archetypal fictional jewel, and it carries legal consequences (theft, inheritance). Genuine, not decorative. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

JOINTURE

[Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813]

Who. Jane Austen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Pride and Prejudice, the Bennet estate is entailed to a distant male heir, leaving Mrs. Bennet no jointure and five daughters nearly unprovided — the absence of the widow's provision is the novel's entire engine. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JOINTURE, p. 662; scan anchor: djvu line 111429 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1813 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: jointure = freehold secured to the wife, taking effect on the husband's death. The novel dramatizes precisely what the want of such a provision does to a family — illumination by honest absence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

JUDGE

[Arthur Miller, The Crucible, 1953]

Who. Arthur Miller [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In The Crucible, Deputy Governor Danforth presides over the Salem witch trials — the stage image of judicial office bent to hysteria, where procedure keeps running after justice has left the room. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1953 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines the judge as the public officer charged with control of proceedings and decision of questions of law; Danforth is fiction's sharpest study of that office misused. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

JUMP BAIL

[Martin Brest, Midnight Run, 1988]

Who. Martin Brest [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Midnight Run, bounty hunter Jack Walsh is hired to haul bail-jumper Jonathan Mardukas cross-country — the film's whole plot is the principal absconding on his bond. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Martin Brest, Midnight Run, 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JUMP BAIL, p. 670; scan anchor: djvu line 112737 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'to abscond... in violation of the obligation of a bail-bond.' The film is built on exactly that act; paraphrase marked, no verbatim dialogue needed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

JUNK-SHOP

[Charles Dickens, The Old Curiosity Shop, 1841]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In The Old Curiosity Shop, Little Nell and her grandfather keep a London shop of curiosities and odds and ends — the junk-shop as the fragile center of the novel's world. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, The Old Curiosity Shop, 1841. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JUNK-SHOP, p. 670; scan anchor: djvu line 112779 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1841 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'a place where odds and ends are purchased and sold.' Dickens's curiosity shop is the literary archetype — a definitional match, not decoration. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

JURY

[Sidney Lumet, Twelve Angry Men, 1957]

Who. Sidney Lumet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "It's not easy to raise my hand and send a boy off to die without talking about it first." — Juror #8's lone holdout forces eleven certain men to actually weigh the evidence. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sidney Lumet, Twelve Angry Men, 1957. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JURY, p. 674; scan anchor: djvu line 113482 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1957 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: jurors 'sworn to inquire of certain matters of fact, and declare the truth upon evidence.' The film is the canonical dramatization of that oath; one short famous line, within copyright discipline, wording confident. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

XUS NATURALE

[Cicero, De Legibus, c. 52 BC]

Who. Cicero [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In De Legibus, Cicero describes true law as right reason in agreement with nature — the classical root of the natural-law idea this entry traces to Rome's philosophical jurists. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Cicero, De Legibus, c. 52 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry XUS NATURALE, p. 679; scan anchor: djvu line 114254 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Borderline call, kept deliberately: a Latin legal headword, but the entry itself says the concept 'originated with the philosophical jurists of Rome,' and the well explicitly includes classical wisdom — Cicero's formulation is that wisdom's source. Paraphrase marked; key copied verbatim as 'XUS NATURALE' despite OCR. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE

[William Shakespeare, Henry IV, Part 2, c. 1598]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Henry IV, Part 2, Justice Shallow — the garrulous, self-important Gloucestershire justice — is the stage archetype of the country magistrate the entry describes. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Henry IV, Part 2, c. 1598. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JUSTICE OF THE PEACE, p. 683; scan anchor: djvu line 114931 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1598 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: inferior judicial officer for minor cases and conservation of the peace. Shallow embodies the office in English literature; paraphrase marked, no invented quotes. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

JU8TITIA

[Classical wisdom: Justitia, Roman personification of justice]

Who. Classical wisdom: Justitia [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Justitia, the Roman personification of justice — blindfolded, holding scales and sword — is the figure behind every courthouse statue; she looks at truth alone, knowing 'not father nor mother,' as the entry's own maxim has it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Classical wisdom: Justitia, Roman personification of justice. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JU8TITIA, p. 684; scan anchor: djvu line 115089 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry quotes 'Justitia non novit patrem nec matrem; solam veritatem spectat Justitia' — the personification is the classical-wisdom illustration of the headword. Key copied verbatim as 'JU8TITIA' despite OCR. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

KIDNAPPING

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Oliver Twist, Bill Sikes and Nancy seize Oliver in the street and drag him back to Fagin's den — the forcible stealing-away the entry defines, staged in Victorian London. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'the forcible abduction or stealing away of a man, woman, or child.' Dickens's scene is a textbook fictional instance; paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

KINDRED

[William Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is / To have a thankless child!" — Lear on Goneril, the blood-bond turned against itself. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form] edition (1910), entry KINDRED, p. 687; scan anchor: djvu line 115607 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'relatives by blood.' The line is fiction's most famous utterance on what kinship obligates — and what its breach costs. Two lines, public-domain Shakespeare, wording confident. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

KING

[William Shakespeare, Richard II, c. 1595]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Not all the water in the rough rude sea / Can wash the balm off from an anointed king;" — Richard II on the sacral character of kingship, even as his crown slips. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Richard II, c. 1595. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry KING, p. 687; scan anchor: djvu line 115615 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1595 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines the king as the single ruler of a monarchical state; the speech is the classic literary statement of the anointed-king idea the entry's 'king-craft' tradition assumes. Two lines, public domain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

KNIGHT

[Miguel de Cervantes, Don Quixote, 1605]

Who. Miguel de Cervantes [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Don Quixote, a country gentleman has himself dubbed a knight-errant and rides out to right wrongs — the comedy turning on the gap between the knightly dignity the entry catalogues and the modern world. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Miguel de Cervantes, Don Quixote, 1605. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry KNIGHT, p. 689; scan anchor: djvu line 115832 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1605 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry catalogues the English orders of knighthood as personal dignities; Cervantes's knight is world literature's great meditation on what that dignity means when its age has passed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

KNOWLEDGE

[Maxim: 'Knowledge is power' (Scientia potentia est), attributed to Francis Bacon]

Who. Maxim: 'Knowledge is power' (Scientia potentia est) [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Scientia potentia est — 'Knowledge is power.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: 'Knowledge is power' (Scientia potentia est), attributed to Francis Bacon. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry KNOWLEDGE, p. 689; scan anchor: djvu line 115963 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry treats knowledge as firm belief distinguished by degree of certainty; the maxim is the classical-wisdom capsule of why that distinction matters. Short maxim, traditional attribution stated as attribution. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

LABORER

[John Steinbeck, Of Mice and Men, 1937]

Who. John Steinbeck [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Of Mice and Men, George and Lennie drift from ranch to ranch as hired hands, dreaming of a stake of their own — the itinerant laborer's life the entry defines, in Depression California. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: John Steinbeck, Of Mice and Men, 1937. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LABORER, p. 692; scan anchor: djvu line 116229 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1937 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'one who, as a means of livelihood, performs work and labor for those who employ him.' The novel is the American fiction of that condition. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LAPIDATION

[Cyrus Nowrasteh, The Stoning of Soraya M., 2008]

Who. Cyrus Nowrasteh [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In The Stoning of Soraya M., a village carries out a stoning under color of religious law — the entry's one-line definition given a harrowing modern staging. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Cyrus Nowrasteh, The Stoning of Soraya M., 2008. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LAPIDATION, p. 696; scan anchor: djvu line 117033 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2008 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'The act of stoning a person to death.' The film is directly about that act as punishment; paraphrase marked, no invented detail. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LAUDATIO

[Maxim: De mortuis nil nisi bonum — 'Of the dead, speak nothing but good,' attributed to Chilon of Sparta]

Who. Maxim: De mortuis nil nisi bonum — 'Of the dead [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. De mortuis nil nisi bonum — 'Of the dead, speak nothing but good.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: De mortuis nil nisi bonum — 'Of the dead, speak nothing but good,' attributed to Chilon of Sparta. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LAUDATIO, p. 699; scan anchor: djvu line 117544 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry: Roman court testimony to an accused person's good character (the laudatores). The maxim is the classical-wisdom rule governing exactly such speech about the dead; attribution stated as traditional. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

LAWSUIT

[Franz Kafka, The Trial, 1925]

Who. Franz Kafka [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In The Trial, Josef K. is arrested one morning and ground through a proceeding that never states its charge — the lawsuit as nightmare, with all the forms of law and none of its substance. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1925 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'a suit, action, or cause... between two private persons in the courts of law.' Kafka's novel is the modern fiction of being inside such a proceeding. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LAWYER

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "You never really understand a person until you climb into his skin and walk around in it." — Atticus Finch to Scout, the advocate's art stated as moral method. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LAWYER, p. 704; scan anchor: djvu line 118336 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'a person learned in the law' who prosecutes or defends causes. Atticus is the American archetype of the lawyer; one short famous line, wording confident, within copyright discipline. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

LEAP-YEAR

[W. S. Gilbert & Arthur Sullivan, The Pirates of Penzance, 1879]

Who. W. S. Gilbert & Arthur Sullivan [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In The Pirates of Penzance, Frederic — born on February 29 — is bound to the pirates until his twenty-first birthday, which lands decades hence; the leap-year as a legal trap. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: W. S. Gilbert & Arthur Sullivan, The Pirates of Penzance, 1879. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LEAP-YEAR, p. 705; scan anchor: djvu line 118607 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1879 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry is a bare cross-reference ('See Bissextile'); the operetta is the beloved fictional working-out of what the extra day does to a term of years. Paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LEDGER

[Charles Dickens, A Christmas Carol, 1843]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In A Christmas Carol, Bob Cratchit toils over Scrooge's ledgers in the cold counting-house — the trader's book of accounts as the symbol of a life reduced to debit and credit. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1843 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'a book of accounts in which a trader enters the names of all persons with whom he has dealings.' Dickens's counting-house is the literary ledger made moral. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LEGACY

[Charles Dickens, Great Expectations, 1861]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Great Expectations, Pip's 'great expectations' rest on a secret legacy from the convict Magwitch — a testamentary gift that remakes, and nearly ruins, the legatee. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1861 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'a bequest or gift of personal property by last will and testament.' The novel's whole plot turns on such a bequest and its hidden source. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LEGATEE

[Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1853]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Bleak House, the suit of Jarndyce v Jarndyce consumes the entire estate in costs, so that the legatees inherit nothing but the litigation — the legatee's hope as Chancery's slow joke. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1853. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LEGATEE, p. 708; scan anchor: djvu line 119133 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1853 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'the person to whom a legacy is given.' Dickens's legatees are fiction's great warning about what stands between a legacy and its recipient. Deliberately distinct from LEGACY's Great Expectations note — no duplication. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LEGITIMACY

[William Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law my services are bound." — Edmund the bastard opens his revolt against the law of legitimate birth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: legitimacy = lawful birth, 'the opposite of illegitimacy or bastardy.' Edmund's soliloquy is the canonical literary assault on that distinction. One famous line, public domain, wording confident. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

LENDER

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1597]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In The Merchant of Venice, the moneylender Shylock's bond — a pound of flesh for an unpaid loan — drives the plot to the trial scene, where the letter of the bond defeats its holder. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1597 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'he from whom a thing is borrowed.' Shylock is the archetypal fictional lender, and the play turns entirely on the lender's bond. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LEONINA SOCIETAS

[Aesop, 'The Lion's Share' (fable)]

Who. Aesop [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Aesop's fable 'The Lion's Share': the lion hunts with his partners, then claims the whole kill — the partnership in which one bears no loss and takes all profit, which Roman law voided. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Aesop, 'The Lion's Share' (fable). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LEONINA SOCIETAS, p. 711; scan anchor: djvu line 119547 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry cites Dig. 17,2,29,2 voiding the all-loss/no-profit partnership; the fable is the classical-wisdom source of the 'lion's share' figure the doctrine is named for. Direct, not decorative. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LEPROSUS

[William Wyler, Ben-Hur, 1959]

Who. William Wyler [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Ben-Hur, Judah's mother and sister are stricken with leprosy and confined to the Valley of the Lepers — the ancient segregation the entry's writ 'leproso amovendo' enforced — until healed at the Crucifixion. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Wyler, Ben-Hur, 1959. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LEPROSUS, p. 711; scan anchor: djvu line 119569 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1959 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines the leper and gives the writ for removing one who 'thrust himself into the company of his neighbors'; the film stages that exclusion and its end. Paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry: lex = law as the authoritatively prescribed rule of civil conduct. The maxim is the classical-wisdom capsule of law's binding force even against sympathy. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

LIBELOUS

[Sydney Pollack, Absence of Malice, 1981]

Who. Sydney Pollack [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Absence of Malice, a prosecutor's leak becomes a false news story that destroys a man's reputation — the film turns on what a publication may print and what the ruined man can do about it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sydney Pollack, Absence of Malice, 1981. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LIBELOUS, p. 720; scan anchor: djvu line 121160 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1981 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'defamatory; of the nature of a libel.' The film is the modern American drama of libel in the press. No standalone LIBEL headword exists in this chunk, so the note sits on LIBELOUS. Paraphrase marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LTDFORD LAW

[Lewis Carroll, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, 1865]

Who. Lewis Carroll [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Carroll's trial chapter stages exactly this legal inversion — punishment ordered before any verdict is considered. The Queen of Hearts: "Sentence first — verdict afterwards." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Lewis Carroll, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, 1865. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LTDFORD LAW, p. 725; scan anchor: djvu line 121981 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1865 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines Lidford Law as a sort of lynch law whereby a person was first punished and then tried. Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, Chapter 12 (the trial), is the canonical literary image of that same inversion: sentence before verdict. Short, verbatim-certain, famous quote; genuinely illuminates the entry's punish-first-try-later content. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

LYNCH LAW

[Robert Mulligan, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1962]

Who. Robert Mulligan [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The canonical screen image of this entry's content: (paraphrase) a mob gathers at the county jail to seize Tom Robinson before his trial, and Atticus Finch stands them down. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Robert Mulligan, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1962. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LYNCH LAW, p. 742; scan anchor: djvu line 124898 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1962 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines lynch law as unofficial persons or mobs seizing persons charged with crimes and inflicting summary punishment without legal trial. The film's jailhouse-mob scene stages exactly that mechanism — a pre-trial seizure by an unofficial band, turned back. Scene described as paraphrase rather than invented dialogue. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MARCHETA

[Mel Gibson, Braveheart, 1995]

Who. Mel Gibson [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The canonical screen staging of the custom this entry describes — (paraphrase) at a Scottish village wedding the English lord claims the right of the first night, to the groom's grief. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Mel Gibson, Braveheart, 1995. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MARCHETA, p. 758; scan anchor: djvu line 127576 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1995 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines marcheta as the custom for the lord of a fee to lie the first night with the bride of his tenant (prima nocte). The film's prima-nocte sequence stages that same custom. Cited as a cinematic staging of the entry's content, not as historical evidence for the custom's existence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MANTICULATE

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The canonical literary treatment of this one-line definition — (paraphrase) Fagin trains and deploys his gang of boys, the Artful Dodger among them, as pickpockets across London. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The legal entry is a single-line definition ('To pick pockets'); the novel is the definitive literary depiction of organized pickpocketing, and the paraphrase names only its uncontroversial content, clearly marked as paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MARSHALSEA

[Charles Dickens, Little Dorrit, 1857]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The definitive literary treatment of this prison — (paraphrase) William Dorrit, the "Father of the Marshalsea," and his daughter Amy live their whole lives within its walls: the debtor's prison as a complete world. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, Little Dorrit, 1857. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MARSHALSEA, p. 763; scan anchor: djvu line 128443 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1857 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the Marshalsea as a prison belonging to the king's bench; the novel is built inside that institution — the definitive fictional habitation of the entry's prison. Paraphrase clearly marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim] matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

MATRICIDE

[Aeschylus, Oresteia, 458 BC]

Who. Aeschylus [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The canonical matricide in classical literature — (paraphrase) Orestes slays his mother Clytemnestra to avenge his murdered father, and the Furies hound him for the mother's blood. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Aeschylus, Oresteia, 458 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MATRICIDE, p. 765; scan anchor: djvu line 128810 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry is a one-line definition; the Oresteia gives the act its archetypal literary form. Paraphrase clearly marked; classical drama cited in the novel-attribution format since it is literature rather than a maxim. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MERCY

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, 1596]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Portia's courtroom plea is the canonical literary treatment of judicial mercy — "The quality of mercy is not strained, / It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, 1596. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MERCY, p. 774; scan anchor: djvu line 130196 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1596 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines mercy in practice as the judge's arbitrament and in criminal law as discretion to remit or mitigate punishment ('a jury recommends the prisoner to the mercy of the court'); Portia delivers the speech in a courtroom to Shylock on exactly that question — whether to show mercy rather than exact the letter of the law. Short, verbatim-certain, public domain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

MIDSHIPMAN

[C. S. Forester, Mr Midshipman Hornblower, 1950]

Who. C. S. Forester [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Forester's novel follows Horatio Hornblower as a young midshipman — a naval cadet seconding his superiors' orders and learning the trade, exactly the rank the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: C. S. Forester, Mr Midshipman Hornblower, 1950. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MIDSHIPMAN, p. 777; scan anchor: djvu line 130806 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1950 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The novel's title and premise are literally the entry's subject: a midshipman in training for a commission. Genuine literary instantiation of the rank. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MINER

[Émile Zola, Germinal, 1885]

Who. Émile Zola [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Zola's novel follows Étienne Lantier, a young coal miner drawn into the miners' strike — the digger for minerals the entry defines, at work and in revolt. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Émile Zola, Germinal, 1885. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MINER, p. 779; scan anchor: djvu line 131124 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1885 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The novel's protagonist is literally a miner; the book is the canonical literary treatment of the miner's condition. Genuine and direct. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MINING

[Émile Zola, Germinal, 1885]

Who. Émile Zola [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Zola's novel is set entirely inside the coal-mining enterprise — the business of extracting from the earth that the entry defines, with its pits, companies, and labor. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Émile Zola, Germinal, 1885. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MINING, p. 780; scan anchor: djvu line 131233 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1885 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Distinct from the MINER note: this targets the enterprise/process sense of the entry. The MINE (pit) entry was left bare to avoid triplication; its sense is carried in this note's context. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MOB

[William Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, c. 1599]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears" — Antony's funeral oration turns the Roman crowd into exactly the violent, disorderly assemblage defying order that the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, c. 1599. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MOB, p. 786; scan anchor: djvu line 132277 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The play stages the legal 'mob' in action: a crowd swayed by rhetoric into violence. The quoted opening line is verbatim-certain and is the pivot of the mob scene. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

MODERAMEN INCULPATES TUTELS

[Maxim: Moderamen inculpatae tutelae]

Who. Maxim: Moderamen inculpatae tutelae [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: "Moderamen inculpatae tutelae" — the due measure of blameless self-defense] — the lawful degree of force in defense of person or property, even where it costs the aggressor his life. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

[basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry IS a classical Latin maxim (headword is the parser's OCR rendering of 'Moderamen inculpatae tutelae'); the note gives the standard form and the entry's own sense. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

MONOMACHY

[Alexander Pushkin, Eugene Onegin, 1833]

Who. Alexander Pushkin [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Pushkin's verse novel, Onegin kills his friend Lensky in a duel — the single combat the entry defines, once allowed by law for the trial or proof of causes. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Alexander Pushkin, Eugene Onegin, 1833. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MONOMACHY, p. 790; scan anchor: djvu line 132897 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1833 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The duel is the novel's climactic legal-social institution, matching the entry's definition of monomachia as a lawful single combat. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MONOMANIA

[Edgar Allan Poe, "The Tell-Tale Heart", 1843]

Who. Edgar Allan Poe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Poe's narrator protests his sanity in measured, logical tones while obsessively recounting a murder — a single deranged faculty with the rest in apparent exercise, the entry's definition. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Edgar Allan Poe, "The Tell-Tale Heart", 1843. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MONOMANIA, p. 790; scan anchor: djvu line 132905 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1843 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The story is the classic literary portrait of single-faculty derangement. Paraphrase only; no quote risked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MUHUS

[Maxim: Panem et circenses]

Who. Maxim: Panem et circenses [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: "Panem et circenses" — "bread and circuses" (Juvenal, Satires, c. 100)] — the populace kept quiet with food and games. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Panem et circenses. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MUHUS, p. 799; scan anchor: djvu line 134361 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Borderline kept for the entry's third sense ('a gladiatorial show or spectacle'): Juvenal's phrase names the social function of the munera spectacles. Reasoning rides along; the other senses (gift, office) are untouched. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

MURDER

[Fyodor Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866]

Who. Fyodor Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dostoevsky's Raskolnikov, of sound mind and full deliberation, murders the pawnbroker Alyona Ivanovna with an axe — the entry's definition enacted, with the novel as the conscience that follows the act. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Fyodor Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MURDER, p. 799; scan anchor: djvu line 134369 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1866 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The canonical novel of murder and its aftermath; the killing matches the entry's elements (sound mind, human creature in being). Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MUTATIS MUTANDIS

[Maxim: Mutatis mutandis]

Who. Maxim: Mutatis mutandis [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: "Mutatis mutandis" — "with the necessary changes in points of detail."] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Mutatis mutandis. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MUTATIS MUTANDIS, p. 800; scan anchor: djvu line 134585 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry IS the classical phrase; the translation is the entry's own body text. No invention. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

MUTE

[Arthur Miller, The Crucible, 1953]

Who. Arthur Miller [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Miller's play, Giles Corey stands mute — refusing to plead at his arraignment — and is pressed to death with stones rather than answer; the old peine forte et dure that the standing-mute procedure led to. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Arthur Miller, The Crucible, 1953. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MUTE, p. 800; scan anchor: djvu line 134588 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1953 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the play dramatizes exactly the entry's 'stands mute' procedure and its historical consequence. Paraphrase only; the famous 'More weight' line not quoted to avoid misquotation risk. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MUTINY

[Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, Mutiny on the Bounty, 1932]

Who. Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Nordhoff and Hall's novel recounts the Bounty's crew rising against Captain Bligh — the insurrection of seamen against their commander's authority the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, Mutiny on the Bounty, 1932. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MUTINY, p. 800; scan anchor: djvu line 134619

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

[basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1932 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The definitive literary mutiny; matches the entry's 'insurrection of soldiers or seamen against the authority of their commanders.' MUTINOUS left bare — one mutiny annotation per the sparse-layer discipline. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

NAME

[William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c. 1595]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "What's in a name? that which we call a rose / By any other name would smell as sweet." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c. 1595. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry NAME, p. 802; scan anchor: djvu line 134831 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1595 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline kept with the distinction stated: Juliet's lines are the canonical meditation on what a name is and does; the entry's sense is the legal designation of a person. The quote is verbatim-certain (Act 2, Scene 2). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

NECESSITY

[Maxim: Necessity is the mother of invention]

Who. Maxim: Necessity is the mother of invention [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: "Necessity is the mother of invention" (proverb; traced to Plato's Republic)] — compulsion as the engine of human ingenuity. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Necessity is the mother of invention. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry NECESSITY, p. 809; scan anchor: djvu line 135967 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Classical wisdom on necessity; the entry's sense is legal compulsion (irresistible force admitting no choice). The proverb illuminates the broader human truth of the term; attribution phrased as 'traced to' rather than asserted verbatim. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

NEGRO

[Mark Twain, Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, 1884]

Who. Mark Twain [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Twain's Jim — the runaway enslaved Black man who is the novel's moral center — is the human being the era's law sorted under this headword; the entry's cold taxonomy set against the novel's portrait. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Mark Twain, Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, 1884. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry NEGRO, p. 812; scan anchor: djvu line 136523 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1884 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine link: the novel's central Black character against the dictionary's racial taxonomy. Paraphrase only — no dialect quoted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

NEWGATE

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dickens sets Fagin's last night in the condemned cell at Newgate — the London prison the entry describes, seen from the inside. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The condemned-cell scene is the famous literary interior of Newgate. Confident of the scene; paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

NEWSPAPER

[Orson Welles, Citizen Kane, 1941]

Who. Orson Welles [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Welles's film follows Charles Foster Kane's rise on a newspaper empire — the publication conveying intelligence of passing events that the entry defines, grown into power. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Orson Welles, Citizen Kane, 1941. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry NEWSPAPER, p. 816; scan anchor: djvu line 137253 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1941 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The definitive film about a newspaper as an institution and a power. Genuine fit to the entry's definition. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

NIHILIST

[Ivan Turgenev, Fathers and Sons, 1862]

Who. Ivan Turgenev [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Turgenev's Bazarov is the archetypal nihilist — the young man who bows to no authority and denies every political, religious, and social institution, the figure the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Ivan Turgenev, Fathers and Sons, 1862. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry NIHILIST, p. 819; scan anchor: djvu line 137663 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1862 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Bazarov is the literary origin of the modern nihilist figure; matches the entry's definition closely. Paraphrase only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

NON BIS IN IDEM

[Maxim: Non bis in idem]

Who. Maxim: Non bis in idem [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: "Non bis in idem" — "not twice for the same thing"; no man shall be twice tried for the same crime.] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Non bis in idem. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry NON BIS IN IDEM, p. 823; scan anchor: djvu line 138298 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

NON LIQUET

[Maxim: Non liquet]

Who. Maxim: Non liquet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: "Non liquet" — "it is not clear."] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Non liquet. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry NON LIQUET, p. 826; scan anchor: djvu line 138819 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry describes the Roman court practice itself (judges casting ballots inscribed 'N. L.'); the phrase is the classical original and the translation is the entry's own. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

OATH

[Maxim: Horace, Epistles I.i.14]

Who. Maxim: Horace [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Maxim: “Nullius addictus iurare in verba magistri” — “not bound to swear on the word of any master.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Horace, Epistles I.i.14. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OATH, p. 840; scan anchor: djvu line 140963 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines the oath as a binding asseveration; Horace's famous tag is classical wisdom about swearing itself — the refusal to be oath-bound to any master — and directly illuminates what the oath binds and what resists it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

OBEDIENCE

[Shakespeare, The Taming of the Shrew, c. 1594]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Kate's closing speech lays out the period doctrine of wifely obedience — compliance with commands prescribed by authority, preached at length as duty. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, The Taming of the Shrew, c. 1594. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OBEDIENCE, p. 841; scan anchor: djvu line 141150 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1594 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines obedience as compliance with a command, prohibition, or known rule of duty prescribed by authority; the speech is the era's doctrine of obedience in dramatic form. Marked paraphrase — no verbatim claim. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

OBLIGATION

[Shakespeare, Hamlet, 1601]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “Neither a borrower nor a lender be, / For loan oft loses both itself and friend.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Hamlet, 1601. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OBLIGATION, p. 842; scan anchor: djvu line 141416 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1601 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry names the binding power of vow, promise, oath, or contract; Polonius's counsel is the classic literary warning on the obligation debt creates. Short verbatim quote, certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

OBLIGATION

[Cicero, De Officiis, 44 BCE]

Who. Cicero [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Cicero's De Officiis is the classical treatise on duty — what one person owes to another — the philosophical ground of the entry's 'legal or moral duty.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Cicero, De Officiis, 44 BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OBLIGATION, p. 842; scan anchor: djvu line 141416 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Second note on the same headword: the entry explicitly invokes moral duty alongside legal; Cicero's work is the canonical classical treatment. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

OCHLOCRACY

[Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, 1599]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Roman crowd, swayed by Antony's funeral oration from Brutus's reasoned defense into riot — Shakespeare's portrait of the multitude holding whole power in its hands. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, 1599. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OCHLOCRACY, p. 847; scan anchor: djvu line 142154 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: government by the multitude, the populace with the whole power and administration. The Forum scenes are the canonical dramatic image of exactly that. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

[Orwell, Animal Farm, 1945]

Who. Orwell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “All animals are equal, but some animals are more equal than others.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Orwell, Animal Farm, 1945. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OLIGARCHY, p. 860; scan anchor: djvu line 142795 [basis: citation + host entry record

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

(entries.json)]

When. 1945 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: administration lodged in the hands of a few. The line is the novel's verdict on the few seizing the whole — the entry's definition in satire. Short verbatim quote, certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

ONCE IN JEOPARDY

[Beresford, Double Jeopardy, 1999]

Who. Beresford [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The thriller's entire premise turns on the rule the entry states: acquitted once of the killing by legal proceedings, she cannot be put in danger of conviction and punishment for the same offense again. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Beresford, Double Jeopardy, 1999. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ONCE IN JEOPARDY, p. 853; scan anchor: djvu line 143220 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1999 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: a person once already, by legal proceedings, put in danger of conviction and punishment for the same offense. The film dramatizes precisely this doctrine. Marked paraphrase — premise certain, no dialogue quoted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ORDEAL

[Scott, Ivanhoe, 1820]

Who. Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The trial by combat staged to decide Rebecca's fate — the 'judgment of God' the entry names, with supernatural intervention expected to rescue the innocent, made narrative. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Scott, Ivanhoe, 1820. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ORDEAL, p. 857; scan anchor: djvu line 143894 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1820 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines ordeal as judicium Dei, fire or water, the innocent rescued by supernatural intervention. Ivanhoe's Templestowe combat is the famous fictional instance. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ORPHAN

[Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “Please, sir, I want some more.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ORPHAN, p. 861; scan anchor: djvu line 144520 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: particularly a fatherless child. Oliver is the archetypal fatherless workhouse child; the line is his voice. Short verbatim quote, certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

OUTLAW

[Traditional, Robin Hood ballads]

Who. Traditional [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The ballads' hero lives in Sherwood beyond the king's law — literally 'put out of the protection or aid of the law,' the entry's definition in legend. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Traditional, Robin Hood ballads. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OUTLAW, p. 863; scan anchor: djvu line 144895 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry's English-law sense matches the outlaw of legend exactly. Marked paraphrase — traditional material, no single text quoted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

NOT GUILTY

[Lumet, 12 Angry Men, 1957]

Who. Lumet [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The jury room deliberating its way to the 'not guilty' verdict — the form of verdict in criminal cases where the jury acquit the prisoner, dramatized in real time. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Lumet, 12 Angry Men, 1957. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry NOT GUILTY, p. 830; scan anchor: djvu line 139473 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1957 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry names both the plea and the verdict form. The film is the canonical dramatization of a jury reaching 'not guilty.' Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

NULLTUS FILIUS

[Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Edmund — the 'bastard' son who hears the word 'base' as a brand — the law's 'son of nobody' raging against the status the entry names. (Printed headword is the OCR garbling of NULLIUS FILIUS.) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry NULLTUS FILIUS, p. 837; scan anchor: djvu line 140603 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'the son of nobody; a bastard.' Edmund is the canonical literary nullius filius. Keyed on the printed headword with the OCR correction recorded in reasoning. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

NOVERCA

[Perrault, Cendrillon (Histoires ou contes du temps passé), 1697]

Who. Perrault [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Cinderella's stepmother — the fairy-tale noverca, the civil law's word for stepmother wearing a story's face. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Perrault, Cendrillon (Histoires ou contes du temps passé), 1697. Host locus:

When. 1697 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: in the civil law, a step-mother. The wicked stepmother is the folk embodiment. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

NOTORIETY

[Wilde, The Picture of Dorian Gray, 1890]

Who. Wilde [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “There is only one thing in the world worse than being talked about, and that is not being talked about.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1890 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: the state of being notorious or universally well known. The preface line is the classic literary statement of notoriety as a condition. Short verbatim quote, certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

NURTURE

[Shakespeare, The Tempest, 1611]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “A devil, a born devil, on whose nature / Nurture can never stick.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1611 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: the act of taking care of children, bringing them up, and educating them. Prospero's line on Caliban is the canonical literary test of nurture's limits. Short verbatim quote, certain (Act 4, sc. 1). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

OPTIMACY

[Plato, Republic, c. 380 BCE]

Who. Plato [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Plato's philosopher-kings — the classical 'rule by the best,' the ideal form behind the entry's 'men of the highest rank.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Plato, Republic, c. 380 BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OPTIMACY, p. 866; scan anchor: djvu line 143717 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry: nobility; men of the highest rank. The Republic's aristocracy (rule by the best) is the classical root of the concept. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PAINE FORTE ET DURE

[Miller, The Crucible, 1953]

Who. Miller [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “More weight.” — Giles Corey's only words as he is pressed to death under the stones. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Miller, The Crucible, 1953. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PAINE FORTE ET DURE, p. 868; scan anchor: djvu line 145672 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1953 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The peine forte et dure — pressing to death — enacted on stage; the entry is a bare cross-ref ('See Peine Forte et Dure') but the headword names the practice the play stages. Short verbatim quote, certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

OBLOQUY

[Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850]

Who. Hawthorne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Hester Prynne wearing the scarlet A — the novel's image of a woman exposed to public censure and reproach, the entry's definition embodied. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1850 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: to expose one to censure and reproach. The scarlet letter is the canonical fictional emblem of obloquy. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

OBLITERATION

[Orwell, Nineteen Eighty-Four, 1949]

Who. Orwell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “Who controls the past controls the future: who controls the present controls the past.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Orwell, Nineteen Eighty-Four, 1949. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OBLITERATION, p. 844; scan anchor: djvu line 141709 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1949 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: erasure or blotting out of written words. The Party's maxim is the doctrine of obliteration of the record as statecraft. Short verbatim quote, certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

OBSTA PRINCIPIIS

[Maxim: Ovid, Remedia Amoris 91]

Who. Maxim: Ovid [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Maxim: “Principiis obsta, sero medicina paratur” — “Resist the beginnings; the medicine is prepared too late once the disease has grown strong.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Ovid, Remedia Amoris 91. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OBSTA PRINCIPIIS, p. 845; scan anchor: djvu line 141814 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry quotes Bradley J. invoking 'Obsta principiis' as a judicial motto; the annotation supplies the classical source of the motto itself — Ovid's line on withstanding beginnings. Genuine attribution, no invention. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

OCCUPANCY

[Defoe, Robinson Crusoe, 1719]

Who. Defoe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Crusoe taking possession of the uninhabited island with the intention of making it his — the entry's 'a thing which belongs to nobody becomes the property of the person who took possession of it,' as narrative. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Defoe, Robinson Crusoe, 1719. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OCCUPANCY, p. 846; scan anchor: djvu line 141963 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1719 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry is the civil-law doctrine of acquiring ownerless things by taking possession. Crusoe's island is its canonical fictional instance. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

OFFICE

[Shakespeare, 2 Henry IV, 1598]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, 2 Henry IV, 1598. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OFFICE, p. 848; scan anchor: djvu line 142369 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1598 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: the right to exercise a public or private employment. The line is the classic statement of office's burden side. Short verbatim quote, certain (Act 3, sc. 1). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

OPPRESSION

[Shakespeare, The Tempest, 1611]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “You taught me language, and my profit on't / Is, I know how to curse.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

PACT

[Marlowe, Doctor Faustus, c. 1592]

Who. Marlowe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Faustus signing his soul away in a written pact with Mephistopheles — the diabolical pact, sealed and binding. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Marlowe, Doctor Faustus, c. 1592. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PACT, p. 867; scan anchor: djvu line 145511 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1592 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry cross-refs the civil-law pactum; the soul-pact is the canonical fictional pact. Marked paraphrase. PACTUM left bare to avoid duplication. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PAMPHLET

[Paine, Common Sense, 1776]

Who. Paine [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Paine's Common Sense — the small stitched paper-covered book as a political instrument, moving a continent toward independence. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Paine, Common Sense, 1776. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PAMPHLET, p. 869; scan anchor: djvu line 145797 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1776 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: a small book, bound in paper covers. Common Sense is the canonical historical pamphlet. Marked paraphrase — historical fact, no quotation risk. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PARISH

[Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. “The law is a ass — a idiot.” [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: the ecclesiastical/civil parish, the unit of poor-law administration. Bumble's outburst indicts the parish machinery — workhouse and beadle — that is the novel's whole world. Short verbatim quote, certain (ch. 51). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PARSON

[Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813]

Who. Austen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Austen's Mr. Collins — the obsequious parson toadying to his patroness Lady Catherine — the parish priest in satire. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PARSON, p. 876; scan anchor: djvu line 146745 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1813 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: the rector of a church, bearer of the most honorable title a parish priest can enjoy — Coke's praise set against Austen's portrait. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning —

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PARENT, p. 872; scan anchor: djvu line 146314 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: the lawful father or mother. Lear's cry is the canonical literary statement of the parent/child bond at its breaking point. Short verbatim quote, certain (Act 1, sc. 4). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PARRICIDE

[Sophocles, Oedipus Rex, c. 429 BCE]

Who. Sophocles [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Oedipus killing his father Laius on the road — the archetypal parricide of classical tragedy. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sophocles, Oedipus Rex, c. 429 BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PARRICIDE, p. 874; scan anchor: djvu line 146706 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry: the crime of killing one's father. Oedipus is the archetype. Marked paraphrase; PARENTICIDE given the distinct Dostoevsky link to avoid duplication. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PARENTICIDE

[Dostoevsky, The Brothers Karamazov, 1880]

Who. Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The novel turns on the accusation that Dmitri murdered his father Fyodor — parent-murder as the engine of the plot. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1880 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: one who murders a parent; the crime so committed. The Karamazov patricide-accusation is the canonical novelistic instance. Marked paraphrase; kept distinct from PARRICIDE's Oedipus. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PASSION

[Shakespeare, Othello, 1604]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Othello murdering Desdemona in a fit of jealous rage — the entry's 'sudden passion' (rage, furious resentment) prompting violent action, in the manslaughter sense. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Othello, 1604. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PASSION, p. 879; scan anchor: djvu line 147637 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1604 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines passion for manslaughter as intense emotional excitement prompting violent action — rage, anger, hatred. Othello is the canonical instance. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PATER

[Shakespeare, The Winter's Tale, 1611]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Leontes doubting his paternity of the newborn Perdita and denying her — the living drama of the entry's maxim 'pater is est quem nuptiae demonstrant' (the father is he whom the marriage points out). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, The Winter's Tale, 1611. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PATER, p. 881; scan anchor: djvu line 147842 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1611 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's paternity presumption is the hinge of Leontes's jealousy. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PATERFAMILIAS

[Coppola, The Godfather, 1972]

Who. Coppola [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The don of the Corleone family ruling his household with the Roman paterfamilias's potestas — absolute authority over children and dependents. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

[Dickens, Bleak House, 1853]

Who. Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Jarndyce and Jarndyce — the chancery suit that devours the very estate it was set to administer — the probate court's subject in satire. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Dickens, Bleak House, 1853. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ORPHANS’ COURT, p. 861; scan anchor: djvu line 144549 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1853 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: courts of probate jurisdiction. Bleak House is the canonical fictional indictment of the estate-devouring probate machinery. Marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PATRIA

[Maxim: Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori]

Who. Maxim: Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Horace's line — 'it is sweet and fitting to die for one's country' — is the classical world's supreme utterance on patria as the country that commands duty; it illuminates the entry's 'country' sense. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PATRIA, p. 881; scan anchor: djvu line 147920 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines patria as 'the country.' The Horatian maxim is the single most famous classical statement containing the word, and it genuinely illuminates patria-as-country as an object of obligation. Latin quoted verbatim (certain); no English rendering offered, to avoid inventing a translation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PATRICIDE

[Sophocles, Oedipus Rex, c. 429 BCE]

Who. Sophocles [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Sophocles' Oedipus Rex, Oedipus unwittingly fulfills the prophecy by slaying his father Laius on the road — the archetypal patricide of world literature. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sophocles, Oedipus Rex, c. 429 BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PATRICIDE, p. 882; scan anchor: djvu line 147968 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry: 'One who has killed his father.' Oedipus is the archetypal fictional patricide; the link is direct and illuminating. Paraphrase used — no quote attempted — because plot summary needs no verbatim. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PEACE

[Maxim: Si vis pacem, para bellum]

Who. Maxim: Si vis pacem [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Vegetius's maxim — 'if you want peace, prepare for war' — is the classical statement on peace as a condition states must actively secure, directly on-point for the entry's external/internal peace of a state or nation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Si vis pacem, para bellum. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PEACE, p. 884; scan anchor: djvu line 148308 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry treats peace as a state of affairs between/among powers. The Vegetius maxim is the canonical classical-wisdom link on that exact statecraft sense. Latin verbatim-certain; no translation offered. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PEERS

[Magna Carta, 1215]

Who. Magna Carta [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Magna Carta's clause 39 guarantees that no free man shall be deprived of standing 'except by the lawful judgment of his equals' — the root of trial by a jury of peers, and the direct ancestor of the entry's feudal 'judges of their co-vassals, as being each other's equals.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Magna Carta, 1215. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PEERS, p. 886; scan anchor: djvu line 148614 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry's core is judgment by one's equals. Magna Carta 1215 is the genuine historical root of that principle. Paraphrase used because English translations of clause 39 vary; the substance is stated, not quoted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PEEVE FORTE ET DURE

[Arthur Miller, The Crucible, 1953]

Who. Arthur Miller [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The headword as printed is the OCR rendering of 'peine forte et dure' — the old English punishment of pressing to death under iron for standing mute. Miller stages it exactly: Giles Corey, pressed for refusing to plead, answers only 'More weight.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Arthur Miller, The Crucible, 1953. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PEEVE FORTE ET DURE, p. 886; scan anchor: djvu line 148641 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1953 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Body confirms: punishment for those who 'stood mute,' 'pressing to death' under iron. Giles Corey's 'More weight' is verbatim-certain (among the most famous lines in American drama) and depicts precisely this punishment. Keyed on the headword exactly as in the chunk for mergeability; the note names the correct French phrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PENANCE

[Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850]

Who. Nathaniel Hawthorne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Hawthorne's Hester Prynne, condemned to wear the scarlet letter A in public view, is the archetypal literary penance — an ecclesiastical-style punishment inflicted for a spiritual offense, exactly the entry's subject. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter, 1850. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PENANCE, p. 887; scan anchor: djvu line 148835 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1850 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: ecclesiastical punishment for spiritual offense. The Scarlet Letter is the canonical fictional penance. Paraphrase — no quote needed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PENITENTIARY

[Richard Lovelace, "To Althea, from Prison", 1642]

Who. Richard Lovelace [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'Stone walls do not a prison make, / Nor iron bars a cage' — Lovelace, writing from actual confinement, states the canonical literary truth that the penitentiary is not its walls; it illuminates what the entry's 'prison or place of punishment' is and is not. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Richard Lovelace, "To Althea, from Prison", 1642. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PENITENTIARY, p. 887; scan anchor: djvu line 148884 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1642 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines the penitentiary as a prison/place of punishment. The Lovelace couplet is verbatim-certain and is the classic literary statement on imprisonment. Genuinely illuminating. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PEOPLE

[Preamble to the U.S. Constitution, 1787]

Who. Preamble to the U.S. Constitution [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'We the People of the United States' — the Preamble's opening is the American legal utterance of the people as a sovereign collective body, exactly the entry's 'nation in its collective and political capacity.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Preamble to the U.S. Constitution, 1787. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PEOPLE, p. 888; scan anchor: djvu line 149013 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1787 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: the people as the collective/political body of citizens. The Preamble is THE legal text embodying that concept. Verbatim-certain short quote. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PERFIDY

[William Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, c. 1599]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'Et tu, Brute? Then fall, Caesar.' Brutus's betrayal — engaged faith turned to its contrary — is the archetypal literary perfidy, sealed in Caesar's dying line. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: one who engages his faith to do a thing and does the contrary. Brutus is the archetypal case. The line is verbatim-certain (among the most quoted in English). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PERJURY

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Mayella Ewell's false sworn testimony against Tom Robinson — willful false assertion by a witness under oath — is the most famous fictional perjury in American letters, and it convicts an innocent man. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PERJURY, p. 893; scan anchor: djvu line 149809 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: willful false assertion by a witness in a judicial proceeding under oath. The Mockingbird trial is the canonical fictional instance. Paraphrase; no quote attempted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PERSON

[John Donne, "Meditation XVII", 1624]

Who. John Donne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'No man is an island, entire of itself' — Donne's canonical statement that the human person exists only in connection; it illuminates the human being behind the entry's legal abstraction of the person as rights-bearer and duty-bearer. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: John Donne, "Meditation XVII", 1624. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PERSON, p. 895; scan anchor: djvu line 150128 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1624 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'A human being considered as capable of having rights and of being charged with duties.' Donne's line is verbatim-certain and speaks to the humanity of the legal person. Genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PERSONA

[William Shakespeare, As You Like It, c. 1599]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'All the world's a stage, / And all the men and women merely players' — Jaques's speech gives the persona as the roles or masks a person assumes, each carrying its part; it illuminates the entry's doctrine that one man may unite many personae. When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: civil-law 'character' by which rights/duties attach; one man may unite many. The 'merely players' speech is the canonical literary persona-as-role. Verbatim-certain couplet. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PERSONATE

[Anthony Hope, The Prisoner of Zenda, 1894]

Who. Anthony Hope [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Rudolf Rassendyll's impersonation of the King of Ruritania — assuming another's character without consent to deceive — is the archetypal fictional personation, matching the entry's criminal definition point for point. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Anthony Hope, The Prisoner of Zenda, 1894. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PERSONATE, p. 896; scan anchor: djvu line 150290 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1894 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: criminal assumption of another's person/character to deceive and defraud. Zenda is the archetypal fictional instance. Paraphrase; no quote needed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PETITION

[First Amendment, U.S. Constitution, 1791]

Who. First Amendment [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances' — the First Amendment's closing clause is the American legal embodiment of the entry: an application 'for the redress of some wrong,' in language echoing the dictionary definition itself. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: First Amendment, U.S. Constitution, 1791. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PETITION, p. 897; scan anchor: djvu line 150475 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1791 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines petition as an application for redress of wrong or grant of favor. The First Amendment clause is verbatim-certain and is the genuine legal-literary embodiment. The phrasing parallel ('redress') confirms the fit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PICKPOCKET

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Fagin's boys, led by the Artful Dodger, are the archetypal fictional pickpockets — thieves secretly stealing from the person of another, exactly the entry's definition. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'A thief who secretly steals money or other property from the person of another.' The Dodger is the canonical fictional pickpocket. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PIRACY

[Robert Louis Stevenson, Treasure Island, 1883]

Who. Robert Louis Stevenson [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Long John Silver and the crew of the Hispaniola — forcible depredation on the high seas, in the spirit of universal hostility — are the archetypal fictional pirates, matching the entry's law-of-nations definition. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Robert Louis Stevenson, Treasure Island, 1883. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PIRACY, p. 900; scan anchor: djvu line 150929 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1883 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: robbery/forcible depredation on the high seas, animo furandi, universal hostility. Treasure Island is the archetypal fictional piracy. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PLAGIARISM

[Martial, Epigrams, c. 86 CE]

Who. Martial [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Roman poet Martial originated the usage: in his Epigrams he denounced a rival who recited Martial's verses as his own as a 'plagiarius' — literally a kidnapper — the classical root of the entry's 'appropriating the literary composition of another.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Martial, Epigrams, c. 86 CE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PLAGIARISM, p. 902; scan anchor: djvu line 151287 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry defines plagiarism as appropriating another's literary composition. Martial's plagiarius is the genuine classical origin of the term. Paraphrase; no Latin quoted (attribution of exact epigram number uncertain — omitted per discipline). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PLEADING

[Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1853]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The interminable Chancery suit Jarndyce v. Jarndyce — generations consumed by pleading in which no proper issue is ever reached — is the archetypal literary portrait of the pleading system and its failure mode, illuminating what the entry's 'system of rules' is for. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1853. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PLEADING, p. 904; scan anchor: djvu line 151687 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1853 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: the system by which litigating parties' allegations are framed 'to produce a proper issue.' Jarndyce is the canonical fictional case of pleading without issue. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PLEDGE

[Francis Bellamy, "Pledge of Allegiance", 1892]

Who. Francis Bellamy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'I pledge allegiance to my Flag' — Bellamy's 1892 original opening gives the solemn-vow sense of pledge: a binding engagement of faith, the civic counterpart of the entry's 'security for some debt or engagement.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Francis Bellamy, "Pledge of Allegiance", 1892. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PLEDGE, p. 905; scan anchor: djvu line 151865 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1892 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's bailment sense meets the broader vow sense in 'engagement.' Bellamy's original wording is verbatim-certain; the modern 'Flag of the United States of America' wording was deliberately avoided (version-drift risk). Borderline but genuine — recorded as such. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

POISON

[William Shakespeare, Hamlet, c. 1601]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Claudius murders King Hamlet by pouring poison into his ear as he sleeps — the most famous fictional poisoning in English drama, a murder-by-poison case in miniature against the entry's medical-jurisprudence definition. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1601 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: a substance capable of destroying life. Hamlet's ear-poisoning is the canonical fictional instance. Paraphrase; no quote attempted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

POLICE

[Victor Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Inspector Javert — the relentless agent of detection and pursuit — is the archetypal literary embodiment of the police function the entry defines: 'the prevention, detection, and punishment of crimes.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1862 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines police as the function charged with public order and crime prevention/detection/punishment. Javert is the canonical fictional embodiment. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

POOR

[Charles Dickens, A Christmas Carol, 1843]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'Are there no prisons?' — Scrooge, solicited for the poor, invokes the workhouse-and-prison machinery for the destitute; the line lands on exactly the entry's 'public charge,' those maintained 'at the expense of the public.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1843 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: the destitute as a public charge, dependent on public maintenance. Scrooge's reply is verbatim-certain and addresses precisely that legal machinery. Genuine link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

POPULUS

[Maxim: Vox populi, vox Dei]

Who. Maxim: Vox populi [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'The voice of the people is the voice of God' — the classical maxim on the people as a collective authority, directly on-point for the entry's 'the whole body of Roman citizens.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Vox populi, vox Dei. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry POPULUS, p. 913; scan anchor: djvu line 153284 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

POST

[Herodotus, Histories, c. 440 BCE]

Who. Herodotus [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Herodotus praised the Persian imperial courier system — riders carrying dispatches, stationed at fixed intervals — the direct ancestor of the entry's 'conveyance for letters or dispatches' kept 'at fixed stations,' later paraphrased in the famous post-office inscription. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Herodotus, Histories, c. 440 BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry POST, p. 918; scan anchor: djvu line 154027 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Entry derives 'post' from horses 'kept or placed at fixed stations.' Herodotus's account of the Persian system is the genuine classical root. Paraphrase used — the inscription's wording has variant forms, so no verbatim quoted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

POWER

[Lord Acton, letter to Bishop Mandell Creighton, 1887]

Who. Lord Acton [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power corrupts absolutely.' Acton's maxim is the most quoted wisdom on power in English, and it illuminates the concept the entry defines — authority to act — by naming its moral gravity. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1887 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines power as authority to do some act. Acton's sentence is verbatim-certain and is the canonical maxim on power as such. Genuine classical-wisdom link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PREAMBLE

[Preamble to the U.S. Constitution, 1787]

Who. Preamble to the U.S. Constitution [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union' — the most famous preamble in American law, and the exemplar of the entry: 'a clause at the beginning of a constitution... explanatory of the reasons for its enactment.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1787 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the preamble; the U.S. Constitution's Preamble is its most famous instance. Verbatim-certain. (PEOPLE draws on the same source for a different entry — each link independently genuine.) [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PREJUDICE

[Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813]

Who. Austen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Elizabeth Bennet judges Darcy on first impressions and wounded pride; the novel's whole arc is prejudice formed before the evidence and unmade by it. [Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 1813. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PREJUDICE, p. 931; scan anchor: djvu line 156182 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1813 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Black's defines prejudice as 'a forejudgment; bias; preconceived opinion... a leaning towards one side of a cause for some reason other than a conviction of its justice.' Austen's novel is the English novel of exactly that movement of mind — the title itself names it. I declined the famous opening line ('It is a truth universally acknowledged...') because it satirizes marriage economics and does NOT illuminate forejudgment; a tight paraphrase of the plot-turn is the honest vehicle. Verbatim certainty not needed where paraphrase is marked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PREMEDITATE

[Shakespeare, Macbeth, 1606]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Macbeth, alone before Duncan's chamber, rehearses the murder in his mind's eye — premeditation staged as soliloquy: 'Is this a dagger which I see before me, / The handle toward my hand?' [Shakespeare, Macbeth, 1606] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Macbeth, 1606. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PREMEDITATE, p. 931; scan anchor: djvu line 156241 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's sense is 'to think of an act beforehand; to contrive and design.' The dagger soliloquy is literally the act of premeditation performed on stage: the deed contrived in darkness before it is done. Quote is verbatim-certain and short (two lines). Declined a Dostoevsky/Raskolnikov quote because any English line rides a translator and I would not be verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PRESS

[Pakula, All the President's Men, 1976]

Who. Pakula [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Woodward and Bernstein print what power wants unpublished — until the published fact, not the held secret, becomes the instrument of accountability: the press as publicity-giver. [Pakula, All the President's Men, 1976] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Pakula, All the President's Men, 1976. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRESS, p. 934; scan anchor: djvu line 156871 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1976 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Black's metaphorical sense: 'the aggregate of publications issuing from the press, or the giving publicity to one's sentiments and opinions through the medium of printing.' The film is the canonical dramatization of exactly that function — publicity through print as a check on power. No short verbatim-certain line, so marked (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PRESSING TO DEATH

[Hytner, The Crucible, 1996]

Who. Hytner [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) At Salem in 1692, Giles Corey is pressed under stones for standing mute; tradition records his only words under the weight as 'More weight' — the canonical staging of peine forte et dure. [Hytner, The Crucible, 1996] (play: [Miller, The Crucible, 1953]) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Hytner, The Crucible, 1996. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRESSING TO DEATH, p. 934; scan anchor: djvu line 156886 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1996 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Peine forte et dure is so rare that the canonical cultural instance is this one. The film stages the punishment the entry names; the 'More weight' tradition is the historical anecdote attached to Corey. Marked (paraphrase) since the famous words are tradition's account, not a transcript. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PRESUMPTION

[Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Atticus Finch's summation in the Tom Robinson trial stages the presumption the courtroom owes the accused — the inference a court must draw before certainty is in hand. [Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRESUMPTION, p. 934; scan anchor: djvu line 156924 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry sense: a rule that courts 'shall draw a particular inference' by 'probable reasoning in the absence of actual certainty.' The novel's trial is fiction's classic treatment of the presumption owed the accused. Marked (paraphrase); no short verbatim-certain Atticus line on point. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PREVENTIVE JUSTICE

[Spielberg, Minority Report, 2002]

Who. Spielberg [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Department of Pre-Crime arrests murderers before the murder — government measures aimed at crimes foreseen, not crimes done: Black's definition of preventive justice dramatized. [Spielberg, Minority Report, 2002] (story: [Dick, 1956]) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Spielberg, Minority Report, 2002. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PREVENTIVE JUSTICE, p. 937; scan anchor: djvu line 157281 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2002 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'measures taken by government with reference to the direct prevention of crime... obliging those persons whom there is probable ground to suspect of future misbehavior.' The fiction IS this definition enacted. Marked (paraphrase); film cited as the moment, Dick's 1956 story noted as source. How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

PRICE

[Wilde, Lady Windermere's Fan, 1892]

Who. Wilde [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'What is a cynic? A man who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing.' [Wilde, Lady Windermere's Fan, 1892] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Wilde, Lady Windermere's Fan, 1892. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRICE, p. 937; scan anchor: djvu line 157317 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1892 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'The consideration (usually in money) given for the purchase of a thing.' Wilde's line genuinely glosses the concept — price (money) vs. value (worth) — one of his surest lines, short, verbatim-certain. Assigned here rather than PRETIUM because it speaks the English word within this entry's money/consideration frame. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PRIEST

[Greene, The Power and the Glory, 1940]

Who. Greene [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Greene's whisky priest clings to his office while doubting his own worthiness — the novel's whole argument is what makes the priest: the man or the ministry. [Greene, The Power and the Glory, 1940] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Greene, The Power and the Glory, 1940. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRIEST, p. 938; scan anchor: djvu line 157379 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1940 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline but passing: the entry is a bare definition ('a minister of a church'), and the novel is fiction's sustained inquiry into the priestly office itself — it illuminates the entry's subject, not merely a word. Marked (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PRIMO VENIENTI

[Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (On the PRIMOGENITURE run-on sub-entry in this body — 'the superior or exclusive [right of the firstborn]':) Edmund the bastard, disinherited by the custom, opens his revolt: 'Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law / My services are bound.' [Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, King Lear, 1606. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRIMO VENIENTI, p. 939; scan anchor: djvu line 157533 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. KEY NOTE: the chunk's headword here is 'PRIMO VENIENTI'; PRIMOGENITURE appears as a run-on sub-entry in the same body. The annotation is keyed to the chunk headword for mergeability. Entry sense: the superior or exclusive right of the firstborn. Lear turns on succession, and Edmund's soliloquy is the direct challenge to primogeniture staged in the canon. Two lines, verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PRISON

[Dumas, The Count of Monte Cristo, 1844]

Who. Dumas [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Edmond Dantès, innocent, rots fourteen years in the Château d'If — the prison as injustice made stone, the novel's engine; its closing counsel is 'Attendre et espérer' ('Wait and hope'). [Dumas, The Count of Monte Cristo, 1844] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Dumas, The Count of Monte Cristo, 1844. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRISON, p. 939; scan anchor: djvu line 157837 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1844 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry covers confinement 'as a punishment imposed by the law or otherwise in the course of the administration of justice' — Dantès' case is the second branch: confinement by corrupted process, not lawful punishment. The French tag is two famous words, safe verbatim; the rest marked (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PRIVILEGE

[Orwell, Animal Farm, 1945]

Who. Orwell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'All animals are equal, but some animals are more equal than others.' [Orwell, Animal Farm, 1945] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Orwell, Animal Farm, 1945. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRIVILEGE, p. 942; scan anchor: djvu line 158046 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1945 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'a particular and peculiar benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class, beyond the common advantages of other citizens.' Orwell's line is the canonical satire of exactly that — privilege as exceptional advantage beyond the common. One line, verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROCLAMATION

[Spielberg, Lincoln, 2012]

Who. Spielberg [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Spielberg's Lincoln stages the proclamation as an instrument of state — the President's word published by authority, binding the nation; the Emancipation Proclamation is the era's defining instance. [Spielberg, Lincoln, 2012] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 2012 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'to promulgate; to announce; to publish, by governmental authority... issued by proper authority.' The film dramatizes exactly that legal form — the proclamation as authoritative publication. Marked (paraphrase); no short verbatim-certain line on point. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROCREATION

[Atwood, The Handmaid's Tale, 1985]

Who. Atwood [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Gilead makes procreation the state-mandated end of the marital order — Black's 'one of the principal ends of marriage is the procreation of children' turned into dystopian law. [Atwood, The Handmaid's Tale, 1985] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Atwood, The Handmaid's Tale, 1985. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROCREATION, p. 960; scan anchor: djvu line 159454 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1985 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's second sentence is the novel's premise made explicit: a regime organized around procreation as marriage's end. Genuine thematic illumination. Marked (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PRODITION

[Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, 1599]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The archetypal treason in the canon — Brutus' intimate betrayal of Caesar: 'Et tu, Brute? Then fall, Caesar.' [Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, 1599] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'Treason; treachery.' The line stages treachery's distinctive sting — betrayal by the trusted intimate. Verbatim-certain, short. Assigned to PRODITION (the act) rather than PRODITOR (the traitor); the neighboring entry left bare to avoid padding. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PROPERTY

[Maxim: "La propriété, c'est le vol!" — Proudhon, 1840]

Who. Maxim: "La propriété [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The entry's famous antithesis — [Maxim: "La propriété, c'est le vol!" ("Property is theft!") — Proudhon, 1840]: the 'exclusive right... to exclude every one else from interfering with it' is precisely what the maxim indicts. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: "La propriété, c'est le vol!" — Proudhon, 1840. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROPERTY, p. 955; scan anchor: djvu line 160329 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1840 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry defines property as the exclusive right to exclude all others. Proudhon's maxim is the canonical counter-gloss on that definition — illumination by antithesis, which the brief permits. Verbatim-certain in the French original; fits the 'classical maxim' slot. Borderline on category (treatise slogan) but genuinely illuminating and honestly attributed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

PROVOCATION

[Shakespeare, Othello, 1604]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Iago's whispering campaign against Desdemona — conduct tending to arouse rage, resentment, and fury in Othello until he does the illegal act: the entry's definition dramatized. [Shakespeare, Othello, 1604] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1604 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: conduct 'tend[ing] to arouse rage, resentment, or fury' causing 'some illegal act.' Othello is the play of exactly that mechanism. Declined quoting the 'green-eyed monster' lines — they're about jealousy, not the provoking conduct; the paraphrase is the honest vehicle. PRUDENCE

[Shakespeare, 1 Henry IV, 1597]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Falstaff's sententious defense of the virtue: 'The better part of valour is discretion.' [Shakespeare, 1 Henry IV, 1597] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, 1 Henry IV, 1597. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRUDENCE, p. 962; scan anchor: djvu line 161668 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1597 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'Carefulness, precaution, attentiveness, and good judgment, as applied to action or conduct.' The line is the canon's famous maxim on discretion-as-prudence set against rash valor. Verbatim-certain. Borderline admitted: Falstaff speaks it as a coward's rationalization, but the sententious form is a genuine maxim on prudence and the comic context is part of the illumination. PUNISHMENT

[Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866]

Who. Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Raskolnikov's true punishment is not Siberia but the conscience that drives him to confess — the novel's argument that the state's inflicted pain is secondary to inward suffering. [Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1866 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'pain, penalty, suffering... inflicted upon a person by the authority of the law... for some crime.' The novel of punishment takes that definition as its question and answers it by contrast — the law's pain vs. the soul's. Marked (paraphrase); no short verbatim-certain English line (translations vary). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Who. Poe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dupin's case turns on a letter stolen in plain sight — 'purloined,' in Poe's title-word, hidden by being left visible. [Poe, 'The Purloined Letter,' 1844] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Poe, 'The Purloined Letter,' 1844. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PURLOIN, p. 967; scan anchor: djvu line 162404 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1844 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'To steal; to commit larceny or theft.' The story's subject is theft itself (the title names the entry's word), and its mechanism — theft by unconcealment — genuinely illustrates the act. When. 1673 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'A pretender to medical skill which he does not possess.' Molière's stage doctors (the Diafoirus) are fiction's canonical quacks — the fiction's subject is the entry's subject. Where. Cited source: Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1400. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUA8TA, p. 971; scan anchor: djvu line 163036 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1400 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. KEY NOTE: chunk headword is the OCR form 'QUA8TA' (= quaesta, 'an indulgence or remission of penance, sold by the pope'); keyed exactly for mergeability. Entry: 'An indulgence or remission of penance, sold by the pope.' The Pardoner's portrait is the entry dramatized — the sold indulgence as literary subject. Marked (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUARANTINE

[Camus, The Plague, 1947]

Who. Camus [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Oran sealed by plague — Camus's quarantined city is the entry's detained vessel written large: authority holding men apart from men against contagion. [Camus, The Plague, 1947] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Camus, The Plague, 1947. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUARANTINE, p. 975; scan anchor: djvu line 163490 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1947 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry's core: detention by authority of those coming from where contagion prevails. The novel's whole premise is that mechanism at city scale. Marked (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUARTERING

[Gibson, Braveheart, 1995]

Who. Gibson [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Wallace's execution at the film's close — hanged, drawn and quartered for high treason: the entry's punishment staged. [Gibson, Braveheart, 1995] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Gibson, Braveheart, 1995. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUARTERING, p. 976; scan anchor: djvu line 163708 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1995 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Entry: 'The dividing a criminal's body into quarters, after execution. A part of the punishment of high treason.' The film's climactic execution is exactly that punishment dramatized. Marked (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUID PEO QUO

[Demme, The Silence of the Lambs, 1991]

Who. Demme [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lecter trades answers for answers — 'something for something' enacted as a bargain: 'Quid pro quo, Clarice.' [Demme, The Silence of the Lambs, 1991] (novel: [Harris, 1988]) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Demme, The Silence of the Lambs, 1991. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUID PEO QUO, p. 981; scan anchor: djvu line 164546 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1991 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. KEY NOTE: chunk headword is the OCR form 'QUID PEO QUO' (= quid pro quo); keyed exactly for mergeability. Entry: 'What for what; something for something... the mutual consideration which passes between the parties to a contract.' The film's famous line is verbatim-certain and stages reciprocal exchange — the entry's sense performed. Novel cited as source of the exchange. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

REBEL

[George Lucas, Star Wars, 1977]

Who. George Lucas [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Star Wars the 'Rebel Alliance' wages organized armed resistance against the Empire's rule — the film's central conflict is the entry's concept (subjects taking up arms against the ruler) played out on screen. The entry's 'unjustly' is the ruler's perspective; the film takes the rebels' side. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: George Lucas, Star Wars, 1977. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REBEL, p. 994; scan anchor: djvu line 166473 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1977 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a rebel as a subject who takes up arms against the ruler/government; the film's Rebel Alliance is the iconic cinematic instance of organized armed resistance against a ruler. Cited as paraphrase, not verbatim, with the perspective caveat stated. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REBELLION

[Victor Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Victor Hugo's novel is built around the June Rebellion of 1832 — students and workers building barricades and taking up arms against the French government: deliberate, organized resistance by force and arms to the laws and operations of the government, exactly the entry's definition. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1862 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The novel's climactic barricade sequence dramatizes the entry's definition verbatim in concept; the historical event is named 'the June Rebellion.' Paraphrase only — no quoted lines. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RAHSOM

[William Shakespeare, Henry IV, Part 1, c.1597]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shakespeare's Henry IV, Part 1 turns on King Henry IV's refusal to ransom Edmund Mortimer, held captive by Owen Glendower — the classic literary instance of ransom as a sum paid to redeem a captive from the hands of an enemy. (Printed headword 'RAHSOM' is the OCR of RANSOM.) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Henry IV, Part 1, c.1597. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RAHSOM, p. 990; scan anchor: djvu line 165883 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1597 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine literary illumination of ransom's core: redemption of a captive from an enemy for a sum paid. Honest caveat: the entry emphasizes captured property (esp. at sea); the play's instance is a captured person. The load-bearing concept — ransom as redemption-price — matches. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RECLUSION

[Victor Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Hugo opens Les Misérables with the bagne of Toulon, where Jean Valjean serves nineteen years of penal confinement at hard labor with civil degradation — the French carceral institution the entry defines (the bagne being reclusion's institutional kin). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1862 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is French/Louisiana penal reclusion; the novel's bagne is its literary embodiment. Stated honestly as institutional kin, not identity. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RECONCILIATION

[William Shakespeare, The Winter's Tale, c.1611]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shakespeare's The Winter's Tale is structured around the entry's concept: after sixteen years of enmity, Leontes is reconciled with Hermione and Perdita — the renewal of amicable relations implying forgiveness of injuries, dramatized in the final statue scene. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, The Winter's Tale, c.1611. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RECONCILIATION, p. 998; scan anchor: djvu line 167129 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1611 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines reconciliation as renewal of amicable relations after enmity, usually implying forgiveness; the play's final act is the canonical dramatic working-out of exactly that. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RECREANT

[Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819]

Who. Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Scott's Ivanhoe stages the medieval trial by combat — the institution the entry's definition hangs on (the cry of the beaten combatant in trial by battel): Rebecca's ordeal and the Ivanhoe–Bois-Guilbert combat are the iconic fictional depiction of that procedure. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RECREANT, p. 1001; scan anchor: djvu line 167589 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1819 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is unintelligible without trial by battle; Ivanhoe is the English novel's definitive dramatization of it. Borderline but genuine — the reasoning rides with the annotation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RECONSTRUCTION

[Margaret Mitchell, Gone with the Wind, 1936]

Who. Margaret Mitchell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Mitchell's Gone with the Wind is set squarely in the Reconstruction era and dramatizes its political machinery — military rule, carpetbaggers, the reorganization of the seceded states' governments — the process the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Margaret Mitchell, Gone with the Wind, 1936. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RECONSTRUCTION, p. 998; scan anchor: djvu line 167141 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1936 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry names the post-Civil-War reorganization of the seceded states; the novel is the best-known fictional treatment of that exact historical process. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REGAL FISH

[Herman Melville, Moby-Dick, 1851]

Who. Herman Melville [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In 'Heads or Tails' (ch. 90) Ishmael works through the English law of captured whales — the whale as a 'royal fish' claimed by the king (the head) and the queen (the tail) — before answering it with his own 'Fast-Fish and Loose-Fish' doctrine. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1851 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The fiction literally litigates the legal entry: Melville has Ishmael cite and then argue against the royal-fish doctrine. The strongest fiction-to-law illumination in this chunk. Paraphrase to avoid verbatim risk. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RED TAPE

[Terry Gilliam, Brazil, 1985]

Who. Terry Gilliam [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Terry Gilliam's film is the entry dramatized: one man's life is crushed by bureaucratic procedure carried to fastidious excess — the dictionary definition ('order carried to fastidious excess; system run out into trivial extremes') is practically the film's logline. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Terry Gilliam, Brazil, 1985. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RED TAPE, p. 1002; scan anchor: djvu line 167850 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1985 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's concept is bureaucratic excess as a system; the film's entire plot is that concept. Genuine film moment illuminating the legal-term usage. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REGICIDE

[William Shakespeare, Macbeth, c.1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shakespeare's Macbeth is the canonical English drama of regicide: Macbeth murders Duncan, his anointed sovereign, and the play turns on the violation of the king's sacred person — the murder of a sovereign and its consequences. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Macbeth, c.1606. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REGICIDE, p. 1007; scan anchor: djvu line 168658 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is the murder of a sovereign; Macbeth is the definitive English literary treatment of that act and its fallout. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RELEGATION

[William Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c.1595]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Romeo and Juliet the Prince banishes Romeo from Verona — a temporary banishment, meant to end when he is recalled — matching the entry's civil-law distinction of banishment 'for a time only.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1595 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry distinguishes temporary relegatio from permanent deportatio; Romeo's exile is the famous literary instance of the temporary form. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REMISSION

[Victor Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Bishop of Digne's forgiveness of Valjean's theft of the silver — releasing the debt of the offense, condoning the injury — is the archetypal literary scene of the entry's 'forgiveness or condonation of an offense or injury' sense. (Third Les Misérables citation in this chunk; the scene is distinct from the reclusion and rebellion annotations.) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1862 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry lists remission as forgiveness/condonation of an offense; the bishop's scene is that sense made narrative. Paraphrase; the repeat-work caveat is stated. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REGULARS

[Umberto Eco, The Name of the Rose, 1980]

Who. Umberto Eco [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Eco's novel is set in a Benedictine monastery whose monks live under the Rule (regula) — poverty, chastity, obedience — the religious-order life the entry defines, made into narrative. The word 'regula' itself is the entry's load-bearing root. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Umberto Eco, The Name of the Rose, 1980. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REGULARS, p. 1009; scan anchor: djvu line 168986 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1980 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines 'regulars' as those following a regula with the three approved vows; the novel dramatizes exactly that community. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RELIQUES

[Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c.1387]

Who. Geoffrey Chaucer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Chaucer's Pardoner carries 'pigges bones' as relics and sells pardons from them — the entry's phenomenon (saints' bones preserved and venerated as sacred memorials) illuminated satirically, including the fraudulent relic economy the statute cited (3 Jac. I c. 26) gestures at. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c.1387. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RELIQUES, p. 25; scan anchor: djvu line 169636 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry names the veneration of saints' remains; Chaucer's Pardoner is the classic literary treatment of the relic trade, honestly noted as spurious rather than genuine veneration — the fraud angle adds light. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REPRIEVE

[Victor Hugo, Le Dernier Jour d'un condamné, 1829]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Hugo's novella is narrated by a condemned man awaiting execution, turning on the hope of a reprieve — the temporary withdrawal/suspension of a death sentence that the entry defines is the novel's entire engine. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1829 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is the suspension of a death sentence; the novella's whole plot is the wait for that suspension. Genuine and direct. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REPUBLIC

[William Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, c.1599]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shakespeare's Julius Caesar dramatizes the Roman Republic's crisis — conspirators claiming to defend a government deriving its powers from the body of citizens against one-man rule — the republican form the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a republic as power derived from the general body of citizens with officers representing the people; the play is the canonical English drama of the Roman Republic and its subversion. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REPUTATION

[William Shakespeare, Othello, c.1603]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Iago: 'Good name in man and woman, dear my lord, / Is the immediate jewel of their souls' — the definitive literary statement of the entry's concept (a person's credit, honor, character, good name), spoken in a play about the destruction of reputations. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1603 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Short verbatim quote (two lines, Shakespeare public domain, lines well-established); the speech is directly about the entry's defined concept. The one verbatim quote in this batch; all others are paraphrases. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

RESCUE

[Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In A Tale of Two Cities Sydney Carton engineers the rescue of Charles Darnay from La Force prison on the eve of execution — forcibly delivering a person from lawful imprisonment and setting him at liberty, the entry's first sense. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RESCUE, p. 1025; scan anchor: djvu line 171708 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1859 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's primary sense is delivering a person from lawful arrest/imprisonment; Carton's plot is the textbook literary instance. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RESCYT

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dickens's Oliver Twist: Fagin's den receives and harbors the boy thieves (the Artful Dodger's crew) after their crimes — the classic literary instance of harboring felons, the entry's definition. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Old French law 'receiving or harboring a felon after the commission of a crime'; Fagin's operation is the archetypal fictional harborer of young criminals. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RESET

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dickens's Oliver Twist again, in the entry's distinct sense: Fagin knowingly receives and keeps the stolen handkerchiefs and watches the boys bring — 'receiving and keeping stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen.' Same work as RESCYT, different facet of the entry. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Scotch 'reset of theft' = knowingly receiving stolen goods; Fagin is the fence. Distinct from RESCYT's harboring-of-persons sense; the dual citation is honest, not padded. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REVOLT

[Frank Lloyd, Mutiny on the Bounty, 1935]

Who. Frank Lloyd [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The 1935 film dramatizes the entry's definition almost word for word: the crew of the Bounty overthrowing the legitimate authority of their commander, Captain Bligh, and taking the vessel by assuming its government. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Frank Lloyd, Mutiny on the Bounty, 1935. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REVOLT, p. 1036; scan anchor: djvu line 173519 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1935 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines maritime revolt as the crew's endeavor to overthrow the commander's authority; the film is the iconic dramatization of that exact fact pattern. Paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RIGHT

[Maxim: "Summum jus, summa injuria" — Cicero, De Officiis]

Who. Maxim: "Summum jus [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The entry defines 'right' in the abstract as justice and ethical correctness — law considered as the foundation of rights rather than bare legal machinery. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Cicero's maxim — 'the strictest law is the greatest injustice' — is the classical warning that right-as-abstract-justice must not collapse into right-as-bare-legal-power; it directly glosses the entry's abstract/concrete distinction. Certain verbatim; public domain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

RIGHT

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c.1596]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "The quality of mercy is not strain'd, / It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven" [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1596 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Portia's speech sets mercy above strict right — the literary counterpart of the entry's claim that 'right' in the abstract answers to justice and moral correctness. Certain verbatim; public domain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

BIGOB JURIS

[Maxim: "Summum jus, summa injuria" — Cicero, De Officiis]

Who. Maxim: "Summum jus [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Strictness of law, distinguished in the entry from gratia curiae (favor of the court). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: "Summum jus, summa injuria" — Cicero, De Officiis. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry BIGOB JURIS, p. 1041; scan anchor: djvu line 174259 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The maxim glosses the entry's own contrast: strictness of law pressed without the court's favor becomes the greatest injustice. Certain verbatim; public domain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

BIGOB JURIS

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c.1596]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shylock demands his pound of flesh 'according to the bond' — the stage's purest image of rigor juris, strictness of law pressed to the letter, and defeated in the play only by still-stricter literalism. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1596 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Paraphrase of a famous, certain plot point; marked as paraphrase. Directly illustrates the entry: law's strictness wielded as a weapon. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RIGGING THE MARKET

[Martin Scorsese, The Wolf of Wall Street, 2013]

Who. Martin Scorsese [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The film follows stockbrokers who inflate the price of worthless stocks through orchestrated fraud — the screen-era image of rigging a market by feigned demand. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

[basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2013 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuinely illuminates the human mechanism of the entry (feigned demand, deceitful dealing). Honest limit: the film's signature scheme is pump-and-dump via cold-calling, not the entry's specific 'pretended purchases' technique; it illustrates the kind, not the identical technique. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RING-DROPPING

[George Roy Hill, The Sting, 1973]

Who. George Roy Hill [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) A film about confidence men running an elaborate con — the ring-in-paper trick described in the entry belongs to the same family of short cons. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: George Roy Hill, The Sting, 1973. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RING-DROPPING, p. 1041; scan anchor: djvu line 174279 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1973 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Illuminates the kind (confidence trickery) rather than the identical technique — the film depicts a long con, not this exact trick; noted honestly rather than pretending identity. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RIXATRIX

[William Shakespeare, The Taming of the Shrew, c.1592]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shakespeare's comedy centers on Katherina, the 'shrew' — the stage's most famous scold, wedded and tamed into obedience. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, The Taming of the Shrew, c.1592. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RIXATRIX, p. 1042; scan anchor: djvu line 174561 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1592 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry names a legal category (the scold); the play is the culture's canonical image of that very category — genuinely illuminating the human concept behind the law. Paraphrase marked; no invented quote. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ROBERDSMEN

[Robin Hood ballads, e.g. A Gest of Robyn Hode, c.1450]

Who. Robin Hood ballads [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The outlaw ballads present Robin Hood and his men as forest outlaws defying the sheriff — the legendary root the entry itself invokes for the name 'Roberdesmen.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Robin Hood ballads, e.g. A Gest of Robyn Hode, c.1450. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ROBERDSMEN, p. 1042; scan anchor: djvu line 174722 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1450 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry derives the term from the Robin Hood legend, so the legend is the genuine link. Attribution to the ballad tradition; no invented quote. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

ROMA PEDIT2E

[Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c.1387–1400]

Who. Geoffrey Chaucer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Whan that Aprill with his shoures soote / The droghte of March hath perced to the roote" — the General Prologue opens on the season when folk long to go on pilgrimages. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c.1387–1400. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ROMA PEDIT2E, p. 1044; scan anchor: djvu line 174896 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1400 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Chaucer is the canonical literary pilgrimage; illuminates the human reality of medieval pilgrimage behind the legal term. Honest limit: his pilgrims ride to Canterbury, not walk to Rome — the link is the pilgrimage frame, not the identical journey. Verbatim certain; public domain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

BOHAN LAW

[Maxim: "Salus populi suprema lex esto" — Cicero, De Legibus]

Who. Maxim: "Salus populi suprema lex esto" — Cicero [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [STRING_PLACEHOLDER_1] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: "Salus populi suprema lex esto" — Cicero, De Legibus. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry BOHAN LAW, p. 1046; scan anchor: djvu line 174922 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines Roman law as a system; Cicero's maxim states the system's animating purpose as the Romans themselves conceived it. Certain verbatim; public domain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

ROUND-ROBIN

[Arthurian legend, e.g. Sir Thomas Malory, Le Morte d'Arthur, 1485]

Who. Arthurian legend [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Round Table at which no knight sat in the place of precedence — the legendary root the entry itself names for the circular signature form. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1485 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry derives the device from Arthur's round table, so the legend is the genuine link. Paraphrase marked; no invented quote. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RUMOR

[Virgil, Aeneid, Book IV]

Who. Virgil [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Fama, malum qua non aliud velocius ullum" — 'Rumor — than whom no other evil is swifter.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Virgil, Aeneid, Book IV. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RUMOR, p. 1047; scan anchor: djvu line 175383 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The classical image of rumor as a swift, self-spreading evil directly illuminates the entry's 'flying report... without any known authority for the truth of it.' Certain verbatim; public domain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

RUSE DE GUERRE

[Virgil, Aeneid, Book II]

Who. Virgil [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The wooden horse by which the Greeks took Troy — the archetypal ruse de guerre, the stratagem the French term names. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Virgil, Aeneid, Book II. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RUSE DE GUERRE, p. 1048; scan anchor: djvu line 175537 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines the bare concept; the Trojan horse is the culture's archetype of the war-stratagem. Certain plot point; marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SACRILEGE

[Victor Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Jean Valjean steals the Bishop of Digne's silver — vessels of sacred use — and the bishop, rather than prosecuting, presses the candlesticks on him as well. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Victor Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SACRILEGE, p. 1051 (page anchor suspect — Brick 21 §D); scan anchor: djvu line 175813 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1862 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Depicts the very crime the entry defines (theft of things dedicated to sacred uses) and its moral inversion through grace. Certain plot point; no invented quote. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SAGAMAN

[William Shakespeare, Othello, c.1603]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Iago, the ensign who poisons Othello's mind by secret insinuation — the stage's archetypal tale-teller and secret accuser. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

SALADINE TENTH

[Sir Walter Scott, The Talisman, 1825]

Who. Sir Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Scott's novel gives English literature its canonical Saladin — the very sultan against whom this tenth funded Richard I's crusade. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sir Walter Scott, The Talisman, 1825. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SALADINE TENTH, p. 1052; scan anchor: djvu line 176043 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1825 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuinely illuminates the historical circumstance the tax was levied for. Certain work/author/year; no invented quote. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SAXE

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The maxim belongs to the entry's subject (the contract of sale) and illuminates the buyer's position in it. Certain; public domain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

SALIC LAW

[William Shakespeare, Henry V, c.1599]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Archbishop of Canterbury's opening exposition parses the Salic law — 'no woman shall succeed in Salique land' — to ground Henry's claim to France. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Henry V, c.1599. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SALIC LAW, p. 1054; scan anchor: djvu line 176342 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The play stages the very legal argument the entry describes (exclusion of females from succession). Certain famous scene; marked paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

When. 1945 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Orwell's fable takes the entry's defined aim — 'absolute equality in the distribution of the physical means of life' — and shows it betrayed from within; the famous line glosses the definition satirically. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

SOMNAMBULISM

[Shakespeare, Macbeth, c. 1606]

When. 1596 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The Prince of Morocco chooses the gold casket expecting value and finds a skull (II.vii): speculation on apparent worth, punished — glossing the entry's 'buying in expectation of a rise of price'. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

SPENDTHRIFT

[Aesop, Fables, c. 6th c. BCE]

Who. Aesop [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Aesop's grasshopper sings away the summer while the ant stores grain, and starves when winter comes. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Aesop, Fables, c. 6th c. BCE. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SPENDTHRIFT, p. 1101; scan anchor: djvu line 184221 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The fable archetype of the entry's waster — one who by idleness and excess lessens his estate until want follows. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SPINSTER

[Charles Dickens, Great Expectations, 1861]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Miss Havisham, jilted at the altar, sits ever after in her rotting wedding dress, unmarried. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The locus classicus of the maxim the entry itself quotes (via Hobart): insistence on the full rigor of strict right works the greatest injury unless equity aids. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

SUNDAY

[Hugh Hudson, Chariots of Fire, 1981]

Who. Hugh Hudson [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Eric Liddell refuses to run his Olympic heat because it falls on the Sabbath. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Hugh Hudson, Chariots of Fire, 1981. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUNDAY, p. 1123; scan anchor: djvu line 187827 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1981 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Dramatizes Lord's-Day observance — the entry's sense of Sunday as the Sabbath. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SUPPLIANT

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Please, sir, I want some more. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The archetypal literary supplication — one preferring a petition, as the entry defines the suppliant. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

SURNAME

[Shakespeare, Romeo and Juliet, c. 1595]

What. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Shakespeare, Henry VI, Part 3, c. 1591. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUSPICION, p. 1129; scan anchor: djvu line 188966 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1591 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. States the entry's definition exactly — imagination of something ill, distrust, mistrust, doubt. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

SUUM OUIQUE TRIBUERE

[Justinian, Institutes, 533]

Who. Justinian [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: To render to every one his own.] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Justinian, Institutes, 533. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SUUM OUIQUE TRIBUERE, p. 1130; scan anchor: djvu line 189009 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. One of the three fundamental maxims of the law laid down by Justinian (Inst. 1.1.3), as the entry states — the classical-wisdom source of the headword itself. (Headword key kept in the chunk's OCR form.) [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

SWINDLING

[George Roy Hill, The Sting, 1973]

Who. George Roy Hill [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Two con men run an elaborate swindle on a mark who cannot go to the law. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: George Roy Hill, The Sting, 1973. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SWINDLING, p. 1130; scan anchor: djvu line 189084 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1973 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The film archetype of the entry's definition — cheating and defrauding grossly with deliberate artifice. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SWORN BROTHERS

[Luo Guanzhong, Romance of the Three Kingdoms, 14th c.]

Who. Luo Guanzhong [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In the peach garden, Liu Bei, Guan Yu, and Zhang Fei swear mutual oaths to share one fortune, living and dying together. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. Matches the entry's definition nearly word for word: persons who by mutual oaths covenant to share in each other's fortunes. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SYNDICATE

[Francis Ford Coppola, The Godfather, 1972]

Who. Francis Ford Coppola [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Corleone family operates as a combination — a crime syndicate — bound to enterprises too large for any one man. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Francis Ford Coppola, The Godfather, 1972. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SYNDICATE, p. 1131; scan anchor: djvu line 189213 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1972 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The popular-culture archetype of the combination; the criminal sense is colloquial, but it illuminates the entry's core — a combination of persons united for an enterprise. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TABARD

[Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1387-1400]

Who. Geoffrey Chaucer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Chaucer's pilgrims gather at the Tabard Inn in Southwark — named for the herald's coat on its sign — before riding for Canterbury. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1387-1400. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TABARD, p. 1132; scan anchor: djvu line 189313 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1400 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The famous literary inn named for the garment the entry defines. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TAVERNER

[Shakespeare, Henry IV, Part 1, c. 1597]

Who. Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Mistress Quickly keeps the Boar's Head Tavern in Eastcheap, pouring sack for Falstaff and Prince Hal. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

TEMERE

[Maxim: Festina lente ('make haste slowly') — motto of Augustus, Suetonius, Aug. 25]

Who. OPEN — citation carries no separable author segment

What. The civil-law vice of rash litigation meets its classical antidote. [Maxim: Festina lente — 'make haste slowly,' motto of Augustus, recorded by Suetonius, Lives of the Caesars, Aug. 25] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Festina lente ('make haste slowly') — motto of Augustus, Suetonius, Aug. 25. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TEMERE, p. 1140; scan anchor: djvu line 190700 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. TEMERE is rash, inconsiderate action — the plaintiff who 'temere litigat' sues without just cause. Festina lente counsels the opposite virtue (deliberation), so the maxim frames the entry by naming what the rash litigant lacks. Certain attribution; format follows the [Maxim: text] convention. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TEMPEST

[William Shakespeare, The Tempest, 1611]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Full fathom five thy father lies; / Of his bones are coral made;" [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, The Tempest, 1611. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TEMPEST, p. 1140; scan anchor: djvu line 190708 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1611 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a violent storm as treated in marine-insurance cases (Stover v. Insurance Co. cited). Ariel's song (Act 1, sc. 2) is English literature's most famous tempest-at-sea image — a shipwreck's aftermath — so it illustrates the entry's phenomenon in its home domain. Two lines, verbatim-certain; public-domain text, short quote. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

THANE

[William Shakespeare, Macbeth, 1606]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Glamis!" [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Macbeth, 1606. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry THANE, p. 1151; scan anchor: djvu line 192568 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1606 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: an Anglo-Saxon nobleman's title, disused after the Conquest. The Witches' greeting (Act 1, sc. 3) opens the play on exactly this live title in 11th-century Scotland — it shows the reader what a thane WAS. One line, verbatim-certain. THEFT

[Victor Hugo, Les Misérables, 1862]

Who. Victor Hugo [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Hugo's Les Misérables, Jean Valjean repays the bishop of Digne's shelter by stealing his silver in the night and is caught with it — the archetypal literary theft of another man's movable goods, undone only by the bishop's claiming it was a gift. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1862 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's elements — 'unlawful felonious taking away of another man's movable and personal goods against the will of the owner' — map exactly onto Valjean's theft of the bishop's silver, the most famous theft scene in world literature. Quote not verbatim-certain, so marked (paraphrase); plot facts certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

THEOCRACY

[Margaret Atwood, The Handmaid's Tale, 1985]

Who. Margaret Atwood [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Atwood's Republic of Gilead — a state governed by men claiming to execute God's immediate direction — the modern canonical fictional theocracy, the entry's definition as dystopia. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Margaret Atwood, The Handmaid's Tale, 1985. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry THEOCRACY, p. 1162; scan anchor: djvu line 192714 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1985 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'Government of a state by the immediate direction of God... or the state thus governed.' Gilead is the most widely recognized fictional theocracy; it illuminates the entry by showing the concept in operation. Premise certain; no verbatim quote, so (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TICKET

[Roald Dahl, Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, 1964]

Who. Roald Dahl [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dahl's golden ticket: a slip of paper entitling its holder to enter the chocolate factory — the ticket-as-right in its purest fictional form. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Roald Dahl, Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, 1964. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TICKET, p. 1164; scan anchor: djvu line 193137 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1964 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a ticket as 'a slip of paper containing a certificate that the person... is entitled to some right or privilege therein mentioned.' The golden ticket is the cultural archetype of exactly that. Certain; (paraphrase) as no verbatim line was quoted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TIDE

[William Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, 1599]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "There is a tide in the affairs of men, / Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;" [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'The ebb and flow of the sea.' Brutus's speech (Act 4, sc. 3) is the canonical literary treatment of the flood tide — it teaches the reader what a tide IS even as metaphor. Two lines, verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

TIMOCRACY

[Plato, Republic, c. 375 BC]

Who. Plato [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Plato's second regime in the Republic (Book 8): the timocracy, modeled on Sparta, where rule falls to men of property and honor, honor giving way to the love of wealth — the entry's word is Plato's own word. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Plato, Republic, c. 375 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TIMOCRACY, p. 1156; scan anchor: djvu line 193378 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry's concept comes straight from Plato's five-regime sequence; citing the source of the term illuminates it. No verbatim maxim certain, so (paraphrase); Book 8 placement certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TOLERATION

[Voltaire, Treatise on Tolerance, 1763]

Who. Voltaire [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Voltaire's Treatise on Tolerance — the Enlightenment's canonical plea that the state allow religious opinions and worship contrary to the established church; counted here under 'classical wisdom' as philosophy. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Voltaire, Treatise on Tolerance, 1763. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TOLERATION, p. 1159; scan anchor: djvu line 193974 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1763 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines toleration as state allowance of dissenting worship; Voltaire's treatise is the canonical philosophical text on exactly that subject, so it illuminates the entry directly. Attribution and year certain; filed as philosophy under classical wisdom with the reasoning stated. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TOLLBOOTH

[Sir Walter Scott, The Heart of Mid-Lothian, 1818]

Who. Sir Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Scott's The Heart of Mid-Lothian — named for Edinburgh's Old Tolbooth — opens with the Porteous mob storming the Tolbooth prison; the entry's first gloss ('a prison') made fiction. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sir Walter Scott, The Heart of Mid-Lothian, 1818. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TOLLBOOTH, p. 1160; scan anchor: djvu line 194070 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1818 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's first definition of tollbooth is 'a prison.' Scott's novel is titled for the Edinburgh Tolbooth and centers on it; the historical identification is certain. (paraphrase); no quote needed. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TONTINE

[Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osbourne, The Wrong Box, 1889]

Who. Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osbourne [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Stevenson's The Wrong Box: the last survivors of a tontine scheme, each maneuvering to outlive the other and take the fund — the entry's 'shares of those who die shall accrue to the survivors' as comic murder-plot. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osbourne, The Wrong Box, 1889. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TONTINE, p. 1161; scan anchor: djvu line 194227 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1889 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the tontine's survivor-takes-all structure; The Wrong Box is the canonical novel built on exactly that structure. Certain; (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TORTURE

[George Orwell, Nineteen Eighty-Four, 1949]

Who. George Orwell [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Orwell's Room 101 — the state's personalized torture chamber, where each prisoner faces 'the worst thing in the world' until broken — modern fiction's canonical image of judicial torture as interrogation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1949 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: infliction of violent bodily pain 'under judicial sanction... in connection with the interrogation.' Room 101 is precisely torture-as-interrogation by the state; it illuminates the entry's mechanism. Certain; (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TOUCHING A DEAD BODY

[William Shakespeare, Richard III, 1593]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "O, gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds / Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afresh!" [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Richard III, 1593. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TOUCHING A DEAD BODY, p. 1162; scan anchor: djvu line 194497 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1593 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry describes cruentation — the superstition that a murdered man's body bleeds afresh at his murderer's touch, used in old criminal law to test guilt. Lady Anne speaks these lines over Henry VI's corpse as Richard approaches (Act 1, sc. 2): the ordeal staged. Two lines, verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

TRAITOR

[Dante Alighieri, Inferno, c. 1320]

Who. Dante Alighieri [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dante plants the traitors — Brutus, Cassius, and Judas — frozen in the ice of Hell's innermost circle (Canto 34): betrayal of trust as the worst of sins, the entry's definition as cosmology. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Dante Alighieri, Inferno, c. 1320. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TRAITOR, p. 1166; scan anchor: djvu line 195127 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry: 'One who, being trusted, betrays.' Dante's lowest circle is reserved exactly for traitors — those who betrayed trust — which illuminates the entry's moral weight. Certain; (paraphrase). One carrier for the concept; TRADITOR left bare by design. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By paraphrase — the phase data marks this insert '(paraphrase)'; it renders the cited work's matter, not its words [basis: phase-data paraphrase mark]

Who. Geoffrey Chaucer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Chaucer's pilgrims gather at the Tabard Inn — the inn-guest travelers whose tales fill the Canterbury Tales; the entry's 'traveler' (one who patronizes inns) as literature's frame device. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1400. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TRAVELER, p. 1169; scan anchor: djvu line 195547 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1400 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines traveler broadly as 'those who patronize inns.' The Canterbury Tales' frame is precisely a company of travelers lodging at an inn — the most famous literary inn-guests. Certain; (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TREASON

[Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dickens's A Tale of Two Cities stages a treason trial: Charles Darnay prosecuted at the Old Bailey for betraying England to France — the entry's 'betraying the state into the hands of a foreign power' as courtroom drama. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities, 1859. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TREASON, p. 1169; scan anchor: djvu line 195642 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1859 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's second clause maps exactly onto Darnay's prosecution. The treason trial is a set piece of the novel; facts certain. (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TRIAL

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The trial of Tom Robinson in Lee's To Kill a Mockingbird — Atticus Finch's doomed defense before a jury — the American novel's canonical trial, the entry's 'examination before a competent tribunal' as moral center. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TRIAL, p. 1172; scan anchor: djvu line 196050 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines trial as judicial examination of issues put in a cause. The Robinson trial is the defining fictional trial in American letters; it illuminates the concept directly. Certain; (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TRIBUNAL

[Franz Kafka, The Trial, 1925]

Who. Franz Kafka [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Kafka's The Trial: Josef K. arrested and processed by a tribunal whose law he can never see — the court, 'the seat of a judge,' as labyrinth. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Franz Kafka, The Trial, 1925. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TRIBUNAL, p. 1173; scan anchor: djvu line 196277 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1925 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'The seat of a judge; the place where he administers justice; a judicial court.' Kafka's novel is the canonical literary tribunal — it shows the tribunal from the judged side. Certain; (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TRUCE

[Christian Carion, Joyeux Noël, 2005]

Who. Christian Carion [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Carion's Joyeux Noël dramatizes the 1914 Christmas Truce — British, French, and German soldiers suspending hostilities by tacit agreement in no-man's-land; the entry's 'temporary cessation of hostilities by agreement' filmed. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Christian Carion, Joyeux Noël, 2005. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TRUCE, p. 1175; scan anchor: djvu line 196552 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2005 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines a truce as suspension of hostilities by agreement between belligerents. The Christmas Truce is the iconic historical truce, and Joyeux Noël (2005) is its best-known film treatment. Certain; (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

TUTELAGE

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) In Dickens's Oliver Twist, Mr. Brownlow takes the orphan Oliver as his ward — guardianship as rescue; the entry's 'state of being under a guardian' in fiction. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'Guardianship; state of being under a guardian.' Brownlow is literally Oliver's guardian — the relationship the entry names. Certain; (paraphrase). One carrier for the guardianship concept; TUTOR, TUTRIX, TUTEUR, TUTORSHIP, UNDER-TUTOR left bare by design. TYRANT

[Maxim: Sic semper tyrannis ('thus always to tyrants')]

Who. Maxim: Sic semper tyrannis ('thus always to tyrants') [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The ancient verdict on the tyrant. [Maxim: Sic semper tyrannis — 'thus always to tyrants,' traditionally ascribed to Brutus at the assassination of Julius Caesar, 44 BC] [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Sic semper tyrannis ('thus always to tyrants'). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TYRANT, p. 1180; scan anchor: djvu line 197487 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines the tyrant as the ruler who uses power 'unjustly and arbitrarily, to the oppression of his subjects.' The maxim states the tyrant's fate — it illuminates the entry by naming the classical answer to tyranny. The Brutus ascription is traditional (flagged as such); the maxim itself is certain. One carrier; TYRANNY left bare. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

UNCLE

[William Shakespeare, Hamlet, c. 1601]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Claudius in Hamlet — the uncle who murders his brother the king and marries the widowed queen; the wicked uncle of English drama, the defining literary uncle. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1601 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is the bare kinship definition ('the brother of one's father or mother'). Claudius is the most famous uncle in literature; he illuminates the word's dramatic charge. Certain; (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UNCONSCIONABLE BARGAIN

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1597]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shylock's bond in The Merchant of Venice — a pound of the merchant's flesh for a defaulted loan; the stage's archetype of the bargain 'which no fair and honest man would accept.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, c. 1597. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UNCONSCIONABLE BARGAIN, p. 1183; scan anchor: djvu line 197951 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1597 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's definition — a contract 'which no fair and honest man would accept' — maps point-for-point onto the pound-of-flesh bond. The canonical literary unconscionable bargain. Certain; (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UNDUE INFLUENCE

[George du Maurier, Trilby, 1894]

Who. George du Maurier [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Du Maurier's Svengali mesmerizing Trilby into obedience — the cultural archetype of one will overpowering another, matching the entry's own phrase 'overpowering the will.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: George du Maurier, Trilby, 1894. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UNDUE INFLUENCE, p. 1185; scan anchor: djvu line 198165 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1894 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines undue influence as 'persuasion carried to the point of overpowering the will.' Svengali is the popular image of exactly that domination. Certain; (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UNWHOLESOME FOOD

[Upton Sinclair, The Jungle, 1906]

Who. Upton Sinclair [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Sinclair's The Jungle exposes the Chicago packinghouses — diseased and adulterated meat sold as food — the novel that made 'unwholesome food' a national scandal and, in 1906, a statute. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Upton Sinclair, The Jungle, 1906. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UNWHOLESOME FOOD, p. 1188; scan anchor: djvu line 198750 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1906 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry: 'Food not fit to be eaten; food which if eaten would be injurious.' The Jungle is the novel about exactly this; it led to the Pure Food and Drug Act. Certain; (paraphrase). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

UNWRITTEN LAW

[Sophocles, Antigone, c. 441 BC]

Who. Sophocles [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Sophocles's Antigone defies Creon's edict by appeal to the gods' unwritten, everlasting laws — the unwritten law as higher than the king's decree; the entry's concept as tragedy. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sophocles, Antigone, c. 441 BC. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UNWRITTEN LAW, p. 1188; scan anchor: djvu line 198754 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines unwritten law as law 'not enacted or promulgated in the form of a statute.' Antigone's defense IS this concept — the canonical treatment of unwritten law in all literature. Certain; (paraphrase) since no English rendering is verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

THEATEH

[William Shakespeare, As You Like It, 1599]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "All the world's a stage, / And all the men and women merely players;" [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, As You Like It, 1599. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry THEATEH, p. 1151; scan anchor: djvu line 192606 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1599 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is the legal definition of the theater edifice (buildings for plays and performances). Jaques' speech (Act 2, sc. 7) is the canonical English statement of what a stage and its players are — the concept the legal term governs. Two lines, verbatim-certain. [Coordinator key-fix 2026-10-18: worker keyed this under 'THEATER'; corrected to the chunk's exact headword 'THEATEH' (OCR form). THESAURUS, THESAURIUM

[Robert Louis Stevenson, Treasure Island, 1883]

Who. Robert Louis Stevenson [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Fifteen men on the dead man's chest — / Yo-ho-ho, and a bottle of rum!" [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Robert Louis Stevenson, Treasure Island, 1883. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry THESAURUS, THESAURIUM, p. 1162; scan anchor: djvu line 192743 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1883 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's subdivisions — thesaurus absconditus (treasure hidden or buried) and thesaurus inventus (treasure found, treasure-trove) — are exactly the buried-pirate-treasure economy of Treasure Island, sung in Billy Bones's shanty. Two lines, verbatim-certain. One carrier for the treasure concept; TREASURE and TREASURE-TROVE left bare by design. TITIU8

[Frank Capra, Meet John Doe, 1941]

Who. Frank Capra [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Capra's film invents a 'John Doe' — an anonymous everyman whose protest letter is fabricated by a newspaper — the fictitious-person device of the entry, made into the plot. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Frank Capra, Meet John Doe, 1941. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TITIU8, p. 1157; scan anchor: djvu line 193568 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1941 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry states outright that 'Titius' and 'Seius' 'correspond to "John Doe" and "Richard Roe."' A famous film literally titled Meet John Doe dramatizes the invented everyman — the direct fictional realization of the entry's device. Certain; (paraphrase). ULTIMA BATIO

[Maxim: Ultima ratio regum ('the last argument of kings')]

Who. Maxim: Ultima ratio regum ('the last argument of kings') [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. [Maxim: Ultima ratio regum — 'the last argument of kings,' cast on the cannon of Louis XIV] — war as the final argument, the entry's 'last resort' in its most famous historical use. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Ultima ratio regum ('the last argument of kings'). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ULTIMA BATIO, p. 1182; scan anchor: djvu line 197764 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry: 'The last argument; the last resort; the means last to be resorted to.' The phrase's famous inscription on Louis XIV's cannon is its canonical use — the last argument made literal. Certain. [Coordinator key-fix 2026-10-18: worker keyed this under 'ULTIMA RATIO'; corrected to the chunk's exact headword 'ULTIMA BATIO' (OCR form). USURPATION

[William Shakespeare, Richard II, 1595]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Shakespeare's Richard II stages the deposition of a lawful king — the usurpation of sovereign power in derogation of the lawful ruler that this entry defines. John of Gaunt's lament for the seized realm: "This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England" (Act 2, Sc. 1). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1595 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines usurpation in public law as the unlawful seizure of sovereign power in derogation of the constitution and the rights of the lawful ruler; Richard II is the canonical dramatization of exactly that — Bolingbroke's seizure of the crown. Gaunt's line is verbatim to my confidence, one line, and mourns the realm being taken. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

USURY

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, 1600]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The usury economy in its classic fictional form: Shylock's lending at interest and the forfeit-of-flesh bond. His boundary-line to Antonio — "I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following, but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you" (Act 1, Sc. 3) — marks the usurer's social position at the edge of the community he lends to. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, 1600. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry USURY, p. 1192; scan anchor: djvu line 199357 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1600 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines usury as unlawful interest beyond the legal rate; the play is the archetypal dramatization of early-modern lending-at-interest and its moral status. The Shylock quote is verbatim to my confidence and speaks directly to the moneylender's place in the moral economy. UTLAGATUS

[Robin Hood ballads, English tradition]

Who. Robin Hood ballads [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Robin Hood ballads embody the outlaw's legal status this entry states — "put out of the protection of the law," bearing "the head of a wolf" (caput gerit lupinum): Robin Hood lives beyond the law's protection, the wolfshead in narrative form. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Robin Hood ballads, English tradition. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UTLAGATUS, p. 1193; scan anchor: djvu line 199535 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry's own maxim makes the outlaw one who bears the wolf's head; the ballad tradition is the genuine popular embodiment of that legal condition. No single author/year exists for the tradition, so it is cited honestly as a tradition rather than inventing an attribution. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VAGRANT

[John Steinbeck, Of Mice and Men, 1937]

Who. John Steinbeck [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Steinbeck's bindle stiffs — George and Lennie riding the rails between ranch jobs, with no fixed residence — are the vagrant condition in American fiction: able-bodied wanderers living job to job, matching the entry's "no visible means of support" and "roams about from place to place." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: John Steinbeck, Of Mice and Men, 1937. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VAGRANT, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 199857 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1937 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the vagrant as an able-bodied wanderer without visible support or fixed residence; the novel's itinerant ranch hands are the genuine fictional embodiment of that condition. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VALUABLE CONSIDERATION

[William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, 1600]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Shylock's loan of 3,000 ducats on the bond of a pound of flesh — the bond as the consideration: a thing of value parted with, and a new obligation assumed, in exchange for the loan, "substantial compensation for that which is obtained." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, 1600. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VALUABLE CONSIDERATION, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 199966 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1600 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Deliberately distinct from the USURY annotation (the interest economy): this targets the entry's doctrine — consideration as the thing parted with. The bond is literally the consideration for the 3,000 ducats. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VAPIAKE DUELLUM

[Sir Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819]

Who. Sir Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Ivanhoe's climax is a judicial trial by combat — Ivanhoe championing Rebecca against Bois-Guilbert — the wager of battle as a mode of trial, pledges given mutually for the duel exactly as the entry describes. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sir Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VAPIAKE DUELLUM, p. 1195; scan anchor: djvu line 199777 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1819 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the waging of the duellum — giving mutual pledges for trial by combat; Ivanhoe's judicial combat is the classic fictional instance of wager of battle deciding a legal accusation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VASSAL

[Sir Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819]

Who. Sir Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Ivanhoe's Norman-Saxon order runs on vassalage — sworn men holding lands of lords in return for feudal service, the lord/vassal correlative the entry states. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sir Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VASSAL, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 200110 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1819 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the vassal as the feudal tenant bound to feudal services, correlative to lord; the novel's whole social order is that tenure system in narrative form. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VEHMGEBICKT

[Sir Walter Scott, Anne of Geierstein, 1829]

Who. Sir Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Scott's Anne of Geierstein stages the Vehmgericht — the secret tribunal of Westphalia, its hooded judges trying and executing in secret — the institution this cross-reference points to. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sir Walter Scott, Anne of Geierstein, 1829. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VEHMGEBICKT, p. 1196; scan anchor: djvu line 200192 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1829 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry is a pointer to Fehmgericht (the secret tribunal); the novel is the classic fiction in which the Vehmgericht operates as a judicial institution. Attribution and year confident. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

When. 1957 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The film is literally about veniremen performing the office the entry defines — jurors summoned to decide the truth of the matter. The quote is verbatim to my confidence and states the weight of the venireman's function. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

VERDICT

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The jury's guilty verdict against Tom Robinson in To Kill a Mockingbird — returned despite Atticus's demolition of the prosecution's evidence — the formal, unanimous decision of the jury as the entry defines it, and what such a decision can cost. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VERDICT, p. 1202; scan anchor: djvu line 200827 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the verdict as the formal unanimous decision of the jury upon the matters submitted; the novel's verdict scene is the archetypal dramatization of a jury's decision and its moral weight. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VILLEIN

[Sir Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819]

Who. Sir Walter Scott [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Gurth the swineherd in Ivanhoe — born thrall to Cedric of Rotherwood, wearing the brass collar of serfdom — the villein "substantially in the condition of a slave," a subject of property, as the entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sir Walter Scott, Ivanhoe, 1819. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VILLEIN, p. 1208; scan anchor: djvu line 201929 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1819 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the villein as attached to the manor, in most respects a subject of property; Gurth is the classic fictional villein, collared and transferable. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VIVA VOCE

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Atticus Finch's cross-examination of Mayella and Bob Ewell at Tom Robinson's trial — witnesses examined viva voce, by the living voice, their testimony tested orally before the jury rather than taken on affidavit. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VIVA VOCE, p. 1211; scan anchor: djvu line 202413 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. Distinct from VERDICT (the jury's decision) and ZEALOUS WITNESS (partiality): this targets the entry's concept — oral examination of witnesses as opposed to evidence on affidavits or depositions. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

VOTE

[Sarah Gavron, Suffragette, 2015]

Who. Sarah Gavron [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Suffragette dramatizes the fight to become qualified electors — the women's suffrage struggle for the very "voice or suffrage" this entry defines. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Sarah Gavron, Suffragette, 2015. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VOTE, p. 1213; scan anchor: djvu line 202721 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2015 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the vote as the formally manifested expression of will by qualified electors; the film dramatizes the historical fight to attain that qualification. Year confident. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WAGES

[Herman Melville, Moby-Dick, 1851]

Who. Herman Melville [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Pequod's crew serve not for wages but for "lays" — shares in the voyage's proceeds, Ishmael signing for the 300th lay — the seaman's compensation system that the maritime branch of this entry points to. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Herman Melville, Moby-Dick, 1851. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WAGES, p. 1215; scan anchor: djvu line 202990 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1851 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry's maritime branch defines wages as the seaman's compensation for services during a voyage; the novel's lay system is the genuine fictional treatment of how whalemen were actually compensated — shares, not wages. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WAR

[Maxim: Si vis pacem, para bellum (Vegetius, De Re Militari)]

Who. Maxim: Si vis pacem [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The classical maxim of war as policy: "Si vis pacem, para bellum" — if you want peace, prepare for war — the Roman military doctrine that peace is secured through readiness for armed contention. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Maxim: Si vis pacem, para bellum (Vegetius, De Re Militari). Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WAR, p. 1217; scan anchor: djvu line 203318 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines war as armed contest between nations; the Vegetius maxim is the classical wisdom on war as an instrument of policy. Maxim and attribution confident. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

WARDEN

[Anthony Trollope, The Warden, 1855]

Who. Anthony Trollope [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Septimus Harding, Warden of Hiram's Hospital in Trollope's The Warden — the guardian-keeper of a charitable foundation, whose right to his office's income is the novel's whole legal-moral question. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Anthony Trollope, The Warden, 1855. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WARDEN, p. 1218; scan anchor: djvu line 203526 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1855 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the warden as a guardian/keeper, the name of various officers; Harding's wardenship of an ecclesiastical charity — and the attack on its revenues — is the direct fictional embodiment. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WATCH AND WARD

[William Shakespeare, Much Ado About Nothing, 1598]

Who. William Shakespeare [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Dogberry's charge to the night-watch in Much Ado About Nothing — "If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by virtue of your office, to be no true man" (Act 3, Sc. 3) — the watch's duty to keep guard and apprehend, played as comedy by the very men who end up catching the villains. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: William Shakespeare, Much Ado About Nothing, 1598. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WATCH AND WARD, p. 1222; scan anchor: djvu line 204138 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1598 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines watch (by night) and ward (by day) as keeping guard; Dogberry's Watch is the classic fictional night-watch, and the quote — verbatim to my confidence — states their office. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

WEREGELT THEF

[Beowulf, c. 1000]

Who. Beowulf [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Beowulf's feud economy runs on wergild — Hrothgar tells Beowulf he settled Ecgtheow's feud with the Wulfings by paying the blood-price — the compensation for homicide the entry defines, apportioned among king, lord, and kin and scaled to rank. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Beowulf, c. 1000. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WEREGELT THEF, p. 1225; scan anchor: djvu line 204693 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. OPEN — no year in citation or insert text

Why. The entry defines wergild as the price of homicide paid to king, lord, and next of kin; the poem's feud-settlements are the genuine literary record of that compensation system in operation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WHALE

[Herman Melville, Moby-Dick, 1851]

Who. Herman Melville [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Melville devotes a chapter to the law of the whale — fast-fish and loose-fish — turning the property doctrine into philosophy: "What are the Rights of Man and the Liberties of the World but Loose-Fish?" (Ch. 89). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1851 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry states the royal-fish doctrine (head to the king, tail to the queen); Melville's chapter is literally about the law of property in whales. The quote is verbatim to my confidence and within the one-to-two-line limit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

WIDOW

[Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility, 1811]

Who. Jane Austen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Sense and Sensibility opens on the legal precarity of widows: Mrs. Dashwood and her daughters displaced from Norland because the estate passes to the eldest son — the widow's dower-and-jointure world this entry describes. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility, 1811. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WIDOW, p. 1227; scan anchor: djvu line 205006 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1811 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the widow and her incidents (jointure, quarantine, the king's widow); the novel opens on exactly the widow's position under the inheritance law — dispossessed by the heir. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WILL

[Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1852–53]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Jarndyce will in Bleak House — generations of construction litigation that devour the entire estate in Chancery costs — the testamentary instrument as an engine of litigation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, Bleak House, 1852–53. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WILL, p. 1227; scan anchor: djvu line 205081 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1852 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the will as the legal expression of wishes for post-death disposition; the Jarndyce will is the archetypal fictional will — contested until nothing remains. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WILLFULLY

[Fyodor Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866]

Who. Fyodor Dostoevsky [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Raskolnikov's deliberate murder of the pawnbroker in Crime and Punishment — the willful act, proceeding from a conscious motion of the will, intending the result that comes to pass, and the torment of having intended it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Fyodor Dostoevsky, Crime and Punishment, 1866. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WILLFULLY, p. 1228; scan anchor: djvu line 205195 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1866 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines willfully as intentionally, required to be pleaded for certain offenses; the novel is the anatomy of the willful criminal act and its aftermath. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WITCHCRAFT

[Arthur Miller, The Crucible, 1953]

Who. Arthur Miller [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The Salem trials in The Crucible — witchcraft as a capital offense on spectral evidence. John Proctor's refusal to sign a false confession: "I have given you my soul; leave me my name!" (Act 4). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Arthur Miller, The Crucible, 1953. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WITCHCRAFT, p. 1229; scan anchor: djvu line 205317 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1953 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the capital offense of witchcraft under the Henrician and Jacobean statutes; the play is the definitive dramatization of a witchcraft prosecution. The Proctor line is verbatim to my confidence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

WORK-HOUSE

[Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Dickens's parish workhouse — the poor-law institution that raises Oliver Twist; the workhouse boy's rebellion in a single sentence: "Please, sir, I want some more." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WORK-HOUSE, p. 1231; scan anchor: djvu line 205675 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1838 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the work-house as the place where paupers are confined and kept at labor; Oliver's upbringing there is the archetypal fictional workhouse. The quote is verbatim to my confidence. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quotation or direct depiction drawn from the cited work, carried as verbatim in the phase data [basis: phase-data verbatim status]

YEOMAN

[Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales, c. 1400]

Who. Geoffrey Chaucer [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Chaucer's Canterbury pilgrims include the Yeoman — the Knight's servant, the freeholding rank below gentleman — the social order this entry describes, in its native literary setting. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

When. 1400 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines the yeoman as a commoner freeholder under the rank of gentleman, qualified for juries; Chaucer's Knight's Yeoman in the General Prologue is the genuine literary instance of the rank. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

YOUNGER CHILDREN

[Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility, 1811]

Who. Jane Austen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Dashwood daughters in Sense and Sensibility — "younger children" displaced by the eldest son's inheritance under primogeniture, daughters though they are, and disinherited for it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility, 1811. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry YOUNGER CHILDREN, p. 1237; scan anchor: djvu line 206659 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1811 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Distinct from the WIDOW annotation (the widow's precarity): this targets the entry's own phrase — children not entitled to the rights of an eldest son, expressly including daughters. The Dashwood sisters are the fictional instance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

YULE

[Charles Dickens, A Christmas Carol, 1843]

Who. Charles Dickens [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Dickens's Christmas — the Yule season as the time of reckoning and redemption, Scrooge's conversion on Christmas Eve — the season this entry names, in its definitive fiction. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Charles Dickens, A Christmas Carol, 1843. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry YULE, p. 1237; scan anchor: djvu line 206671 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1843 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Thinnest accept of the pass, flagged honestly: the entry is a bare seasonal definition and the Carol illuminates the season culturally rather than a legal doctrine. Admitted because Yule-as-season is cultural content and the Carol is the definitive Yule fiction. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

ZEALOUS WITNESS

[Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960]

Who. Harper Lee [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) The Ewells' testimony for the prosecution in To Kill a Mockingbird — partial, eager, and dismantled on cross-examination — the zealous witness manifesting "an eager readiness to tell anything" for the side that called him. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Harper Lee, To Kill a Mockingbird, 1960. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ZEALOUS WITNESS, p. 1238; scan anchor: djvu line 206704 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1960 [basis: year carried in the citation]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Why. Distinct from VERDICT (the decision) and VIVA VOCE (the oral form): this targets the entry's exact concept — the witness's partiality for the calling side. The Ewells are the fictional instance. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

WIFE’S EQUITY

[Henrik Ibsen, A Doll's House, 1879]

Who. Henrik Ibsen [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. (paraphrase) Nora Helmer's forged loan in A Doll's House — a wife who cannot borrow in her own name, contracting in secret because the law gives her no standing — the married woman's property disability that the wife's equity was equity's answer to. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Henrik Ibsen, A Doll's House, 1879. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WIFE’S EQUITY, p. 1227; scan anchor: djvu line 205050 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1879 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The entry defines equity's intervention to secure provision for the wife out of her own property; the play dramatizes the underlying disability — the wife's lack of independent contracting capacity — that made the doctrine necessary. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

AMENDMENT

[2Pac, 'Changes', 1998]

Who. 2Pac [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "It's time for us as a people to start makin' some changes / Let's change the way we eat, let's change the way we live / And let's change the way we treat each other" — Black's defines an amendment in legislation as a modification or change made to a bill or an enacted law. The bridge of 'Changes' is a mass demand for exactly that: changes aimed at the legal order itself, as the verse names the target ('Instead of war on poverty they got a war on drugs / so the police can bother me'). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2Pac, 'Changes', 1998. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry AMENDMENT, p. 65; scan anchor: djvu line 11267 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1998 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The lyric's word 'changes' is the headword's very definition doing political work — a formal change to law — and the song's subject is legal/social reform, not a coincidental word match. Verbatim wording verified across multiple independent lyric sources before quoting. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

ANTENUPTIAL

[Kanye West, 'Gold Digger', 2005]

Who. Kanye West [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "If you ain't no punk holla, 'We want prenup' / 'We want prenup!', yeaah" — Black's: antenuptial settlements are settlements of property 'made before and in contemplation of the marriage.' The verse prescribes exactly that instrument as the defense against a marriage that strips assets: 'It's somethin' that you need to have / 'Cause when she leave yo' ass, she gon' leave with half.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Kanye West, 'Gold Digger', 2005. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ANTENUPTIAL, p. 73; scan anchor: djvu line 12679 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2005 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The chant names the precise legal instrument the headword defines — an antenuptial (prenuptial) agreement — and the surrounding lines explain its function (asset protection on dissolution). Verbatim wording verified across multiple independent lyric sources. Genuine contract/money link. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

ARREST

[KRS-One, 'Sound of da Police', 1993]

Who. KRS-One [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Woop-woop! That's the sound of da police" / "The officer has the right to arrest" — Black's defines arrest as the seizing of a person 'by lawful authority,' the beginning of imprisonment. The track is a street-level anatomy of that authority: what it sounds like approaching, who holds it, and its lineage ('officer from overseer'). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: KRS-One, 'Sound of da Police', 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry ARREST, p. 88; scan anchor: djvu line 15077 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The second quoted line names the legal term directly and the chorus scores the approach of the power the term describes. Both lines verified verbatim across multiple independent lyric sources. Genuine power/resistance link to the headword's core meaning. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CASH

[Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993]

Who. Wu-Tang Clan [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Black's defines cash as 'ready money; whatever can be used as money without being converted into another form' — the circulating medium. The hook is hip-hop's definitive statement that money, as that medium, governs all: 'Cash rules everything around me.' [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CASH, p. 174; scan anchor: djvu line 29589 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain iconic lyric; the legal sense (cash as the immediate, circulating medium of exchange) matches the lyric's sense exactly — no force-fit. Added because the line genuinely illuminates cash's power as legal tender in the culture that coined the acronym. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

CENSURE

[Ice-T, 'Freedom of Speech', 1989]

Who. Ice-T [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Censure is formal disapproval or condemnation by authority — public, moral, and reputational rather than penal. Ice-T's track was written directly against the PMRC/parental-advisory censorship campaign, the era's organized official condemnation of rap; the chorus answers institutional disapproval with the constitutional claim itself. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Ice-T, 'Freedom of Speech', 1989. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CENSURE, p. 0 (page anchor suspect — Brick 21 §D); scan anchor: djvu line 30803 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1989 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain chorus; the song is the genre's direct, historically documented answer to an organized campaign of official condemnation. Genuine link: the track exists because of censure, and answers it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CHILDREN

[Slick Rick, "Children's Story", 1988]

Who. Slick Rick [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The law's subject here is the minor — persons of tender years. Slick Rick's track is framed as a bedtime story told to children and proceeds as a crime-doesn't-pay cautionary tale: the genre's canonical song spoken directly to minors about the law's consequences. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Slick Rick, "Children's Story", 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CHILDREN, p. 197; scan anchor: djvu line 33502 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verbatim-certain opening lines; the song's explicit framing as a children's story makes the legal-minority link genuine rather than forced — it is narrated TO children about criminal consequences. Added for that framing, not for the word 'children' alone. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

COLOR OF LAW

[KRS-One, 'Sound of da Police', 1993]

Who. KRS-One [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Woop-woop! That's the sound of da police! / Woop-woop! That's the sound of the beast!" — the track's whole thesis is that the badge carries the appearance of lawful authority while operating as the plantation overseer ("officer from overseer"), i.e. the semblance of legal right without its substance. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the song is hip-hop's canonical statement of exactly what the term defines: authority that wears the uniform of law while lacking its substance. Hook verified verbatim against multiple lyric sources; the overseer/officer verse was also confirmed and supports the link. Genuine conceptual match, not a word-match. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

COLORED

[N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "And not the other color, so police think / They have the authority to kill a minority" — Ice Cube's verse names skin color outright as the trigger for the state's exercise of lethal authority, giving the dictionary's cold American usage of "colored" its lived content: the word as a sorting mechanism for who the law protects and who it polices. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry COLORED, p. 218; scan anchor: djvu line 37058 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric explicitly invokes color as the basis on which legal authority is turned against a person, which is precisely what the entry documents — the American legal usage of "colored" as a racial designation. Verbatim wording and attribution confirmed against multiple lyric sources before quoting; no paraphrase. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

COMBAT

[LL Cool J, 'Mama Said Knock You Out', 1990]

Who. LL Cool J [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "I'm gonna knock you out / Mama said knock you out" — the hook of a battle record (aimed at Kool Moe Dee): hip-hop's battle tradition is ritualized combat, the duel transposed to the mic, a modern trial by battle where the contest itself renders the verdict. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: LL Cool J, 'Mama Said Knock You Out', 1990. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry COMBAT, p. 50 (page anchor suspect — Brick 21 §D); scan anchor: djvu line 37099 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1990 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the entry's own definition includes "a battle; a duel. Trial by battle," and the MC battle is literally called a battle — verbal combat as a formal contest. The track is a documented diss/battle record, so the link runs through the song's actual function, not just the word "knock out." Hook verified verbatim. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

COMPOS MENTIS

[Cypress Hill, 'Insane in the Brain', 1993]

Who. Cypress Hill [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Insane in the membrane / Insane in the brain" — stated honestly as illumination by negation: the term marks the legal threshold of soundness of mind ("use and control of one's mental faculties"), and the hook is vernacular for standing on the wrong side of that line. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Cypress Hill, 'Insane in the Brain', 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry COMPOS MENTIS, p. 234; scan anchor: djvu line 39760 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added with the by-negation relationship stated plainly rather than implied: the lyric names the absence of the compos-mentis state, which throws the term's boundary into relief. Caveat recorded: the song's "insane" is intoxication-talk, not a clinical or legal claim, so this is the weakest of the five — the red pen may strike it. Hook verified verbatim (order: membrane, then brain). [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

CONFINEMENT

[Grandmaster Flash and the Furious Five, 'The Message', 1982]

Who. Grandmaster Flash and the Furious Five [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "It's like a jungle sometimes / It makes me wonder how I keep from goin' under" — the song is hip-hop's canonical portrait of the inner city as a cage: confinement with no bars, held in place by poverty ("Got no money to move out, I guess I got no choice / I tried to get away but I couldn't get far"). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Grandmaster Flash and the Furious Five, 'The Message', 1982. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CONFINEMENT, p. 243; scan anchor: djvu line 41392 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1982 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the entry expressly provides that confinement "may be by either a moral or a physical restraint" — the song documents the moral/circumstantial kind, restraint without walls. Genuine illumination of the definition's own breadth, not a stretch. Chorus verified verbatim against musicology and lyric sources. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

COURT

[N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Right about now, N.W.A. court is in full effect / Judge Dre presiding." The track stages a complete mock courtroom — judge, prosecuting attorneys, sworn testimony, verdict — putting the police department itself on trial. Black's court is the forum where justice is administered; N.W.A. seize that forum and reverse who stands judged, the foundational hip-hop statement of courtroom-as-resistance. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry COURT, p. 284; scan anchor: djvu line 48273 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verified verbatim against multiple independent lyric transcriptions (Music Gateway lyrics page, core.ac.uk academic paper quoting the intro, Spin, tailem all agree). Genuine link: the intro literally convenes a court — names the judge, the case caption, the prosecuting attorneys — and the whole track is a trial with testimony and verdict, directly illuminating COURT as the adjudicatory forum. Added because the track IS a court proceeding, not a passing mention of the word. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

CURRENCY

[Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993]

Who. Wu-Tang Clan [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Cash rules everything around me, C.R.E.A.M. / Get the money; dollar, dollar bill, y'all." Black's defines currency as coined money and circulating paper that passes hand to hand as the medium of exchange; Method Man's hook is hip-hop's definitive statement that this medium governs — rules — everything around it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry CURRENCY, p. 308; scan anchor: djvu line 52301 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verified verbatim against multiple independent lyric sources (Wikipedia, Hip Hop Wiki, HipHopGoldenAge lyric transcriptions agree on the hook wording). Genuine link: the entry's legal content is money-as-medium-of-exchange; the lyric illuminates exactly that function — currency's governing power over commerce and survival. Added because the match is substantive (medium-of-exchange concept) rather than mere word overlap. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

DOLLAR

[Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993]

Who. Wu-Tang Clan [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lyric (hook): "Cash rules everything around me, C.R.E.A.M., get the money, dollar dollar bill y'all." Black's defines the dollar as the United States' unit for calculating money values; the hook names the dollar bill verbatim and repeatedly as the very object the song is about — money's rule over everything around the speaker. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DOLLAR, p. 387; scan anchor: djvu line 65400 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric is verbatim-certain (one of the most quoted hooks in hip-hop), correctly attributed, and directly illuminates the entry: the legal unit of money value is the song's named subject. No force-fit — the word 'dollar' appears in the lyric itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

DRUNK

[Beyoncé ft. Jay-Z, 'Drunk in Love', 2013]

Who. Beyoncé ft. Jay-Z [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lyric (hook): "Drunk in love." Black's defines 'drunk' as being so far under the influence of liquor that the passions are visibly excited or judgment impaired; the song takes that intoxicated state as its central image and title, the word appearing verbatim in the repeated hook. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Beyoncé ft. Jay-Z, 'Drunk in Love', 2013. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry DRUNK, p. 399; scan anchor: djvu line 67579 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2013 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the hook is verbatim-certain and the legal term names exactly the state the lyric invokes — intoxication as the song's governing condition. Genuine link, not wordplay: the entry's

EMPLOYMENT

[Kanye West, 'Spaceship', 2004]

Who. Kanye West [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. I've been working this grave shift and I ain't made shit / I wish I could buy me a spaceship and fly. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 2004 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Lyric is verbatim-certain in my memory (the song's signature couplet, widely quoted). Genuine link: EMPLOY/EMPLOYMENT is the legal relation of hiring for compensation, and 'Spaceship' narrates exactly that relation from below — labor sold, nothing made. Added under EMPLOYMENT (the condition the song narrates), not duplicated under EMPLOY. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

EQUAL

[Outkast, 'Rosa Parks', 1998]

Who. Outkast [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Ah ha, hush that fuss / Everybody move to the back of the bus. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Outkast, 'Rosa Parks', 1998. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry EQUAL, p. 431; scan anchor: djvu line 72774 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1998 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Lyric is verbatim-certain in my memory (the song's most famous couplet). EQUAL = 'on the same plane or level with respect to... rights.' The bus-seat demand IS that definition made concrete; the Rosa Parks reference makes the equal-rights link explicit rather than decorative. Filed here under EQUAL (one lyric, one headword) rather than duplicated under EQUALITY. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

When. 2012 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Lyric is verbatim-certain in my memory (the chorus hook). Genuine link: the song exists to demand equal rights for gay people, mapping one-to-one onto the headword's definition. No force-fit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Lyric is verbatim-certain in my memory (among the most-quoted lines in hip-hop). Genuine, not decorative: the song's project is the equal dignity of Black people, which is the substantive core of equality as a legal-moral concept. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

When. 2013 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Lyric is verbatim-certain in my memory (the song's opening lines, widely quoted). Genuine link: the couplet names the concrete regime of unequal rights that the legal concept of equality was built to abolish. Kept to the two certain lines; no further quotation attempted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the song's subject is falsehood as the entry defines it: published untruth intended to deceive (false media, hype). The hook is not decorative — it is the song's thesis, a standing instruction to disbelieve known-untrue assertions. Verified verbatim across multiple lyric sources.  All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

When. 2004 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric names exactly what the entry defines: family as a collective body of relations (the song gathers cousins, grannies, the locked-down and the gone), and the second line extends the body to members who cannot be present — matching the entry's wider sense of 'all the relations who descend from a common ancestor.' When. 1997 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the entire song is an enactment of the entry's definition: the male parent speaking to his begotten child, taking up the father's office (protection, provision, moral instruction). FEAL

[Kendrick Lamar, 'DNA.', 2017]

Who. Kendrick Lamar [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. I got loyalty, got royalty inside my DNA [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 2017 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because FEAL is defined as 'faithful and loyal' — the oath-word of allegiance — and the lyric renders loyalty as constitutional, carried in the blood rather than merely promised. The feudal oath made faithfulness a condition of the holding; Kendrick makes it a condition of the self. Verified verbatim across multiple lyric sources. When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric names the felony (murder) and, more importantly, the posture of the accused receiving it: the charge as something 'given.' Black's FELONY centers on conviction and its consequences; the song dramatizes the charge landing on a man. Verified verbatim across multiple lyric sources. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

FETTERS

When. 2004 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because 'shackled' is the exact vernacular equivalent of the entry's 'chains or shackles for the feet... irons used to secure the legs of convicts.' The song is a first-person account of the confinement fetters secure. Verified verbatim via Shazam lyric transcription. (Note: my first-recalled hook wording was wrong — 'They got me locked up' — and was struck during verification; the verse line verified clean.) FEUD

[The Notorious B.I.G., 'What's Beef?', 1997]

Who. The Notorious B.I.G. [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. What's beef? Beef is when you need two gats to go to sleep [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: The Notorious B.I.G., 'What's Beef?', 1997. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FEUD, p. 493; scan anchor: djvu line 83084 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1997 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because this is the strongest definitional match in the chunk: the entry defines FEUD (Saxon/old German sense) as enmity/private war, and the entire song is a point-by-point definition of beef-as-private-war ('your moms ain't safe up in the streets,' 'guaranteed to be in ICU'). When. 1999 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric is a direct interrogation of an individual's finances — revenue in, obligations out — which is the entry's second sense ('the revenue or wealth of an individual'). The verses itemize maxed cards, bad credit, and unpaid bills: finances as lived. Verified verbatim across multiple lyric sources. [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1986 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the hook's form — 'fight for your right' — is the vernacular shape of the folc-right: a right belonging to the people, asserted against authority (parents, teachers, the order of the house). Honest caveat: the song is satirical teen rebellion, so the link is to the claiming of a common right, not to any solemn legal content. Verified verbatim across multiple lyric sources. [Kanye West, 'Power', 2010]

Who. Kanye West [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. No one man should have all that power [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Kanye West, 'Power', 2010. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FORCE, p. 608; scan anchor: djvu line 85751 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2010 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric is a direct gloss on force-as-power: it treats concentrated power as inherently dangerous ('the clock's tickin''), which is the moral the legal term carries in its 'unlawful or wrongful action' coloring. Verified verbatim across multiple lyric sources. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

FORCIBLE ENTRY

[The Notorious B.I.G., 'Kick in the Door', 1997]

Who. The Notorious B.I.G. [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Kick in the door, wavin' the .44 [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: The Notorious B.I.G., 'Kick in the Door', 1997. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FORCIBLE ENTRY, p. 509; scan anchor: djvu line 85849 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1997 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric maps onto the entry's elements one-for-one: breaking open doors (kicking the door), with arms (wavin' the .44), with menace/force against the occupant's will. The strongest element-match in the batch. Verified verbatim via Shazam transcription and cross-checked. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

FORETHOUGHT FELONY

[2Pac, 'Hail Mary', 1996]

Who. 2Pac [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. I ain't a killer, but don't push me [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2Pac, 'Hail Mary', 1996. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FORETHOUGHT FELONY, p. 511; scan anchor: djvu line 86333 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1996 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added as illumination-by-negation, stated plainly: the law requires a previous design for forethought felony; the lyric denies possessing one, attributing any killing to being pushed (provocation) instead. The denial only makes sense against the legal distinction between premeditated and provoked killing — which is the term's whole content. Verified verbatim across multiple lyric sources. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

FORTIS

[Kanye West, 'Stronger', 2007]

Who. Kanye West [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. That that don't kill me can only make me stronger [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Kanye West, 'Stronger', 2007. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FORTIS, p. 516; scan anchor: djvu line 87107 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2007 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric is a direct one-line gloss on fortis: strength proven by endurance, 'staunch and strong' as the entry's fuller phrase has it ('strong and sound'). Verified verbatim across multiple lyric sources. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

FORTUNA

[The Notorious B.I.G., 'Juicy', 1994]

Who. The Notorious B.I.G. [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. When I was dead broke, man, I couldn't picture this [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: The Notorious B.I.G., 'Juicy', 1994. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FORTUNA, p. 517; scan anchor: djvu line 87158 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1994 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because 'Juicy' narrates a reversal of fortune in the classical sense: the wheel turning from poverty to riches, with the quoted line marking the moment the turn becomes visible. The entry's 'fortune' is exactly this rise-and-fall power. Verified verbatim across multiple lyric sources. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

FOUNDATION

[Drake, 'Started from the Bottom', 2013]

Who. Drake [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Started from the bottom, now we're here [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Drake, 'Started from the Bottom', 2013. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FOUNDATION, p. 518; scan anchor: djvu line 87344 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2013 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added with explicit caveat: the technical sense (endowment of an institution) is not what the lyric describes. What the lyric does genuinely capture is the vernacular core the legal term rests on — the foundation as the starting point, the bottom from which the building rises ('now my whole team... here,' the team as the structure built on it). Included because the caveat is stated, not hidden. Verified verbatim across multiple lyric sources. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

FREEDOM

[Black Star, 'Thieves in the Night', 1998]

Who. Black Star [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Not strong, only aggressive / Not free, we only licensed [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Black Star, 'Thieves in the Night', 1998. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry FREEDOM, p. 523; scan anchor: djvu line 88292 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

When. 1998 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because (1) the two quoted lines are verbatim-certain and open Mos Def's verse on the track; artist, track, and year are certain (Mos Def & Talib Kweli Are Black Star, 1998); (2) the 'licensed vs. free' distinction genuinely illuminates the entry's definition — 'not free, we only licensed' maps directly onto 'absence of restraint' and 'self-determination' — rather than merely rhyming with the word 'freedom'; (3) no force-fit: the lyric is doing definitional work on liberty itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

HOMICIDE

[Snoop Dogg, 'Murder Was the Case', 1994]

Who. Snoop Dogg [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The song is a first-person account of being charged with murder; the hook frames homicide as 'the case' the state brings. Lyric: "Murder was the case that they gave me" [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Snoop Dogg, 'Murder Was the Case', 1994. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry HOMICIDE, p. 676; scan anchor: djvu line 97169 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1994 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine link: Black's defines HOMICIDE as 'the killing of one human being by the act, procurement, or omission of another' — and the song treats murder precisely as the criminal charge ('the case') arising from such a killing, the state's prosecution. The quoted hook is verbatim-certain, one of the most widely quoted lines in hip-hop, and the attribution (Snoop Dogg, 'Murder Was the Case', 1994) is correct. All other criminal-law candidates in this chunk (HUSH-MONEY, HUNG JURY, IMPRISONMENT, IMMUNITY, IMPEACHMENT, HOUSEBREAKING, HUE AND CRY) were declined for lack of a verbatim-certain lyric; HOMICIDE is the sole survivor of the anti-hallucination bar. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

INJUSTICE

[N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Fuck the police comin' straight from the underground / A young nigga got it bad 'cause I'm brown [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry INJUSTICE, p. 628; scan anchor: djvu line 105600 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine link, not decoration: the track is about the denial of justice by the legal apparatus itself, which is exactly the entry's subject. The two quoted lines are verbatim-certain (the song's iconic opening). Added because the lyric genuinely illuminates the term through the well's own named themes of resistance and justice; the courtroom framing deepens rather than stretches the fit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

JAIL

[Akon, 'Locked Up', 2004]

Who. Akon [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. I'm locked up, they won't let me out [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Akon, 'Locked Up', 2004. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JAIL, p. 660; scan anchor: djvu line 111050 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2004 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine link: the song is literally about incarceration, and the quoted line states the fact of

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

confinement that the entry defines. One verbatim-certain line quoted (the iconic chorus refrain). Added because the lyric genuinely illuminates the term rather than merely sharing its vocabulary. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

JU8TITIA

[2Pac, 'Changes', 1998]

Who. 2Pac [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "I see no changes, wake up in the morning and I ask myself / Is life worth livin'? Should I blast myself?" — the entry's bare "Justice" given its human content: the song is a demand for social justice that opens on justice's absence. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2Pac, 'Changes', 1998. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JU8TITIA, p. 684; scan anchor: djvu line 115089 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1998 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Justitia as the lived condition, not the abstraction. The lyric indicts the gap between justice promised and justice delivered — "I see no changes" — and the entry's own maxims ("justice is to be denied to none") supply the standard the song finds unmet. Genuine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

JUDGE

[N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Right about now, N.W.A. court is in full effect / Judge Dre presiding" — the track stages a complete mock trial, "in the case of N.W.A. vs. the Police Department," with Dr. Dre presiding as judge, swearing witnesses and keeping order. The community the courts usually judge seizes the judge's office for itself. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The lyric does not merely name a judge; it performs the judge's office as the entry defines it — the officer appointed to preside and administer the law in a court of justice, charged with control of proceedings. Genuine illumination, turned inside out: who presides is the whole point. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

JUDGMENT

[2Pac, 'Only God Can Judge Me', 1996]

Who. 2Pac [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Only God can judge me, is that right? / Only God baby, nobody else, nobody else" — against the entry's "official and authentic decision of a court of Justice," Shakur reserves the office of judgment to God alone and voids every human court's claim on him. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2Pac, 'Only God Can Judge Me', 1996. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JUDGMENT, p. 604 (page anchor suspect — Brick 21 §D); scan anchor: djvu line 111764 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1996 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The lyric is a direct theological counter-claim on the very office the entry defines: who has standing to render judgment. The legal judgment is the court's final determination of rights; the song denies that standing to all courts but one. Genuine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

JURY

[N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "The jury has found you guilty of being a redneck, white bread, chicken shit motherfucker" — the mock trial's verdict. The jury, per the entry sworn "to inquire of certain matters of fact, and declare the truth upon evidence," delivers its finding, with the community in the jury box and the police in the dock. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JURY, p. 674; scan anchor: djvu line 113482 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. This is the jury's defining act — the verdict — performed in the song's inverted courtroom. Genuine and verbatim-verified across multiple lyric sources; quoted whole per the verbatim rule. Flagged for the red pen: profanity-dense, quoted only because the discipline is verbatim-or-nothing. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

JUS

[Run-DMC, 'King of Rock', 1985]

Who. Run-DMC [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Got the right to vote and will elect" — jus as "a right": the lyric names a concrete one, the citizen's suffrage, claimed in the same breath as the demand for respect. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Run-DMC, 'King of Rock', 1985. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry JUS, p. 675; scan anchor: djvu line 113628 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1985 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The Latin entry's operative sense ("also a right") made specific. Voting is the citizen's jus in its most recognizable form; the lyric claims it outright. Genuine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

KING

[Nas, 'If I Ruled the World (Imagine That)', 1996]

Who. Nas [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "If I ruled the world, imagine that / I'd free all my sons, I love 'em, love 'em, baby" — the MC imagines himself sovereign and exercises the sovereign's defining prerogative: freeing the bound, the pardon power turned toward the incarcerated. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Nas, 'If I Ruled the World (Imagine That)', 1996. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry KING, p. 687; scan anchor: djvu line 115615 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1996 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine sovereignty link: kingship as the power to liberate. The "sons" are the imprisoned (confirmed in scholarship on the track); the fantasy of rule is exercised as emancipation — the king's highest executive act. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LEGACY

[JAY-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017]

Who. JAY-Z [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Few years later, that shit worth eight million / I can't wait to give this shit to my children" — a plain-English statement of testamentary intent: property accumulated precisely to be bequeathed to the next generation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: JAY-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LEGACY, p. 707; scan anchor: djvu line 118849 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2017 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Matches the entry's "bequest or gift of personal property" — the testator's mind in the artist's own words: buy, hold, appreciate, and give to the children. Verbatim-verified across multiple lyric sources. Genuine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LEGISLATION

[Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "We got to fight the powers that be" — the entry's "act of giving or enacting laws"; the lyric names the law-giving powers as the adversary to be fought. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LEGISLATION, p. 710; scan anchor: djvu line 119376 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1989 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Legislation viewed from below: the powers that enact the laws are "the powers that be," and the song's whole posture is resistance to them. Genuine as a resistance link; a different line from the same track than the LIBERTAS annotation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

LIBERATION

[Kendrick Lamar, 'Alright', 2015]

Who. Kendrick Lamar [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Do you hear me, do you feel me? We gon' be alright" — the entry's civil-law formula is "he who was bound becomes free." The hook became the anthem of a movement against the bondage of police violence; the verses name the bondage the hook answers. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Kendrick Lamar, 'Alright', 2015. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LIBERATION, p. 721; scan anchor: djvu line 121331 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2015 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Liberation as the bound becoming free, sung as collective assurance. The song's verses name the chains ("we hate po-po, wanna kill us dead in the street"); the hook is the promised release. Genuine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LIBERI

[2Pac, 'Brenda's Got a Baby', 1991]

Who. 2Pac [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Brenda's got a baby, but Brenda's barely got a brain / A damn shame, the girl can hardly spell her name" — the entry's civil-law "Children": Brenda is twelve, a child bearing a child; the lyric makes the legal category concrete — the minor as both child and mother. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2Pac, 'Brenda's Got a Baby', 1991. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LIBERI, p. 721; scan anchor: djvu line 121337 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1991 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Borderline but genuine: the song gives the abstract legal subject "children" a human face the law must classify — minority, capacity, protection. Flagged honestly as thematic illustration of the legal subject, not a doctrinal claim about the entry. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

LIBERTAS

[Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Our freedom of speech is freedom or death" — libertas as "an inestimable thing": the lyric prices freedom of speech at life itself. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LIBERTAS, p. 721; scan anchor: djvu line 121344 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1989 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Direct echo of the entry's own maxim, "Libertas inestimabilis res est" — liberty is above price. The lyric states the price anyway: everything. Genuine. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

LOCK-UP HOUSE

[Akon, 'Locked Up', 2004]

Who. Akon [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lyric: "Locked up, they won't let me out / They won't let me out, I'm locked up." Black's defines a lock-up house as "a place used temporarily as a prison"; the chorus names the lock-up from the inside — the jail as the place they won't let you out of. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Akon, 'Locked Up', 2004. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LOCK-UP HOUSE, p. 785; scan anchor: djvu line 123766 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2004 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Direct lexical and experiential match: the song is built around confinement in the lock-up, which is exactly what the legal term denotes. Verbatim-certain chorus. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LOYAL

[Chris Brown, 'Loyal', 2013]

Who. Chris Brown [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lyric: "These hoes ain't loyal." Black's LOYAL includes "faithful in one's political relations; giving faithful support"; the hook is the era's shorthand for breached fidelity — the lyric names the duty of loyalty by its violation. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 2013 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine because the word is used in its ordinary fidelity sense that the legal definition rests on, and the line's cultural ubiquity makes it the clearest hip-hop statement of what loyalty-as-duty means when broken. Verbatim-certain hook; not forced because the sense matches. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

LOYALTY

[Kendrick Lamar, 'DNA.', 2017]

Who. Kendrick Lamar [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lyric: "I got, I got, I got, I got / Loyalty, got royalty inside my DNA." Black's LOYALTY is "faithfulness to one's prince or sovereign"; Kendrick pairs loyalty with royalty, making fidelity a constitutive, inherited trait of the person. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Kendrick Lamar, 'DNA.', 2017. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LOYALTY, p. 740; scan anchor: djvu line 124588 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2017 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Verified verbatim via lyric sources (Shazam/NPR); genuine lexical match in the legal sense (faithfulness/allegiance), elevated by the loyalty/royalty wordplay that ties fidelity to sovereignty. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

LUCRE

[Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993]

Who. Wu-Tang Clan [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lyric: "Cash rules everything around me / C.R.E.A.M., get the money / Dollar dollar bill, y'all." Black's LUCRE is "gain in money or goods; profit"; C.R.E.A.M. (Cash Rules Everything Around Me) is hip-hop's canonical statement of money as motive and master. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Direct definitional match: the acronym unpacks to the same claim the legal term makes about gain. Verbatim-certain chorus; no stretching required. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

LUCRI CAUSA

[Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993]

Who. Wu-Tang Clan [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lyric: "Cash rules everything around me / C.R.E.A.M., get the money / Dollar dollar bill, y'all." The phrase means "for the sake of lucre or gain" — the intent element in larceny; the song's thesis is gain as the ruling motive of action. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry LUCRI CAUSA, p. 741; scan anchor: djvu line 124698 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The lyric states the mental state the Latin phrase names: action done for the sake of gain. Same verbatim-certain chorus as LUCRE, applied here to the motive/intent sense rather than the noun sense. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

MAGISTRATE

[N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lyric: "Right about now, N.W.A court is in full effect / Judge Dre presiding in the case of N.W.A. versus the police department." Black's American sense of magistrate is an inferior judicial officer presiding over a court; the track opens with exactly that figure — "Judge Dre presiding." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MAGISTRATE, p. 746; scan anchor: djvu line 125278 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The song stages a magistrate at work — a presiding judicial officer opening a proceeding. Genuine illustration of the office; verbatim-certain opening skit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

MAGISTRATE'S COURT

[N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lyric: "Right about now, N.W.A court is in full effect / Judge Dre presiding in the case of N.W.A. versus the police department." The skit stages a full proceeding — court in session, named parties, prosecuting attorneys, presiding judge — hip-hop's most famous staged tribunal. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MAGISTRATE'S COURT, p. 746; scan anchor: djvu line 125331 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine illustration of the court itself (distinct from MAGISTRATE, which carries the officer): the track performs a courtroom from gavel to verdict. Verbatim-certain opening skit. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

MALADMINISTRATION

[YG feat. Nipsey Hussle, 'FDT', 2016]

Who. YG feat. Nipsey Hussle [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Lyric: "Fuck Donald Trump, yeah / Fuck Donald Trump, yeah." Black's MALADMINISTRATION is "wrong administration"; the track is a direct, on-record hip-hop denunciation of a sitting administration. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: YG feat. Nipsey Hussle, 'FDT', 2016. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry MALADMINISTRATION, p. 749; scan anchor: djvu line 126037 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2016 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine: the song's entire subject is the wrongness of an administration — maladministration as protested by the governed. Verbatim-certain chorus. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

When. 1994 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine link: the song is a first-person narrative of being charged with murder; lyric verbatim-certain. Variant entries (MOERDA, MORTH, MORTHLAGA, MORTHLAGE, MURDRUM, MURTHRUM) deliberately left bare — one annotation per concept. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine link: the title hook is verbatim-certain and the song's subject is identity by name; the legal entry is precisely about designation. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

OPPRESSION

[Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Chuck D's hook names the same power Black's defines as the oppressor — public authority inflicting injury under color of office — and answers it with organized resistance. The song is the genre's definitive anti-oppression anthem. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OPPRESSION, p. 866; scan anchor: djvu line 143677 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1989 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Black's 2e defines OPPRESSION as the misdemeanor of a public officer who 'under color of his office, wrongfully inflicts upon any person any bodily harm, imprisonment, or other injury.' The quoted

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

line is verbatim-certain and names the oppressive 'powers' directly; the link is genuine illumination, not decoration. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

OWNERSHIP

[Jay-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017]

Who. Jay-Z [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The lyric is a meditation on OWNERSHIP as Black's defines it — complete dominion and title in a thing, held to the exclusion of others, appreciating under the owner's hand — framed as the path to financial freedom and generational transfer. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jay-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry OWNERSHIP, p. 866; scan anchor: djvu line 145300 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2017 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Black's 2e: OWNERSHIP is 'the complete dominion, title, or proprietary right in a thing or claim' — 'the right of one or more persons to possess and use it to the exclusion of others.' Jay-Z's artwork lines describe exactly that right in action: buying title, holding it, watching it appreciate. Verbatim-certain, genuinely illuminating. PATROLMAN

[N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. The patrolman is the street-level face of the police force — the private in the ranks walking the beat — and this track is hip-hop's canonical statement on policing, opening with a direct address to that figure. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PATROLMAN, p. 882; scan anchor: djvu line 148007 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Black's 2e defines PATROLMAN as 'a policeman assigned to duty in patrolling a certain beat or district,' 'generally a private in the ranks.' The opening line of 'Fuck tha Police' names the police from the street's vantage; the link to the beat-walking patrolman is direct and genuine. Verbatim-certain. How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

POISON

[Bell Biv DeVoe, 'Poison', 1990]

Who. Bell Biv DeVoe [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Poison / Never trust a big butt and a smile [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Bell Biv DeVoe, 'Poison', 1990. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry POISON, p. 907; scan anchor: djvu line 152398 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1990 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added as a genuine metaphoric extension of the legal/toxicological concept: the song's title is the legal term, and its content (a seductive destroyer) maps exactly onto 'inherent deleterious property'. Borderline by construction; the metaphor is the link, not word-sharing. Hook line verbatim-certain. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

POLICE

[N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Fuck the police, coming straight from the underground / A young nigga got it bad 'cause I'm brown [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry POLICE, p. 909; scan anchor: djvu line 152432 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric names the police directly as an institution and the relation of the policed to it — a genuine illumination of the legal term's administrative function, not a shared-word coincidence. The line is verbatim-certain; the rest of the verse is not quoted. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

POWER

[Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. We got to fight the powers that be [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry POWER, p. 922; scan anchor: djvu line 154693 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1989 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because 'the powers that be' is the idiom for institutional authority, exactly the legal sense of power the entry defines. The chorus is verbatim-certain; quoting the hook only. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric, bridged to the definition by the worker's note [basis: phase data carries lyric + bridge note]

PRESS

[Public Enemy, 'Don't Believe the Hype', 1988]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Don't believe the hype." The entry's metaphorical sense is the press as the aggregate of publications, and 'liberty of the press' as a protected freedom. Public Enemy's anthem is hip-hop's canonical statement on press power — the press manufacturing belief — voicing the citizen's counter-posture to that power: where the liberty is exercised, hype is manufactured, and the listener is warned not to swallow it. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Public Enemy, 'Don't Believe the Hype', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRESS, p. 934; scan anchor: djvu line 156871 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the track is a genuine illumination of the press's power inside 'liberty of the press' — the freedom's shadow. The lyric is verbatim-certain and the link is to the term's actual subject (press power), not a pun. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PRISON

[2Pac, 'Changes', 1998]

Who. 2Pac [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "The penitentiary's packed, and it's filled with blacks." Black's defines the prison coldly — a public building for confinement as punishment or in the course of justice. 2Pac's line fills the definition with the lived demographic fact the legal language omits: hip-hop's one-sentence indictment of mass incarceration, naming who the building is packed with. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

Where. Cited source: 2Pac, 'Changes', 1998. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRISON, p. 939; scan anchor: djvu line 157837 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1998 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric is directly about the prison as an institution and illuminates the entry's abstract definition with the concrete reality of who is confined — a genuine correlation on justice and power, not a word-match. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

PRISONER

[Public Enemy, 'Black Steel in the Hour of Chaos', 1988]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "They wanted me for their army or whatever / Picture me givin' a damn, I said never." The entry: one deprived of liberty, kept in confinement against his will. The track narrates a draft refusal and the cell that follows — the human path into the legal status of prisoner, the prisoner of conscience. The quote carries the refusal; the song carries the consequence. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Public Enemy, 'Black Steel in the Hour of Chaos', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PRISONER, p. 941; scan anchor: djvu line 157893 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the song inhabits the entry's exact legal status — becoming a prisoner through refusal of state command — showing how the definition is lived. Verbatim-certain lyric, genuine link to the term. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

PROCURER

[50 Cent, 'P.I.M.P.', 2003]

Who. 50 Cent [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "No Cadillac, no perms, you can't see / That I'm a motherfuckin' P-I-M-P." The entry defines the procurer plainly: a pimp, one that procures. The track is hip-hop's most famous first-person inhabitation of exactly that legal role — the statute's subject speaking in his own voice. (Profanity retained verbatim; bowdlerizing would falsify the quote.) [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 50 Cent, 'P.I.M.P.', 2003. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROCURER, p. 951; scan anchor: djvu line 159619 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2003 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the link is definitional: the entry IS the pimp, and the lyric is the pimp's own self-declaration, verbatim-certain. Genuine illumination of the role the law punishes. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

PROSECUTION

[N.W.A., 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A. [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "In the case of N.W.A. versus the police department / Prosecuting attorneys are MC Ren, Ice Cube, and Eazy-motherfuckin'-E." The entry: a criminal proceeding before a competent tribunal to determine guilt or innocence. The track stages exactly that — court convened, Judge Dre presiding, prosecuting attorneys named — with accuser and accused inverted: the police stand trial. Hip-hop's most famous dramatization of a prosecution, illuminating the term by asking who gets to be the prosecution. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A., 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PROSECUTION, p. 968; scan anchor: djvu line 160882 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric stages a literal prosecution (caption, tribunal, prosecuting attorneys named) — it is about the proceeding itself, not merely adjacent. Verbatim-certain; the inversion is the illumination. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

PURSUIT OP HAPPINESS

[Kid Cudi, 'Pursuit of Happiness (Nightmare)', 2009]

Who. Kid Cudi [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "I'm on the pursuit of happiness and I know / Everything that shine ain't always gonna be gold." The entry (constitutional law): the right includes personal freedom, exemption from oppression, following one's individual preference. Cudi takes the Declaration's exact legal phrase as title and hook, then documents the pursuit as lived and hollowed — chased through excess, never arriving. The right's shadow: the pursuit is guaranteed, the arrival is not. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Kid Cudi, 'Pursuit of Happiness (Nightmare)', 2009. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry PURSUIT OP HAPPINESS, p. 968; scan anchor: djvu line 162501 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2009 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the song bears the entry's exact legal phrase and genuinely engages it — a cultural echo showing the pursuit as striving without attainment. Verbatim-certain lyric; real correlation, not wordplay. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

QUO WARRANTO

[N.W.A., 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A. [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "And not the other color so police think / They have the authority to kill a minority." The writ lies against one who usurps an office, franchise, or liberty, commanding him to show by what warrant he exercises it. The lyric names the usurped authority under challenge — police power over Black life — and the track answers the writ's question by putting the police themselves on trial. Hip-hop's quo warranto: by what warrant does the badge kill? [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A., 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry QUO WARRANTO, p. 983; scan anchor: djvu line 164825 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric directly names the authority that quo warranto would call to account, and the song performs the writ's function (summoning usurped power to show its warrant). Verbatim-certain; genuine, not forced. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REBELLION

[Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Quote: "Fight the power!" — Public Enemy's chorus is hip-hop's canonical call to organized resistance against governmental and cultural authority, voicing the headword's 'deliberate, organized resistance to the laws or operations of the government' as a direct command. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REBELLION, p. 994; scan anchor: djvu line 166483 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1989 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric is verbatim-certain and the track is the genre's definitive rebellion

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

anthem; the imperative 'fight' maps directly onto Black's 'resistance… to the laws or operations of the government.' No forcing: the song's subject is rebellion itself. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REFORM

[2Pac, 'Changes', 1998]

Who. 2Pac [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Quote: "We gotta make a change / It's time for us as a people to start makin' some changes" — 2Pac's chorus voices reform in its living sense: the correction of a broken order. Black's primary application is equitable reformation of instruments, but the headword's lead definition ('to correct, rectify, amend, remodel') is exactly what the lyric demands. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2Pac, 'Changes', 1998. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REFORM, p. 1004; scan anchor: djvu line 168379 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1998 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the chorus is verbatim-certain and 'make a change' genuinely illuminates 'to correct, rectify, amend.' The note honestly marks the gap between Black's equitable-instrument sense and the lyric's societal sense rather than pretending they are identical. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REGULATE

[Warren G ft. Nate Dogg, 'Regulate', 1994]

Who. Warren G ft. Nate Dogg [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Quote: "Regulators, mount up!" — Warren G's 'regulators' are the street's rule-setters and enforcers, the hip-hop mirror of the legal regulator: those who prescribe the terms by which the game 'shall be governed' and ride out to enforce them. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Warren G ft. Nate Dogg, 'Regulate', 1994. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REGULATE, p. 1009; scan anchor: djvu line 169030 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1994 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the thesis line is verbatim-certain and the track (titled 'Regulate') is built on the regulator figure; the street-level mirror genuinely illuminates the headword's rule-prescribing sense without overclaiming identity between the two. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RELIGION

[Kanye West, 'Jesus Walks', 2004]

Who. Kanye West [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Quote: "God show me the way because the Devil's tryin' to break me down" — the thesis line of hip-hop's most famous profession of faith, voicing lived religion (a system of faith contended with daily) rather than doctrine on a page. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 2004 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the line is verbatim-certain and 'Jesus Walks' is the genre's landmark faith statement; it illuminates Black's 'system of faith and worship… practised' as practice under pressure. Genuine link, no forcing. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RESIST

[Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Quote: "Fight the power!" — the imperative IS the verb: opposition by direct action voiced as command. Black's RESIST 'properly describes an opposition by direct action and quasi forcible means' (State v. Welch); the chorus commands exactly that. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RESIST, p. 1027; scan anchor: djvu line 172021 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1989 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric is verbatim-certain and the imperative maps one-to-one onto the headword's verb sense. Assigned to RESIST (verb) while REBELLION carries the same song for the organized-uprising sense; each headword gets its own tailored note. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RESISTANCE

[Gil Scott-Heron, 'The Revolution Will Not Be Televised', 1970]

Who. Gil Scott-Heron [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Quote: "The revolution will not be televised" — Scott-Heron, hip-hop's acknowledged forefather, states resistance as lived street action rather than spectacle: the ACT of resisting, which is precisely the headword ('the act of resisting opposition'). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Gil Scott-Heron, 'The Revolution Will Not Be Televised', 1970. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RESISTANCE, p. 1027; scan anchor: djvu line 172027 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1970 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the line is verbatim-certain and it illuminates resistance-as-act, distinct from Public Enemy's imperative (assigned to RESIST/REBELLION). Scott-Heron is in-well as the genre's foundational spoken-word voice, sampled across the canon; the fit is to the noun's 'act of resisting,' not forced. RESISTING AN OFFICER

[N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988]

Who. N.W.A [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Quote: "Fuck the police" — N.W.A's chorus, from a track staged as a mock trial of the police, is the culture's definitive statement of opposition to law enforcement in the discharge of its duties. Quoted verbatim and unbowdlerized per the brief; the lyric is what it is. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: N.W.A, 'Fuck tha Police', 1988. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RESISTING AN OFFICER, p. 1027; scan anchor: djvu line 172034 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the chorus is verbatim-certain and the track's entire premise (putting police on trial) is opposition to peace officers 'in the lawful discharge of duty' — the headword's exact subject. Two witnesses retained (see KRS-One) because each adds a distinct facet. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RESISTING AN OFFICER

[KRS-One, 'Sound of da Police', 1993]

Who. KRS-One [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Quote: "Woop-woop! That's the sound of da police!" — KRS-One's thesis (police-as-overseers) supplies the ideological ground of that opposition: why the officer is resisted, not merely that he is. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: KRS-One, 'Sound of da Police', 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RESISTING AN OFFICER, p. 1027; scan anchor: djvu line 172034 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added as the second witness on RESISTING AN OFFICER: verbatim-certain hook, and it illuminates the motive-structure behind the offense rather than duplicating the N.W.A defiance. Genuine, distinct, no forcing. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

REVENUE

[Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993]

Who. Wu-Tang Clan [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Quote: "Cash rules everything around me / C.R.E.A.M., get the money / Dollar, dollar bill, y'all" — hip-hop's definitive statement on the pursuit of money-as-revenue; the acronym itself names the rule that revenue governs conduct. Black's extends 'revenue' to individual income, which is exactly the song's subject. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry REVENUE, p. 1034; scan anchor: djvu line 173123 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the hook is verbatim-certain and the track is the genre's canonical money song; Black's 'income of an individual' sense maps cleanly onto the lyric's subject. No forcing. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RIGHT

[Beastie Boys, '(You Gotta) Fight for Your Right (To Party!)', 1986]

Who. Beastie Boys [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Quote: "You gotta fight for your right to party!" — the track treats partying AS a right worth fighting for: pop culture's most literal enactment of Black's concrete sense of a right as 'a power, privilege… a claim or title' asserted against opposition. The humor is the point, not a defect — it shows how 'right' functions as claimed entitlement. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1986 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the chorus is verbatim-certain and the song's entire premise is the assertion of a claimed right; it genuinely illuminates the headword's concrete sense. Assigned to the general RIGHT headword only, not the seven specific-rights entries that follow it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

RIGHT OF PROPERTY

[Jay-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017]

Who. Jay-Z [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. Jay-Z frames property ownership — who holds title to land and how — as the durable store of wealth, a direct hip-hop restatement of the abstract right of property as complete title. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jay-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry RIGHT OF PROPERTY, p. 1040; scan anchor: djvu line 174111 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2017 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Lyric is verbatim-certain and explicitly about land/property ownership as wealth ('own all the property'), which genuinely illuminates the 1910 definition: the abstract right of property in land that, united with possession, constitutes complete title. SLANDERER

[Public Enemy, "Don't Believe the Hype", 1988]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Don't believe the hype!" — Black's: a slanderer "maliciously and without reason imputes a crime or fault to another of which he is innocent." The track is Public Enemy's answer to false press narratives about the group — a rebuttal to slanderers — and the hook instructs the listener's defense: disbelieve false public imputations. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 1988 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The song's subject is literally defamation — false public claims imputing faults to persons; the hook is verbatim-certain. It genuinely illuminates the act of slandering and the defense against it. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

SLAVE

[Jay-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017]

Who. Jay-Z [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Rich nigga, poor nigga, house nigga, field nigga / Still nigga, still nigga" — Black's defines the slave as one "wholly subject to the will of another... under the power of a master." Jay-Z's hook names the plantation typology directly (house nigga, field nigga) and lands on "still nigga": the claim that the condition of total subjection persists regardless of wealth or status. SLAVE-TRADE

[Kanye West, 'New Slaves', 2013]

Who. Kanye West [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "You see it's leaders and it's followers / But I'd rather be a dick than a swallower" — Black's: "the traffic in slaves, or the buying and selling of slaves for profit." "New Slaves" argues the trade continues in modern form: consumerism, coercive contracts, and the prison-industrial complex ("They tryna lock niggas up, they tryna make new slaves"; "I know that we the new slaves"). The refrain is the refusal of the follower's — the slave's — role. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

When. 2013 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. The song's entire thesis is that the slave trade's logic (buying and selling human beings for profit) persists in new institutions; the quoted refrain states the refusal of that subjection. SOMERSETT'S CASE

[Jay-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017]

Who. Jay-Z [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Light nigga, dark nigga, faux nigga, real nigga / Rich nigga, poor nigga, house nigga, field nigga / Still nigga, still nigga" — Somersett's Case (1772) held slavery had no basis in English common law: the legal landmark of abolition. Jay-Z's "still nigga" coda is the counter-landmark — the legal declaration of freedom did not end the condition of subjection. The juxtaposition illuminates what the case settled (legal status) and what it could not (lived freedom). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jay-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry SOMERSETT'S CASE, p. 1007; scan anchor: djvu line 183546 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2017 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Distinct from the SLAVE annotation: here the lyric illuminates the case's limits, not the definition's content — legal abolition versus emancipation as an unfinished condition. A genuine thematic counterpoint, not decoration. Wording verified verbatim against multiple lyric sources. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

Who. KRS-One [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Woop-woop! That's the sound of da police!" — Black's: sovereignty is "supreme political authority... the self-sufficient source of political power." KRS-One's track figures that coercive authority as the police, explicitly linking the officer to the plantation overseer; the hook names the audible signature of sovereign force. Who. The Notorious B.I.G. [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "When it's time to eat a meal, I rob and steal" — Black's: "steal" "denotes the commission of theft." The verse states motive and act plainly: robbery and theft as subsistence ("'Cause mom dukes ain't giving me shit / So for the bread and butter I leave niggas in the gutter"). What. "When I die, fuck it, I wanna go to hell / 'Cause I'm a piece of shit, it ain't hard to fucking tell" — Black's: suicide is "the willful and voluntary act... to accomplish the result of self-destruction." The track is a first-person narration of suicidal ideation — the willful contemplation of self-destruction, ending in the act itself. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Fight the power!" — Black's: "The highest authority in a state, all other powers in it being inferior thereto." The song is a direct address to that highest authority — resistance to supreme power, from Elvis to John Wayne to the system itself. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

TENDER

[Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993]

Who. Wu-Tang Clan [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Cash rules everything around me / C.R.E.A.M., get the money / Dollar dollar bill, y'all." — hip-hop's cash-rule doctrine stated over the dollar bill itself: money as the medium offered and accepted in payment, which is exactly what a tender is (Black's: "an offer of money" in satisfaction of a claim). [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Wu-Tang Clan, 'C.R.E.A.M.', 1993. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TENDER, p. 1143; scan anchor: djvu line 191198 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1993 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric is verbatim-certain and names the very instrument of tender — cash, the dollar bill — while stating its ruling function as the medium of payment. The link is definitional, not decorative: tender IS an offer of money, and the chorus is about money as the offered/accepted medium. The "Paid in Full" lyric was assigned to UNITED STATES NOTES instead, since "dead presidents" fits the federal note's portrait iconography more precisely. TERRITORY

[Nas, 'The World Is Yours', 1994]

Who. Nas [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "The world is yours, the world is yours / It's mine, it's mine, it's mine." — the chorus states a claim of universal dominion in the vernacular: the world claimed three times over as "mine." Territory is ground subject to a jurisdiction — a claim of "mine" over land; the lyric is that claim at maximum scale. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Nas, 'The World Is Yours', 1994. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TERRITORY, p. 1147; scan anchor: djvu line 191945 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1994 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric is verbatim-certain and performs a territorial claim (jurisdiction-by-assertion: "it's mine"). Chose TERRITORY over TERRA because the entry's operative concept is jurisdiction/dominion over ground, not the physical earth. Honest flag: the fit is thematic (dominion) rather than definitional — the entry's American-law sense is narrower — but the chorus genuinely illuminates what a territorial claim sounds like. TESTAMENT

[Jay-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017]

Who. Jay-Z [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Financial freedom my only hope / Fuck livin' rich and dyin' broke." — a testament is a disposition of property to take effect at death; it presupposes an estate. The verse states the precondition as creed: do not die with nothing to dispose of. The track's arc (buy art, let it appreciate, pass it to his children) is the testamentary motive in full. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Jay-Z, 'The Story of O.J.', 2017. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TESTAMENT, p. 1148; scan anchor: djvu line 192086 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2017 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric is verbatim-certain and illuminates the economic precondition of testation: "dyin' broke" is dying with no estate, hence nothing for a testament to operate on. Honest flag: thematic rather than definitional — but the verse's intergenerational transfer ("give this shit to my children") is precisely the purpose wills exist to serve. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

THREAT

[2Pac, 'Hail Mary', 1996]

Who. 2Pac [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "I ain't a killer but don't push me / Revenge is like the sweetest joy next to gettin' pussy." — a textbook conditional threat: a declared purpose to work injury ("revenge") held back only by the addressee's restraint ("don't push me"), matching Black's "declaration of one's purpose or intention to work injury to the person... of another." [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: 2Pac, 'Hail Mary', 1996. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry THREAT, p. 1164; scan anchor: djvu line 193052 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1996 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the lyric performs exactly what the entry defines — a communicated intent to injure — and is verbatim-certain. Deliberately NOT placed on THREATENING BETTERS: that entry is specifically about threatening letters, and this lyric is spoken, not written. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

TYRANNY

[Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989]

Who. Public Enemy [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Fight the power." — two words compressing hip-hop's canonical resistance anthem against arbitrary, despotic exercise of power. Black's tyranny is "the severe and autocratic exercise of sovereign power"; the track is the vernacular command to resist exactly that. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Public Enemy, 'Fight the Power', 1989. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry TYRANNY, p. 1180; scan anchor: djvu line 197480 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1989 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the track's entire posture is resistance to oppressive rule (state, media, cultural power) and the hook is verbatim-certain. Assigned to TYRANNY (the system) rather than TYRANT (the person), because "the power" denotes the structure, not an individual ruler. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

UNITED STATES NOTES

[Eric B. & Rakim, 'Paid in Full', 1987]

Who. Eric B. & Rakim [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. "Thinkin' how could I get some dead presidents." — "dead presidents" names United States paper money by the portraits printed on it (Washington, Lincoln, Jackson...); the verse is a broke man's meditation on acquiring federal notes — the very promissory notes of the government that Black's describes. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: Eric B. & Rakim, 'Paid in Full', 1987. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry UNITED STATES NOTES, p. 1186; scan anchor: djvu line 198406 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1987 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Added because the slang "dead presidents" unambiguously denotes U.S. paper currency and the lyric is verbatim-certain. The link is literal, not thematic: the entry defines the government-issued notes, and the lyric names them by their faces. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

 All Rights Reserved, Without Prejudice

How. By quoted lyric carried at the head of the worker's note, bridged to the definition after the dash [basis: note opens with the quoted lyric and the bridge separator (no separate lyric field in phase data)]

VISA

[M.I.A., 'Paper Planes', 2007]

Who. M.I.A. [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'If you catch me at the border I got visas in my name' — the visa as the official indorsement examined at the border, carried in the lyric exactly as the legal term functions: a document certified in due form, presented to cross. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: M.I.A., 'Paper Planes', 2007. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry VISA, p. 1210; scan anchor: djvu line 202228 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 2007 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine link: the legal term VISA is an official indorsement upon a passport certifying it examined and in due form; the lyric is literally about presenting visas at a border crossing. Verbatim-certain (third verse of 'Paper Planes', widely quoted). M.I.A. is shelved under hip-hop (rap verses, Diplo production) — genre-adjacency noted honestly. The lyric illuminates the term's real-world operation, not a homonym. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric

WEALTH

[The Notorious B.I.G. feat. Puff Daddy & Mase, 'Mo Money Mo Problems', 1997]

Who. The Notorious B.I.G. feat. Puff Daddy & Mase [basis: citation, leading author/artist segment]

What. 'It's like the more money we come across / The more problems we see' — wealth as the aggregate of things contributing to comfort and enjoyment, carrying its own burden; the hook states wealth's double edge, which is the lived content of the legal term. [basis: the insert's own text, verbatim, in its printed form]

Where. Cited source: The Notorious B.I.G. feat. Puff Daddy & Mase, 'Mo Money Mo Problems', 1997. Host locus: Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd edition (1910), entry WEALTH, p. 1224; scan anchor: djvu line 204540 [basis: citation + host entry record (entries.json)]

When. 1997 [basis: year carried in the citation]

Why. Genuine link: WEALTH is the aggregate of material things of exchange-value contributing to comfort and enjoyment; money is explicitly in the phase's theme list. The hook is one of hip-hop's most quoted, verbatim-certain statements about wealth. The lyric illuminates the concept (wealth's paradox) rather than merely rhyming with the word. [basis: the phase worker's recorded reasoning — the edition's original Why, carried verbatim]

How. OPEN — phase data carries no separable lyric
